PREFACE TO VOL. II.

THE first Volume of this work was devoted especially to what may be called the personal history of Caxton, and therein all original documents associated with the Name or History of our Prototypographer, were gathered into a connected biography; special attention being directed to the Year when, the Place where, and the Printer from whom, Caxton took his first lessons in the Art and Craft of Printing.

The present Volume consists of two principal parts—the first being a dissertation on printing as practised by Caxton, founded upon a critical examination of his workmanship; and the second a bibliographical and literary account of every production of his Press at present known to exist.

In the former portion, the Reader's attention is drawn to several particulars hitherto unrecorded, such as a complete synopsis of every fount of letter used by Caxton, with an Alphabet of each, including all the single, double, and triple letters, signs, contractions, &c.—the chronological sequence traceable in the various founts of letter—and many evidences of the practices adopted in the workshops of the Papermaker, Typefounder, Compositor, Pressman, and Bookbinder. To these is added an Annual Account of the number and extent of the works issued from the press at Westminster between the years 1476—92.

The second portion embraces a much wider field, as all the known works of Caxton are there treated seriatim. As to the consecutive order of the books to be described three modes were open to me. There was the old plan, adopted by former Writers, of beginning with all the books bearing the date of either translation or imprint in their order, and following with the books without date in unclassified sequence. This seemed to me a very defective method. Again there was the purely chronological order. In this the books without printed dates might have been arranged, according to the periods indicated by their workmanship, in conjectural order of time with those having the date of their imprint in colophon or elsewhere. The third was to divide the books into classes according to the types with which they were printed. This last arrangement has advantages peculiarly its own, added to which such classification is almost identical with chronological order; hence it has been adopted here. Thus, all the works printed with the types used by Caxton in Bruges are placed together, as are those printed with the various founts which every two years, or thereabouts, furnished his Printing-house in Westminster.

In every bibliographical catalogue it is of great importance to be systematic in arrangement and accurate in statement. Neither of these attributes can be ascribed to the Typographical Antiquities of Dr. Dibdin, which, notwithstanding the Doctor's free access to the collections of George III and Earl Spencer, frequently contain vague and incorrect descriptions. The errors indeed are so numerous that corrections of the most important only have been specially noticed in the following pages. The system adopted by me is—First, to give the Collation; Secondly, the Typographical Particulars; Thirdly, the literary evidence of ancient Manuscripts; followed by, Fourthly, Remarks thereon; and Fifthly, a list of Existing Copies and Sale Prices. The design of each head is as follows:—

The Collation.—Here the precise number of sections is given (with their signatures, if any), as well as the number of printed and blank leaves requisite to a perfect book as issued by Caxton.

Typographical Particulars.—These include the first few and last few lines in the book and other matters useful in identification. Many Readers may think this portion needlessly particular, but minute typographical research is by no means a matter of idle or trivial curiosity : by its aid many questions of bibliographical interest can be definitely settled. Bibliographers have not, apparently, recognised the important fact that every work has an individuality, and needs but a careful physiognomical examination to reveal the date of its birth. As an instance, the three editions by Caxton of Earl Rivers's Dictes and Sayings of the Philosophers may be quoted. They all bear the same date of imprint, 1477, yet the typographical evidences prove beyond all doubt that one edition only was produced in that year—that the second must have been about three years later, and the third about 1489.

Manuscripts.—In all questions concerning the date and authorship of old works contemporary manuscripts are the only reliable sources of information, and under this head will be found a short account of such ancient manuscripts of each work as have been recognised among the collections of the British Museum, or described by M. Paulin Paris, in his “Manuscripts de la Bibliothèque Royale de Paris.”

Remarks.—Under this head will be found many deductions as to the literary history of particular works, founded upon the previous statements.

Existing Copies and Sale Prices.—These two divisions have been the most laborious part of my work, although not without a recompense in the shape of amusement as well as utility. Only by a diligent comparison of copies, supposed to be the same, can various editions and peculiarities be made known. Out of the 556 volumes of Caxton's printing which are here catalogued, about 500 have passed through my own hands for collation, and I have thus been enabled to distinguish several of Caxton's editions hitherto confounded.

The commercial table of Sale Prices is also not without its interest in enabling the Reader to trace a volume from library to library, and presents in the fluctuating amount paid for the same book an interesting aspect of that curious disease—Bibliomania.

After finishing the bibliographical and literary portion, lists of various ancient and modern libraries in which Caxtons were or are preserved, are appended.

Having now expounded the plan of the work, which, however imperfectly carried out, has been pursued earnestly and conscientiously, I will only add a few words of grateful acknowledgment for valuable assistance.

In the Account of Caxton's types I am greatly indebted to the critical acumen of my friend G. I. F. TUPPER, who has executed all the fac-simile plates, and who first discovered the two states of Type No. 2, and added many rare sorts to the various Alphabets. Upon his notes I have principally founded the Remarks on Caxton's different founts.

To H. BRADSHAW, Esq., of King's College, Cambridge, I owe much for information concerning the true collation of the early unsigned books, as well as for numerous suggestions and critical remarks while many sheets were passing through the Press, specially in the Nos. 11, 27, 41, and 58.

My best thanks are also due to B. BEEDHAM, Esq., of Kimbolton, whose untiring zeal and perseverance added considerably to the head "Existing Copies," and brought many interesting volumes to my notice.

To the present owners of Caxtons, I owe, with few exceptions, my acknowledgments of the kindness with which they have granted my request to inspect their libraries. To the DUKE OF NEWCASTLE, the late EARL SPENCER, EARL CAWDOR, W. TITE, and H. CUNLIFFE, Esqrs., I am under great obligations for allowing books to be taken from their libraries for my use.

To the Librarians of the British Museum I again tender my thanks for numerous favours and privileges granted to me during my researches; to Mr. Bond I am indebted for information concerning the Author of No 5 ("Meditations;") nor can I omit mention of the kindness and fulness with which my inquiries of the Librarians at the principal Home and Foreign libraries have been answered.

CANTON'S PRINTING OFFICE.

CAXTON'S PRINTING OFFICE.

CHAPTER I.

THE MASTER PRINTER.

Site of the Printing Office—Caxton among his Workmen—Their Names—The necessary Division of Labour.

The question of the exact spot upon which England's first Printing Press was established has already been discussed. The well-known Advertisement of Caxton, which stated, that Pies of Salisbury use were on sale at the "Red pale," in the Almonry, Westminster, not only indicates the position but also the Sign by which the house was known. The precise appearance of the Almonry in the 15th Century must be to some extent imaginary, but we know that Almshouses were there, and probably two or three structures besides that occupied by Caxton. One may suppose that, from so long a residence in a walled city like Bruges, Caxton might be led, from old associations, to prefer a residence in a privileged enclosure.

We will now ask the Reader to imagine fourteen years passed since Caxton first began working at his new art. It is not difficult to picture the wooden structures in the Almonry occupied by his sedate but busy workmen. We can look in at yonder window, and see the venerable Master Printer himself "sittyng in his studye where as lay many and dyuerse paunfletis and bookys." The great towers of Westminster Abbey cast their shadow over the room, for he is an early riser and already at work upon his translation of the new French romance, called "Eneydos." The "fayre and ornate termes" of his Author give him "grete plasyr," and he labours, almost without intermission, till the low Sun, blazing from the Western windows, warns him of the day's decline. Again, we watch him passing with observant eye through the rooms where his servants are at work ;—we can see the movements of the Compositors, who, close to the narrow windows, ply their rapid fingers ; we can hear the thud-thud of the wooden presses as the workmen "pull to" and "send home" the "bar," discussing meanwhile the latest news ; and we can sympathise with the Binder, who, hammering away at the volume between his knees, looks in despair at the ever-increasing progeny of his master's art.

PRINTER.
Vol. I, chap. vi.

Prologue to Eneydos,
1480.

PRINTER.

Piles of books and printed "quayers" rise on all sides, and many a wise head is ominously shaken at the foolishness of supposing that so many books can ever find Purchasers. But Caxton pursues still his busy course, with mind and body ever at work, preparing copy for the Press, and guiding and instructing his workmen in that art which he had learned in Bruges at "grete charge and dispense," and the practices of which are to be explained in the following chapters.

WORKMEN.

Of the various workmen employed at the "Red pale" the names of two only—Wynken de Worde and Richard Pynson—have descended to us. The former succeeded to Caxton's Stock in trade, and the latter set up a Press at Temple Bar in 1493, if not earlier. Doubtless there were many others, and some have supposed that Machlinia, Lettou, and Treveris were among the number; but there is no evidence that these Printers were ever reckoned among Caxton's workmen.

What then were the mechanical means by which, during these fourteen years, Caxton had been carrying on his business? Was the process of book-making the same as at present? What sorts of types, and how many founts were used? How were the types made, and what were their sizes? Did the Compositors use upper and lower case, sticks, chases, brass rule, reglets, furniture, and the various appliances of a modern composing room? What were the presses like, and the practices of the Pressmen? And lastly, In what form were Caxton's books issued to the Public? To most of these queries it will seem at first sight as if no definite reply could be given; but if the Reader's attention can be secured while an appeal is made to the books themselves, he will doubtless find in them undesigned, and therefore the most trustworthy, evidence as to many of the technical customs and peculiarities of the early Printers.

DIVISION OF LABOUR.

Before the invention of Printing, the art of Book-making, mechanically considered, was divided into three departments, viz.—the manufacture of the material upon which to write (almost entirely parchment or vellum); the writing and ink making (the Scribe being his own ink maker); and the binding. Illuminators, of course, there were, but they were merely for ornamentation, and by no means necessary to the idea of a book. In monasteries, famous for the diffusion of learning, all these branches were carried on together. It has been the same with Printers, who, from the infancy of their art to the present time, have occasionally, with the exception of paper-making, included everything necessary to a perfect book in one establishment. Were all trades which, directly or indirectly, are called into operation by Printers to be enumerated, few indeed would be omitted: nevertheless, the direct necessities for a book are—the material upon which to print, the types and presses with which to print, and the necessary workmen to use them. THE MASTER PRINTER.

We will, therefore, consider Caxton's books under the following heads :—

The Paper.	The Bookbinder.
The Types.	To these may be added, but not
The Compositor.	as a necessary assistant—
The Press ; the Pressman ; and	The Rubricator ; Illuminator ;
the Ink.	and Wood engraver.

THE PAPER.

Its sizes, qualities, and peculiarities—Watermarks, their symbolism, and the use made of them by Bibliographers—Cost of Paper in the 15th Century.

There is, fortunately, no need here to enter upon the obscure origin of paper manufacture. The latest disquisition on this subject may be seen in the recent work of Mr. Herring. The only question which concerns us is—What kind of paper did Caxton use, and whence did it come? He certainly had several sizes ; the largest, which was probably found too unwieldy, was used only for the first two editions of the "Golden Legend," an uncut copy of which, in the Public Library, Cambridge, gives $22 \times 15\frac{1}{2}$ inches for the full measurement of a whole sheet. The large size of this book was, doubtless, suited to its intended use—the reading aloud to the Congregation in Church assembled. Of smaller sizes Caxton had several, which varied according to the moulds in which the sheets were made, from $18\frac{1}{2} \times 13$ inches to 16×11 inches. THE PAPER.

SIZE.

The quality differed considerably, though not to the extent apparent in the books as they now exist ; chemical "doctoring" and washing, which has in many instances been resorted to for cleansing purposes, having weakened and rotted much of the paper so treated, whilst the untouched specimens remain fibrous and strong. From books still in the original bindings, and apparently untouched, we find that the paper was rough—sometimes very rough—on the surface, with long hairs frequently imbedded, and marks where many more had been removed ; of a strong fibrous texture ; unbleached ; and of a clear mellow whiteness, indicating an absence of colouring matter in the pulp. QUALITY.

The unevenness in thickness and colour to which the manufacture was liable at this early period, appears to have necessitated a sorting of the sheets after coming from the mill ; those nearest to each other in colour and weight being put together. This system of selection was adopted occasionally for single copies, the inducement being, doubtless, economy. When two or three copies SORTING.

THE PAPER. of a book can be compared together this fact is often very evident, as in the two specimens of "The Knight of the Tower" in the British Museum. Here the variation in quality is too great to be accounted for except by selection. Several other instances show that Caxton, on preparing to print a new volume, told off the paper separately for certain copies. This practice of selection also accounts for the astonishing variety of watermarks frequently found in the same volume.

LARGE PAPER COPIES. Some possessors of uncut specimens of Caxtons have imagined them to be what, in modern bibliographical terms, are called "large paper copies," but we have no evidence that Caxton printed special copies, except, perhaps, in the instance of the vellum "Doctrinal," presently to be noticed, the appearance of which, however, gives one anything but the idea of a "livre de luxe."

WATERMARKS. Watermarks have much less weight in bibliography than some Writers have attributed to them. In very few instances can a prime limit be fixed for their use; and, as the marks might be repeated, and the paper itself kept for any length of time, and imported to any place, they cannot be used as evidence either of the date when, or place where, they passed through the press. The Arms of France—3 fleur de lis in the field, the whole surmounted by a crown, which appears as a watermark in "Le Recueil des Histoires de Troye," has been adduced by M. Bernard as evidence of the French origin of the printed work. He was doubtless unaware that the same watermark appears in "The Recuyell,"—"Canterbury Tales," 1st edition,—"Mirrou," 1st edition,—"Jason,"—"Chronicles,"—"Polycronicon,"—"Speculum Vitæ Christi,"—"Dictes," 2nd edition, and many others; including the whole of Caxton's typographical career. When, however, Papermakers represent the initials of a Sovereign, or the Arms of a Nation or a City, we may, in such a case, fairly infer, though not with certainty, the seat of its manufacture. Hence it appears likely that all Caxton's paper was imported from the Low Countries, and, in all probability, was purchased from some old connection in the great mart of Bruges. However obtained, there was certainly a great mixture of qualities, including the make of several mills. I have not yet seen one of Caxton's books in which the same watermark runs through the whole volume, and in many cases the variety is astonishing. Thus in a copy of the 1st edition of the "Canterbury Tales," now in the library of Mr. Huth, there appear no less than 15 distinct watermarks.

See Plate IX,
No. 6.

A few of the marks found in Caxton's books are given in Plate IX. They, as already remarked, indicate the Low Countries, and most of them are found also in the early block books, the works of Colard Mansion, Gerard Leeu, and other early Printers.

No. 1. The Bull's head—appears in the earliest specimens of paper known, and was a favorite symbol with Papermakers of the 14th and 15th Centuries. The varieties are very numerous.

THE PAPER.
WATERMARKS
See Plate IX.

No. 2. The Arms of Jean sans Peur, son of Philippe le Hardi. As eldest son the field is charged with a label. The superimposed cross refers to his crusade in 1395.

This and the seven succeeding marks have a direct connection with the ruling dynasty in Flanders and the Low Countries.

No. 3. The letter p—is very common in Caxton's books, and is doubtless there the initial of Philippe le Bon; although it is probable that paper bearing a p had also been made in the reign of Philippe le Hardi. The varieties are very numerous.

No. 4. The letter p—is the initial of Ysabel, third wife of Philippe le Bon.

Mr. Sotheby, in his list of Caxton's watermarks, mentions the p and p combined, as occurring in the British Museum copy of "Jason." During a careful search, however, in the same copy, I was unable to recognise any approach to such a mark.

Principia Ty-

No. 5. The Unicorn—was a symbol of power adopted by Philippe le Bon, who chose two unicorns as supporters to his coat of arms. The same figure was used extensively as an ornament in his palace and furniture.

No. 6. The Arms of France—were frequently used by Papermakers of the Low Countries, probably in reference to the direct descent of the House of Burgundy from the Kings of France.

No. 7. The Arms of Champagne. Champagne was made over to the Duke of Burgundy in 1430 by the King of France.

No. 8. The hand. Over it is a single fleur de lis, the peculiar badge of the House of Burgundy.

No. 9. The Pope in his chair, holding the keys.

No. 10. The Keys of St. Peter.

These last two marks are very rare in Caxton's books. I have only seen them in "Jason." The paper in which they appear seems to have had a Flemish origin, although the marks themselves are certainly more appropriate to an Italian manufacture. A leaf, undoubtedly Italian in its origin, having as a watermark an anchor in a circle, was recognised by Mr. Sotheby at the beginning of the Grenville copy of Caxton's "Chess Book;" but remarks upon it are rendered superfluous by the fact of it being a fac-simile by Whittaker on a piece of paper from his old stores.

Principia,
vol. iii, p. 84.

THE PAPER. In Caxton's books the p is most common among the watermarks, the order of frequency among other marks being as follows:—The Hand or Glove; the Arms of Champagne; Bull's head; Arms of France; Greyhound; Arms of Jean sans Peur; Shears; a Pot; an Anchor; Unicorn; a Bull; a Cross; Grapes; a Pelican, &c., &c.

WATERMARKS

The Reader curious on this point may see numerous other watermarks portrayed by Mr. Sotheby in the third volume of "Principia Typographica." Many of these are merely variations of the mark, the paper being made in the same mould. An accidental injury, or even the wear and tear of the mould by constant use, often caused a contortion of the wires. In one or two instances I have seen the watermark uninjured in shape, but quite at the edge of the paper. This has been accounted for by supposing the fine wires which held the watermark in its place on the mould to have become loosened by decay, or some accident, and so allowing the mark to slide along the face of the mould, but is more probably caused by the use of large sheets of paper cut down to a smaller size.

VALUE.

Of the value of paper in Caxton's time we may form some idea from the prices paid by the Directors of the Ripoli Press, at Florence, between 1474—1483. An original "Cost book" of this establishment is still extant in the Magliabechi library at Florence, and is one of the most interesting documents connected with early typography.* It has been edited and published by Signor P. Vincenzio Fineschi. From this it appears that nine sizes or qualities of

The elements for reducing Tuscan money of the year 1480 into the approximate English equivalent of this Century are as follows:—The Gold Florin (Fiorino largo) of Tuscany, weighing 53 grains, was less than half the value of the English Rose Noble of Edward IV., which weighed 119 grains. The Florin was equal to 6 lire 2 soldi; the lira to 20 soldi; and the soldo to 12 donari. The Noble was equal to 10 shillings. Money in the 15th Century is calculated to have had about eight times its present purchasing power. The result thus given must be again considerably modified by the rate of exchange, which in 1480 was—Florence 156, against London 100, as we learn from Chiarini's rare tract on Mercantile usages, printed in 1481.

Zanetti quotes a document, dated 1483, which states the price of paper in Florence to have been, at that period, for "Carta reale, quaderni 10... 3lir. 6s 8d;" and for "Carta da scrivere il quaderno... 18 sol.;" that is—Royal paper about 12s 5d per 10 quires, and Writing paper 3s 4½d per quire.

It is somewhat remarkable that Caxton made so sparing a use of vellum for his impressions. If we omit the two Indulgences, printed on small slips of vellum, there remains but one known instance of its use—the "Doctrinal of Sapience," belonging to the Royal library at Windsor. Here the material appears to have been chosen on account of its durability, the volume being meant for ecclesiastical use; which, however, renders it more surprising that our Printer should have been so utterly careless about the quality of his parchment, as this copy may certainly claim not only the distinction of being the unique vellum Caxton, but also of being the very worst in the whole catalogue of books printed on that substance.

have strayed far and wide in the discussion M. Bernard, however, writing as a practical Printer, has done much to dispel numerous misapprehensions, and especially that common error of supposing that the first specimens of moveable types were cut on wood. Nor have we here to determine from whom Caxton learned the art; enough has already been said concerning that. Our present object is to lay before the Reader the earliest notices of Typefounders, and any evidences which may explain the mechanics of typefounding in the 15th Century, especially with reference to the types of Caxton.

Perhaps no part of the Typographic Art is hidden in more settled darkness than the early manufacture of the types. Doubtless considerable secrecy accompanied all the operations of the first Printers, and indeed was maintained down to a late period.* Moreover it was only natural that the effect of the new art should hold a more prominent place in men's minds than the processes by which that effect was produced, and thus, although Printers and Printing were often mentioned, I find nothing concerning the mechanical part of typefounding anterior to that curious little book of trades, which was issued at Frankfort in 1568, with pictorial designs by Jost Amman. The Author, in the few rhymes accompanying the illustration, omits all reference to the process, but, from the wood-cut of the "Schriftgäßer ^{Gemälder}" and his tools, we shall make occasion further on to draw some practical inferences concerning early typefounding in Holland.

Whether Caxton, whose account of his first typographical venture is contained in the prologue to the Third Book of "The Recuyell," made himself acquainted with the manufacture as well as the use of his types there is no evidence to decide. The only account he gives us is, "Therefore I have practysed and lerned at my grete charge and dispense to ordeyne this said book in prynte." If he only procured types and presses, and the requisite knowledge to control their use, it doubtless cost him a considerable sum. The probability is that his first two founts were cast, by his instruction, at Bruges, the second being brought over by him to Westminster. But, when settled in his native Country, we may well question whether he would not, for convenience sake, become his own Typefounder. No stray hint or remark of

* My own experience is curiously illustrative of this. In 1859, wishing, for the sake of illustration, to obtain a sample of an old Punch, Matrix, and Mould, I applied to several of our London Typefounders. If worn out and practically useless, so much the better, as being probably the more ancient on that account. The surprise and downright refusal with which my request was generally met astonished me. I only wanted an article thrown aside by themselves as useless, and yet of scientific value to me. But no! neither should I buy nor take away these mysterious tools, and it was only at last through the kindness of Mr. William Caslon that I obtained my desire.

his can be found to incline us one way or the other. Several generations of THE TYPES. Printers passed away before we find the slightest allusion in any work to English Typefounders. The first appears in Archbishop Parker's preface to "Asser's Chronicle of King Alfred," where, speaking of the Saxon types, in which the book was printed, the Editor states, that as far as he knew, Day, the Printer, was the first to cut them. The sentence is, "Iam verò cum Dayus Typographus primus (& omnium certè quod sciam solus) has formulas æri inciderit: faciliè quæ Saxonice literis perscripta sunt, iisdem typis diuulgabuntur." From this we presume that John Day was only one Typefounder among others, and that therefore the art was by no means a novel one in England at that time. Seventy years later we find Typefounders as a distinct trade in London, and under rigid Government protection. We learn this from the following decree:—

"Decreed by the Court of Starre-Chamber, 11th July, 1637:—

"That there shall be Four Founders of letters for printing and no more.

"That the Archbishop of Canterbury or the Bishop of London, with Six other High Commissioners, shall supply the places of those four as they shall become void.

"That no master Founder shall keep above two Apprentices at one time."

Despite this restrictive care, however, the Typefounders of Holland and Flanders supplied English Printers with better types than native art could produce up to the establishment of the first Caslon foundry.

The only English Author before the rise of Encyclopædias, who described the process of type manufacture was Joseph Moxon. This ingenious Author gives an account of the whole Art of Printing, as practised in an improved style by himself, and devotes several chapters to the various methods of punch cutting, matrix sinking, and type founding. The process then was very similar to that still in use, and differed greatly from that of Caxton, or Caxton's Typefounder: a cursory description will therefore suffice. The practice of Moxon, like that of all modern Typefounders, was to cut each letter in relief on a piece of steel, making the punch—to strike this punch into a small piece of copper, which made the matrix—and to fit this matrix to the bottom of an iron mould into which the liquid metal was poured. The mould, which formed the shank of the type, was capable of a sliding adjustment, widthwise, to the width of the various letters (from an i to an Æ); whilst the depth, or size of the body ever remained the same. Hence, by using each matrix successively in the same mould, exactness in size of body was insured.

THE TYPES.

The want of this exactness, indicated by the uneven appearance of the lines, and other considerations, lead to the conclusion that the 15th-Century Printers did not practise this method.

MANUFACTURE.

It is very difficult even to speculate upon the method employed by the early Printers to produce their types. The examination of many specimens has led me to conclude that two schools of typography existed together. The earlier, and by far the ruder, consisted of those Printers who, practising their art in Holland and the Low Countries, followed the steps of Coster, and who, by degrees only, adopted the better and more perfect methods of the later school, founded in Germany by the celebrated trio—Fust, Guttenberg, and Schæffer. None of these divulged the secrets of their art. One fact, however, we know with certainty, and that is that the German school employed the very best Artists that Europe could produce to cut the patterns (we might perhaps say punches) for their types. In an interesting tract from the pen of Mr. Panizzi we have evidence that the celebrated Painter, Engraver, and Niellist, Il Francia, was the Artist who cut all the Aldine types, the elegance of which has for Centuries associated the name of Aldus with the perfection of printing. From the "Cost book" of the Ripoli Press, at Florence, we find also that steel, iron, and tin were used in the manufacture of types about 1480.* But the English Printers, whose practices seem to have been derived from the Flemish school, were far behind their contemporaries in the art. Their types show that a very rude process of founding was practised, and the use, as will be described presently, of old types as patterns for new, evinces more of commercial expediency than of artistic ambition.

That Caxton's types were indeed cast is evident from identity in the face of the same letter, where even a flaw may be noticed as occurring and recurring continuously; but of what material the matrices were formed must be to a great extent conjectural. M. Bernard has given an interesting account of some successful efforts to cast letters in sand, but his specimen has not a single overhanging letter in it, and, from its size, was certainly much easier to produce than would have been the small types of Caxton; yet in one respect, the "bad lining," or irregular heights of the letter, it has an interesting similitude to Caxton's types. In the office of Messrs. Caslon there were in existence a short time back (in 1859) some large Roman capital letters (about 3-line pica), which an old workman assured me he had himself used in by-gone years to form sand moulds for type, a practice then by no means uncommon.

We will now turn to the little book of engravings already referred to as giving the earliest notice of the art. We there see somewhat of the practices of the Frankfort Typefounders in 1568 (Plate IX A, No. 5). The design shows that even a Century after the invention of the art there was an important difference from the modern plan, although probably the principle of punch, mould, and matrix was the same. There is a small furnace, with the pan of melted metal sunk in the top; by the side are the bellows, basket of charcoal, and tongs. Close to the Typefounder is the bowl into which he drops each type as it is cast; and the Artist has correctly drawn these types with the "break" of the letter still attached. The workman holds the mould in his left hand, and is pouring in metal from a ladle. On the table at his back is what I take to be a nest of very shallow drawers, which hold the matrices in alphabetical arrangement, while upon the top of the drawers are three or four matrices for immediate use. On the wooden shelves opposite are three moulds, some sieves, and crucibles. The sieves were probably for sifting the sand in which might be cast the large types, and in which the small ingots for use in the melting pot would be run. The main interest of this cut lies in the type moulds. In these we notice the difference in shape from those now used; while the absence of the long wire spring which holds the matrix firm up to the mould indicates that, during its use, the matrix was a fixture in the mould. On a shelf in the cut under description, are three moulds, the foremost of them showing in its side a hole which may possibly have been used for the insertion of a matrix.

As the early moulds were so dissimilar to those of modern use let us look to the types themselves for evidence; and (anticipating the result of the analysis of the various founts used by Caxton, which will follow in the proper place) we find the conclusion inevitable that hard-metal punches were not used, and that even types themselves were used either as punches, or in some analogous way for the production of new founts. The use of large types to form matrices in sand (as in the case at Messrs. Caslon's foundry, above alluded to), was not uncommon in bygone years; and that letters of a much smaller size

THE TYPES.

THE TYPES. can also be effectively employed as punches is interestingly illustrated by the shifts to which Benjamin Franklin, America's Pioneer-printer, was put to in the early days of the Transatlantic Press. Franklin thus narrates his own practice :
 " Our printing house often wanted sorts, and there was no letter foundry in America ; I had seen types cast at James's in London, but without much attention to the manner ; however, I contrived a mould, and made use of the letters we had as puncheons, struck the matrices in lead, and thus supplied, in a pretty tolerable way the deficiencies. I also engraved several things on occasion."

THE METAL. The metal of which the types were cast can only be conjectured. The probability is that it was soft, and if even so soft as lead it would have been sufficiently durable to have performed the work for the small impression required of each book. In demonstration of this I caused a fount to be cast for me, by Messrs. Figgins, in unmixed lead, a specimen whereof the Reader may see in the lower half of Plate IX B. I had a page of Caxton's " Chess Book " set up in these leaden types, and worked it, in the usual way, at a common hand press, numbering each impression as it came from the tympan in order to note its gradual wear. The paper was Royal Cartridge of the common rough quality, and I worked it dry. After 500 pulls, perceiving no appreciable wear, I stopped the experiment, being sufficiently satisfied. The types were distributed, and form the greater portion of the plate already referred to.

Our conclusions then, in respect of the founding, are mainly negative. The moulds were unlike those now in use, and the punches were not of steel. The process, whatever it may have been, admitted of contrivances incompatible with our present mode ; and we conjecture that the type-metal, if not of lead, was sufficiently soft to allow of being easily trimmed up. This trimming up, so often visible in Type No. 2*, may have had great effect in misleading the late Mr. Vincent Figgins, the well-known Typefounder, who, when examining the 2nd edition of the " Game and Play of the Chess," came to the erroneous conclusion that the whole book was printed from types cut separately by hand, a conclusion which he would never have adopted had he extended his examination to other works of Caxton in the same types.

Let us now see what the founts of type were that Caxton used.

When we look at the long list of English Authors who have written upon early typography,† and when among the names we recognise those of Moxon, Palmer, Smith, Bowyer, Nichols, Stower, Watson, Johnson, Haunsard, and Timperley, all of whom were, as Printers, practically acquainted with the art which employed their pens, it is a matter of some surprise that nothing like a correct account of Caxton's types has yet appeared. Nor is it less remarkable that the only history of English Typefounders is that by a Clergyman, the Rev. Rowe Mores, who devoted many of the later years of his life to the collection of old moulds and matrices. He purchased all the old stock of the last of the old race of Letterfounders, Mr. James, of Bartholomew Close, whose extensive collection was stated to have accumulated from the days of Wynken de Worde; and it is much to be regretted that, after the death of Mr. Mores, his collections were not preserved. In his dissertation the catalogues of matrices existing in his own day, or in his own possession, are probably exact enough: but his account of the types used by Caxton and Wynken de Worde has scarcely a correct word in it.†

‡ This assertion would not be ventured had not the Reader before him the plainest evidence of the fact. Plate IX C is a scale of Caxton's various types, and beside each is the scale of that modern type to which it is nearest in size. Rowe Mores says of Caxton, at page 4—"And first Mr. Caxton—his letter originally was of the sort called Secretary; and of this he had two founts. Afterwards he came nearer to The English face, and had three founts of Great Primer; a rude one, which he used ann. 1474, another something better, and a third cut about the year 1488 approaching more nearly to The English face—two founts of English or Pica, the latest and best cut about 1482—one of Double Pica, good, which first appears in 1490, and one of Long Primer,—at least nearly agreeing with the bodies which have since been called by those names." The whole of this sentence is very confused, but it appears to mean that Caxton had three founts of Great Primer, two of English or Pica, one of Double Pica, and one of Long Primer. Now Caxton never used any types so large as Double Pica, nor so small as Pica, much less Long Primer, which is two sizes smaller than Pica. The statements of Rowe Mores in this matter are worth refuting, because his authority stands high among Typographical Writers, and the sentence re-printed above from his "Dissertation upon English Typographical Founders and Foundries" has been quoted and re-quoted for nearly a Century in every work on the subject.

THE TYPES.

De l'origine de l'imprimé-rie, vol. II,

If we divide them into character of Letter we find three classes :—

- 1st. Type No. 1 is distinct in character, and unlike any known type. On comparison with a manuscript in the Autograph of Colard Mansion, of Bruges, M. Bernard came to the conclusion that it was formed upon the hand-writing of that celebrated Caligrapher.
- 2nd. Types 2, 2*, 4, 4*, and 6, which are of the same character as the early type of Colard Mansion, known as "gros bâtarde."
- 3rd. Types 3 and 5, designed, like the character of the Bible and Psalter of the early Mentz Printers, upon the Church-Text of the Scribes, and approaching nearer than any other of Caxton's types to what more modern Printers call "black letter."

If, however, we divide the eight founts into distinct cuttings, we find five :—

- 1st.—Type No. 1.
- 2nd.—Type No. 2, modified first into No. 2*, and again into No. 6.
- 3rd.—Type No. 3.
- 4th.—Type No. 4 modified into No. 4* ; and
- Lastly.—Type No. 5.

We will now review separately the different founts of type used by Caxton, both as alphabets and in combination, as shown in Plates XI to XXIV,* the remarks being chiefly compiled from notes made by Mr. Tupper.

TYPE No. 1.

For the Alphabet of the whole fount see Plate XI. For the same in combination see Plate XII.

TYPE No. 1.

Although we believe that Caxton had less to do with this than with any of the later types, yet, as it is the first with which his name is associated—as it is that by using which he obtained a knowledge of the Art of Printing—and as it is the type of the first English-printed book—it certainly is clothed with an interest peculiarly its own.

The books printed with this fount are five :—

The Recuyell of the Histories of Troy.	1472-74
The Game and Play of the Chess, 1st edition. . .	1475-76
Le Recueil des histoires de Troye	1475-76
Les Fais du Jason	post 1476
Les sept Pseaulnes penitenciaulx	post 1476

* I must here acknowledge with great pleasure the interest taken in these plates by their Artist, Mr. G. I. F. Tupper, who, in the course of his labours, discovered several sorts unnoticed by me.

From the rarity of "Les Fais du Jason," only one copy being in England, THE TYPES.
and that inconvenient for prolonged examination, its peculiar features, if any, TYPE No. 1.
are not noticed in the following remarks.

The first thing we observe in Type No. 1 is, that its general appearance is more free and writing-like than could be inferred would be the case from the square-set figure of each individual letter. This is, to a considerable extent, caused by the great variety of letters, there being only five sorts for which there were not more than one matrix, either as single letters or in combination : for, although the differences between the various matrices of the same letter may be very slight, we have here the fundamental principle of freedom, viz., a recurrence of modified sameness.

The execution of the type is good, sharp, and decided ; with sufficient difference between the repetitions of the same letter to indicate independence of tracing or mechanical contrivance ; hence probably the work of one accustomed to cut letters.

The body of the type, which is identical throughout the five books, is the same as the recognised Great Primer of modern Printers. The scale in Plate IX C shows indeed a slight difference from Caslon's Great Primer, but not more so than is often found between bodies of the same name from different foundries.

The complete fount embraced at least 163 sorts, of which we remark upon the following :

THE

ā is not used in the English books, but often occurs in the French books.

th The second specimen of this sort has been found only once. (See the word "machue," which occurs in the 7th line from the bottom of the 24th verso of "Le Recueil.") It is, perhaps, the usual th, with the top of the t broken off.

ſ final (3rd in the line) is not used in the French, but is common in the English books.

ſ final (last in the line). Notice the peculiar angle in the final stroke : this battered letter occurs only at the end of "The Recuyell," and re-appears, here and there, throughout the "Chess Book."

z is not used in "The Recuyell," nor the "Chess Book," but often occurs in "Le Recueil" and "Les sept Pseaumes."

j (5th in the line). This peculiar character appears only a very few times in the third 5^a of "The Recuyell," especially on the 36th recto.

ſ is often used for an ſ in the French books, but always correctly in the English books.

This is a more dashing, picturesque, and elaborate character than that of Type No. 1. It is an imitation of the "Gros-bâtarde" type of Colard Mansion, with some variation in the capital letters, which are extremely irregular, not only in size but in design, some being of the simplest possible construction, whilst others have superfluous spurs, lines, and flourishes.

The general appearance of Type No. 2 is very different from that of No. 2*, many letters in the former having a bolder and thicker face than in the latter; and the fact of there being a perfect division of the books into two distinct classes prevents our attributing this difference to either wear of type or faulty printing; the former of which would be gradual, the latter irregular.

THE TYPES. On comparing the two classes, letter by letter, we find several single and compound letters occurring in one and not in the other. Thus en (not final) is peculiar to the first class, while two forms of k without a loop in the head, double ll without loops, th, wa, we, and wo are found in the second class only. Other letters are so distinctly different that a single example is convincing of their not being printed from the same types; and the remainder, although often very nearly alike, so constantly preserve some peculiar slight characteristic in each section (which could not have been satisfactorily shown by single examples in the plate), that a minute examination of numerous instances, after making allowance for faulty printing, &c., leads to the conclusion that not any of the letters of the first section are absolutely identical with those of the second.

TYPE No. 2.

An accurate examination shows the general fact, that the letters of Type No. 2* are somewhat thinner than those of Type No. 2, and that, in numerous instances, the tops, the descending tails, and the tittles generally, have been truncated. As instances examine the letter f, and its combinations in the two types; the second shows always a thinner-faced letter than the first. Again, notice how the tops of the various d's, the tails of th and in, and the tails generally appear in the second state. Never finding that the two founts (2 and 2*) are mixed; and seeing that all the books dated ante 1479 occur in Type No. 2; and all those dated post 1479 in No. 2*; the two types appear to indicate two periods: and, taking into consideration the peculiarities just noticed, it would seem that, upon the types becoming worn, some of the best were selected, trimmed up with a graver, and used for making matrices for a new casting. If this were not the case how are we to account for the new fount being so nearly like the old? for, the two not being used together, there was no reason for such care to make them match.

The body of Type No. 2 is the same as that of Type No. 2*, and is exactly equal to two lines of "Long Primer" (Caslon's standard), which is very near to "Paragon."

THE ALPHABET.

In the alphabet plate the characters proper to Type No. 2, and not used in No. 2*, are marked with a figure 2; and those proper to No. 2*, and not occurring in No. 2, are marked with a *

A complete fount of Type No. 2 consisted of 217 sorts, and Type No. 2* of 254 sorts, of which we remark upon the following:—

br (6th in the line) has been noticed only in "Moral Proverbs."

cc (15th in the line) does not appear in "Les quatre derrenieres choses."

k Two new letters, as well as the old one with the bow, are used in Type No. 2*.

II (7th in the line). The double I with loops and stroke is not used at all in THE TYPES.
 "Les quatre derrenieres choses."

II (11th in the line). The straight double I with a stroke is only seen in "Cordial." TYPE No. 2.

ij (4th in the line). The final ij appears to be the same as the final j (6th in the line) with the circumflex cut away.

im In a similar way this sort seems to have been made from ini by removing the dots.

ŋ with a stroke (12th in the line). The intention of casting an ŋ without the stroke (13th in the line) from an ŋ with the stroke has been only imperfectly executed, the remains of the stroke being evident in every instance.

wa we wo. These sorts appear only in Type No. 2*.

The 2c of Type No. 1 which, if at all, might have been expected in the first fount used in England, occurs only in books printed with Type No. 2*.

The smaller full point and colon, which are often seen in books of this type, and which in reality belong to Type No. 3, are not given in this plate.

Of the points generally, as of the quadrats and spaces, the same remarks will apply to this as to Type No. 1, excepting that more reserve is here shown in combining the / and full point.

We may notice here that the sorts iz, ez, vr, and others, presume an intended French use of Type No. 2, a probability strengthened by the tf, and the combinations of tw, being later additions to the fount in No. 2*.

After this plate was completed the "Laurentius," at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, discovered by Mr. Bradshaw, yielded 25 new sorts, which have been inserted at the end of their respective lines.

TYPE No 3.

For the Alphabet see Plate XVI. For the same in combination see Plate XVII.

This grand type, which was in use from about 1479 to 1483, has perhaps less direct interest for us than any of the others. No English book in this type is known, and until a very recent period, it was considered merely as a supplementary fount, used by Caxton for headings, &c. But the discovery of a "Psalterium," fragments of a "Hore," and "Directorium" (see post, pages 101 to 105), proves that at least three works were printed entirely with this fount. Upon these, especially the "Psalterium," and upon the headings of "Boethius," "Golden Legend," and "Tully," the following remarks are grounded.

The small letters are an exact copy of those cast by the early German Founders, Fust and Schœffer, and are equally well executed. The capital

THE TYPES. letters, however, are very unlike Fust's, being mostly a modification of the Flemish "Secretary," as already presented to us in the Gros Bâtarde type of Colard Mansion.

TYPE No. 3.

The body is identical, or very nearly so, with Type No. 2, and is used with it to distinguish proper names, &c. in "Cordial," and in "Tully," but, having a much larger face, it is never in line.

The complete fount comprised 194 sorts, of which we remark upon the following:—

THE ALPHABET.

α (12th and 13th in the line). Two patterns (the second probably a re-cast from the first touched up), indicate a demand for this combination. The litanies in the "Horæ," and at the end of the "Psalter" requiring this sort very frequently in the word Sanct. may account for it: notwithstanding the double supply, however, the Compositor appears to have "run out" of both sorts, for separate letters are used in several instances. It is not found in "Directorium," "Boethius," nor "Cordial."

A battered capital Þ of Type No. 2 occurs in the "Psalter" (sig. a 4 recto, 10th line).

An i belonging to Type No. 2* occurs in the same book (sig. a 5 recto, line 2).

A ƿ belonging to Type No. 2* occurs also in the same book (sig. q 2 verso, line 8).

Þ No capital can be found.

The stops generally are smaller than those of Type No. 2, which is remarkable, as the face of the letter is much larger.

That this type was intended for Latin, the contractions sufficiently prove, and all we have in it is in Latin, except headings in the "Golden Legend, 1st edition," &c., and proper names, as in "Cordial" and "Tully." Of the headings, even the most considerable, (those in "Boethius") are in Latin.

This fount, which was used almost entirely for Church Service books, does not seem to have been much in favour with Caxton; but upon his death his successor, Wynken de Worde, came into possession of it, and it appears continually in his early-printed books.

Another casting of this type, but on a somewhat smaller body (gaining 1 in 12) was used by M. Goes, the celebrated Printer, of Antwerp, for the following books:—"Confessionale," "Augustinus de virtute psalmorum," and "Laudivii Equitis Jerosolemitani." In the first there is much of it, but in the last two a few lines only. The use of certain sorts, such as ta and q differing from those which belong to Caxton's fount, but more especially the difference in body, prove that, although mainly from the same original cuttings, the Antwerp and Westminster founts have distinct peculiarities.

TYPE No. 4.

For Type No. 4* in combination see Plate XX.

TYPE No. 4.

Types No. 4 and 4* may be spoken of generally as one, there being the same intimate connection between them as between Nos. 2 and 2*; unlike them, however, there is a slight variation in the body, Type No. 4 being, as compared with the re-casting of it, or Type No. 4*, as 20 is to 19. In other words, the body of Type No. 4 is rather smaller than that of Type No. 4*. This of course is only intentionally possible with modern Typefounders, who use the same moulds and matrices for as many founts of the type as are required; but, as is shown in the chapter on typesetting, the moulds and matrices as now used were unknown in those days.

The execution of the types is neat, and appears to have come from the same hand that cut Type No. 2, but there is this difference between the second states of the two founts—Type No. 2* was, as already shown, cast from matrices formed by the use of old casts of Type No. 2 as punches, after being trimmed by hand. But for both Nos. 4 and 4* there is the strongest evidence of the same punches having been used, and therefore the variation of body is more remarkable, as it is plainly as easy to have made the re-casting agree in size with the original as to make the letters of each fount agree among themselves. The variation, however, is simply a fact.

The body of Type No. 4 is very near indeed to modern English (Caslon's standard), and is the smallest of any used by Caxton. The re-casting, or Type No. 4* (which loses 1 in 20; that is, 19 lines of Type No. 4* take up only the same depth as 20 of Type No. 4) is exactly two lines of Minion. The total number of sorts in Type No. 4 appears to have been 194, and of No. 4* 187, a few sorts not having been re-cast.

We will now give a list of the works for which this type, in its two states, was employed.

In the alphabet plate the distinguishing sorts of the two founts are marked with a small figure * for the first state, and a • for the second, those having no prefix belonging to both. The following are some remarks upon the various letters :—

ALPHABET.

- Œ This capital does not belong to the fount, but is almost identical with the capital Œ of Type No. 5. The second sort is only the first without the stroke, which, however, is not always entirely wanting in Type No. 4*.
- a The second sort, only found in Type No. 4*, is the same as the first, a worn letter having been used for a punch. The last in the line is the contracted ã with the long accent imperfectly removed.
- â This semi-roman character (8th in the line) is evidently foreign to the fount. It bears in shape a strong likeness to the â used by Colard Mansion in his second type, which is common as well to the German School of Typography.

ba in combination (3rd in the line) seems peculiar to Type No. 4*, while ct in combination (4th in the line) seems only to have been used in No. 4.

THE TYPES.
TYPE No. 4.

b The third in the line is the same as the ninth character, with the accent partially removed. The last b is a peculiar character found only in the last line but one of the colophon to "St. Winifred."

cc, cn, ct, cu, cr, cz, fr These double letters are peculiar to Type No. 4, none of them being found in No. 4*.

f The last in the line, appears only once in the same line as the b above noticed.

g The fourth is the same as the fifth, the accent having been removed.

ha The two sorts of this double letter occur in both Types Nos. 4 and 4*.

I and II belong to Type No. 5. They are used in Type No. 4, especially in "Description of Britain" and "Godfrey," but are not found in books printed with Type No. 4*. Now the double letter th, which is altogether wanting in these two books, is found in all the others of both Nos. 4 and 4*.

st The second capital is very rare, but occurs in "Description of Britain."

s The third sort, with the contraction over it, is peculiar to Type No. 4, and the next, which is the same without the ˆ, appears only in No. 4*.

The final s at the end of the line is of the same school as the a and b already noticed, and does not belong to this fount.

th See above, under I.

th The small letter at the end of the line often occurs, but is only the second sort battered.

The commas have a notable chronological bearing. The short comma (,) was used alone up to the 2nd edition of "Chronicles," in 1482—is used occasionally with the long (/) in 1483—and disappears entirely afterwards.

The variation in body between Types Nos. 4 and 4* has already been noticed: a more easily distinguishable feature is the shape of the lower-case m, the letter with the curled top distinguishing the book at once as belonging to Type No. 4, its absence being a sure sign that the Type is No. 4*.

Type No. 4* makes its first appearance among Caxton's founts in a very peculiar manner. In the Autumn of 1483 our Printer was employed on two works, the "Confessio Amantis" and the "Knight of the Tower." At sig. p of "Confessio Amantis" we find that the inmost sheet is in Type No. 4*, the other three sheets of the section being in Type No. 4. Several pages in sig. 3 are also in No. 4*, and on sig. 3 iiij recto the first column is in No. 4, while the second column is in No. 4*. This mixture of founts by no means proves that the two were in use at the same time: it only shows that before the cases containing Type No. 4 were finally emptied out to make room for the new

THE TYPES. fount, one Compositor had worked ahead of his fellows, who had not finished their "taking" of copy when the new letter supplanted the old. The table, TYPE No. 4. although at the commencement of the book, was necessarily printed last, and therefore, as a matter of course, we find Type No. 4* used for it. In "Knight of the Tower," sig. f introduces the new fount to us, all after, as well as the introductory matter, being in Type No. 4*.

TYPE No. 5.

For the Alphabet see Plate XXI. For the same in combination see Plate XXII.

ACCOUNT OF
TYPE No. 5.

There is much similarity of design between this and Type No. 3, the surprising similitude between some of the letters leading to the conclusion that one Artist cut both.

The books printed in this letter are as follows :

The Royal Book	1487?
The Book of Good Manners	1487
Directorium Sacerdotum, 1st edition . .	1487?
Speculum Vitæ Christi	1488?
The Doctrinal of Sapience	1489
Horæ	1490?
Servitium de Transfiguratione	1491?

In the 2nd edition of the "Golden Legend," 1487? all the headings, both of pages and chapters, are in this type.

Type No. 5 has no exact counterpart in the bodies of modern Founders. The nearest to it is two lines of Brevier, than which it is slightly larger, losing 1 line in 35. The total number of sorts in use appears to have been 153.

THE ALPHABET.

A is the proper capital for this fount, and does not belong to Type No. 4, with the A used in which, however, it is almost identical.

f The long f at the end of the line overhangs considerably, and seems at first, when used with a t or an o, to be in conjunction, which is not the case.

Z No capital could be found after the most careful examination.

¶ and ; appear to be the same as used in Type No. 4.

The comparative scarcity of double letters is very noticeable. No Arabic numerals are used.

The large Lombardic capitals used with this fount have a very bold and striking appearance. They are (unlike any former fount of Caxton's) all cast with the largest face the body will bear, and without the least beard. They are used, more or less, in every book printed with this type, although in some books (e. g. "Royal" and "Speculum") they appear very seldom. They do not look at all well when used as initials to a word, on account of their size preventing them ranging with the sequent letters. This may have been the cause why Caxton, except in "Directorium," appears to have made a very sparing use of them, save indeed that he converted them into quadrats. For this purpose they were doubtless fitted by some shortening process, which, however, has not prevented them cropping out continually in the blank spaces of the head lines and signature lines, where they often make a very puzzling appearance. It required a long search to complete the alphabet, even so far as it goes, on account of the rare use of these capitals. The letter f could only be discovered in a single instance, used as a quadrat, which will account for its battered appearance. In the latest books printed with Type No. 5 these Lombardic capitals appear as red initials, and printed at a separate operation. This use for them was, doubtless, the invention of Caxton's successor, Wynken de Worde, who appears to have inherited his master's working materials.

The body of this fount is Great Primer (Caslon's standard), within a shade, being almost the same as Type No. 1. The number of sorts in the fount is, for Caxton, very small, amounting only to 138. This may be called Caxton's last fount. It came into use in 1489, and was used for books up to 1491, the date of Caxton's death. Indeed there seems good reason for supposing that for some time after Caxton's death it served his successor, Wynken de Worde. With it the following works were printed :—

We have in this fount another remarkable instance of the contrivances employed by the early Typefounders. A new fount was required, and whether Caxton gave the Founders instructions concerning its size, or whether the fount was cast first, and then sold to our Printer, there seems no possibility of discovering; but this we can prove from the pages themselves, that the major portion of Type No. 6 was made from the punches, or from old letters of Caxton's Nos. 2 and 2*. Its body is rather smaller, 9 lines occupying the same depth as 8 lines of No. 2, and it is amusing to observe the shifts and contrivances resorted to for reducing those letters which, in Type No. 2, occupied the full body. For instance the A, B, and P have the flourish which passes under the letter brought close up to the letter itself. The H was also treated in the same way, but the violence must have damaged the flourish so much that, in most instances, it broke away; in some cases, however, it remains crippled up in a most pitiable condition. The corresponding flourish in the B has been boldly cropped off. F and I are strangely transformed, evidently by a blow on the soft metal, lengthwise. A few characters altogether new appear, and a few interpolations from other founts, besides a quaint set of Lombardic capitals, among which occurs now and then a letter from the Lombardic fount used in Type No. 5.

The following are remarks on the alphabet:—

A is the same as in Type No. 2, having the line at the bottom compressed.

B is the same as in Type No. 2, with the descending line cut away.

C, D, and E are identical with those in Type No. 2.

F is Type No. 2 crippled.

f The short-tailed example is a new letter.

G is not that of No. 2.

H (first sort) is Type No. 2, with the tail cut away. The second sort is peculiar to No. 6, and occurs frequently in all the books, except "Fayts of Arms."

I The first sort is No. 2 crippled. The second sort is peculiar to No. 6. The example at the end of the line, which is found now and then, belongs properly to Type No. 5.

K and L are identical with those belonging to Type No. 2.

WYNKEN DE WORDE'S TYPE No. 1.

See 2 lines in Plate LII.

A few words of this fount appear in the "Life of St. Katherine," and whole paragraphs in the 2nd edition of "The Festial," the latter book bearing the imprint "Caxton me fieri fecit;" yet, as already noticed, there are good grounds for doubting whether Caxton printed either work, and as no book is at present known to have been printed with this type in the lifetime of Caxton, while it was used frequently by Wynken de Worde, it would seem more appropriately considered as Type No. 1 of Wynken de Worde, than Type No. 7 of Caxton. Under this head, therefore, it lies beyond the scope of our present inquiry.

CHAPTER IV.

THE COMPOSITOR.

A new fount of Letter—Cases—Earliest Woodcut of a Compositor—Uneven Lines—Chases—Quadrats and Reglets—No Reader employed.

We will now suppose a fount of type delivered over to the Compositors to be laid in the cases, an operation requiring much more care than in the present day, on account of the numerous double letters and combinations. One effect of the combinations would be to equalize the size of all the boxes, as the letter "e" for instance, which now requires the largest box, would then most frequently occur in combination with one of the consonants, and not be used alone so often as many other letters. A pair of cases, therefore, with 254 equal boxes would be requisite to hold the whole fount of Type No. 2* ; but there is strong evidence that many sorts were not in constant use, as particular combinations and double letters make their appearance only in some books, and never in others ; this inconvenient size of the cases may be, therefore, somewhat reduced : supposing, however, that the cases had not more than 200 boxes, and that sufficient care had been exercised to place all the sorts correctly, there must still have been great difficulty in keeping "clean cases ;" and one need feel little surprise at finding wrong letters so often making their appearance in Caxton's pages. The combinations of in, ni, un, nu, nn, im, mi, and ini were often found in their wrong boxes, and have brought down to the present day the strongest evidence against the usefulness of logotypes.

METHOD OF WORKING.

In the earliest wood-cuts of a printing office the press is always made the most prominent object; very often, however, as in Plate IX A, with a compartment for the Compositor. Figure 1 is the earliest instance, and we there see a Compositor at work.† Before him is the case divided into even boxes, and raised on a cleft stick is the copy. The composing stick is in his right hand, doubtless owing to the engraver not having reversed the drawing from which he copied: it is held correctly by the man in Fig. 2. In the Book of Trades, already noticed, designed by Jost Amman, and dated 1568, we have the best representation of a "case," which even at so late a date had the boxes still of one size. We have already noticed the use of a composing stick, and the evenness of lines consequent thereon. It was not adopted at Westminster until 1480, although Caxton must often have seen the improved appearance which lines of an even length gave to the page in the numerous works previously issued from all the Continental presses. He would doubtless have imitated them had his mechanical appliances permitted; but not until the arrival of Type No. 4, in the year 1480, do we find evenness of page; and then, probably for the first time, composing sticks, setting rules, and chases were seen in the Westminster Printing Office. Before this, the types were doubtless, as M. Bernard has shown to be the case in the later block books and the early specimens of Dutch printing, taken straight from their boxes, and placed side by side in a sort of coffin, made probably of some hard wood, with a stout bottom, and screws at the foot to tighten the page when completed. The width of the page could not be extended beyond the internal measurement of the "coffin," but might be reduced at pleasure by placing down either side a straight piece of wood. The depth would be regulated in a similar manner, by varying the thickness of the foot-block against which the screws worked.

Let us then imagine the workman, with his wooden box before him. The further end would be slightly raised to keep the types from falling forward. He begins at the left-hand corner, and adding, from the cases, letter to letter, soon gets to the end of the first line, and not having room for the next word makes it quite tight with quadrats, or spaces. Then comes the second line, and this, as well as all the rest, would not be so easy.

† If Miss Faithful needed any precedent for the employment of women in her printing office she might point to the Compositors in Figs. 1 and 2, where appearances would certainly be in her favour.

COMPOSITOR.UNEVEN
LINES.SETTING

REGLETS.

Placing rough types upon rough types admits of very little shifting or adjustment, and to this fact, I imagine, we must attribute the practice of leaving the lines in early books of an uneven length. An attempt to push along the words of a line in order to introduce more space between them, without some plan of easing the friction, would be certain to break up the line altogether, and so the lines were left just as they happened to fall, whether full length or short. Sometimes, when a word would come into the line with a little reduction of the space between the last two words, the space was reduced accordingly; but more often a syllable at the end of the line was contracted, such as "men" into "mē," or "vertuous" into "vertuo⁹." Most often the Compositor, knowing the practice to be understood by his Readers, would finish his line with just so many letters as his measure would take, and accordingly it is common to find words divided thus:—why-|che th|at w|ymen w|iche m|an. But when once the "setting rule" was brought into use all that was altered, and the various words of a line could be pushed about, and the spaces between them augmented or reduced with ease. Having completed his proper number of lines, the foot piece would be placed after the last line for the foot screws to work upon, and, the "form" would be ready for press. There being a bottom to the box nothing could fall out, and, although doubtless not very tight in some parts, the "sloppy" ink then used would not, like modern stiff ink, draw up any loose letters.

If the sides of these coffins, or wooden chases, were equal in height with the types they enclosed they would, like them, leave their mark on the paper. This was the case in some of the early Dutch block-books, where occasionally the sides of the chase appear printed in the margin. I have searched in vain for any marks of the chase in the margins of Caxton's books. But whatever method he used—whether he screwed up the types in wooden boxes, or whether he used iron chases, one thing is very plain in nearly every book he issued—either the "justification" was bad, or the pages were "locked up" very loosely; for quadrats and spaces are continually "working up" and showing themselves.

Reglets, or thin pieces of wood the length of a line, never appear to have been used at all. When a "white" line was wanted under a chapter head or over a colophon, em quadrats were ranged side by side for the purpose, and very often capital letters which had been reduced in height for the purpose, although often not sufficiently. These "low" capitals would often work up while at press, and make undesirable appearances in very conspicuous places. For examples the Reader may examine the "Royal Book," and "Speculum vitæ Christi," in the British Museum.

The page having been completed by the Compositor it went to press in its chase or wooden box, without any further operation. The business of "Reader" as yet was not. All the workman's blunders and errors, the turned letters, the wrong sorts, and the numerous literal mistakes were left uncorrected. Even whole lines were occasionally omitted by the workman, and the omission remained throughout the edition, affording indisputable evidence that "proof sheets" after composition were quite unknown. At page 125 of Lewis's "Life of Caxton," we read concerning our Printer—"As he printed long before the present Method of adding the Errata at the End of Books was in Use and Practice, so his extraordinary Exactness obliged him to take a great deal more Pains than can easily be imagined; for, after a Book was printed off, his way was to revise it, and correct the Faults in it with red Ink, as they then used to correct their written Books. This being done to one Copy, he caused one of his Servants to run through the whole Impression, and correct the Faults he had noted with a Stanesil or Red-lead Pencil, which he himself afterwards compared with his own corrected Copy, to see that none of the Corrections he had made were omitted." A most laborious task indeed, had so foolish an idea ever entered the mind of so practical a man as Caxton, but the whole assertion is a mere fiction, started by Bagford, adopted by Lewis, and repeated by every subsequent Writer, without a shadow of evidence to support it. The only books in which manuscript additions were made at the time of publication were the "Polycricon" and "Mirrour of the World." The former, in the majority of copies, has the year of the world, and the regnal year, engrossed in red ink on the side margins; and the latter in the wood-cut of the seven concentric circles which represent the astronomical heavens, has the names of the celestial spheres written in black ink between each circle. But although I have examined about 500 of Caxton's books I have never seen anything approaching to a grammatical correction, coëval with the date of the book.

The method adopted by the earliest Printers to obtain impressions from their blocks was to lay the sheet to be printed on the already-inked block, and to rub it carefully. Wood Engravers of the present day take proofs in the same manner. The plan was continued for block printing many years after the invention of moveable types. The method of obtaining an impression by a direct pressure downwards is generally supposed to have been synchronous with the use of moveable types. Mr. Ottley, however, describes several of the earliest wood-blocks which he had no doubt were printed by means of a press. Of one he states "I am in possession of a specimen of wood engraving, printed in black oil colour on both sides the paper by a downright pressure, which I consider to have been, without doubt, printed in or before the year 1445." There can be no question therefore that the earliest type printers found a press already to their hands; but as we have no description of the mechanism of the early presses, we must, as in the instance of type founding, have recourse to the first dated engravings. The earliest representations of a printing press are found in the works of Jacobus Badius Ascensius, the celebrated Printer of Amsterdam. Two of these are delineated in Plate IX A, whereof the earlier is Fig. 1, which is found as a Printer's device in the title of a work dated 1511, for a notice of which I am indebted to Mr. Cannon, of the British Museum. The larger press, Fig. 2, having upon its basement the date 1520, was taken from the Bagford collection, and has hitherto been generally considered as the earliest representation of a printing press. The small press, Fig. 3, was taken from a tract of Luther's dated 1522. Fig. 4 comes also from the Bagford fragments, and appears to be about the middle of the 16th Century, as the mechanism of the spindle is evidently improved. It was chosen, however, principally on account of the drawing of a Typefounder seen through a door in the background, a feature very rarely portrayed: I have not been able to trace the work for which this wood-cut was designed. In all these presses the principle is the same. There is a simple worm screw, with a long pin for a lever; the head of the press and the table bear the pressure, and the "hose," as the transverse piece between the screw and the platen was called, served to steady the downward pressure. The platen was loose, and slung by hooks to the bottom of the screw-box, as it used to be in the memory of many now living. The girths, drum, and handle served to run the table out and in, and the tympan and frisket were identical in principle, if not in appearance, with those now used. In Fig. 2 we see some of the Pressman's appliances exposed to view. There is the shears for cutting out his tympan sheet, and for general purposes; next to it is a pick-brush for cleaning out picks in the type; a pair of compasses for accurately testing the "furniture" between the pages, &c.; and, lastly, a screw point for making "register."

To each press is assigned two workmen; one is pulling lustily at the bar, while the other is distributing ink upon the balls, previously to beating the form. The two heaps of printed and white paper, in Fig. 2, appear to our modern notions very awkwardly placed, being both on the off side of the press, so that the workman had to reach over the form whenever he took up or laid down a fresh sheet of paper. As, however, the heaps would, if in their correct position, have hidden to some extent both workmen and press, practical truth may have been purposely sacrificed to diagrammatic advantage.

THE INK.

Doubtless the ink was better and the impression harder in the time of these presses than in Caxton's time.† His ink was of the weakest description, and the amount of power required for a "pull" of the press proportionally weak, the one necessitating the other. His presses, in the earlier part of his printing career, did not take more than a post folio page; and, with a very sloppy ink, the pull, if strong, would have made a confused mass of black instead of a legible impression. As it is, the ink has been almost invariably squeezed over the side of the letters, and has contorted their shape. Few indeed, although practical men, would imagine the deceptive nature of an impression taken from new types, with a weak ink and light pressure. In such case the type appears now much thicker than it is, from the "spuing" of the ink—and now battered, with some portion of it broken—and now, to use a technical term, as if it were all "off its feet." To prove this, as well as to illustrate how little we can judge from first appearances, the two specimens in Plate IX B have been printed under my own inspection. The upper portion is printed with weak ink and a low pressure: the type looks worn—no two copies are exactly the same in appearance; indeed scarcely any two of the same letter look as if cast in the same matrix, and most people would come to the conclusion that it was too bad ever to be used again. Now look below:—it is the same identical form re-printed;

not a letter has been changed, and yet the whole edition of the upper half was worked off before one copy of the lower half was pulled. Good ink and a strong impression have caused all the difference, and had these been at Caxton's command we should never have seen the rudeness so visible in most of his books.

With such materials Caxton had no occasion to damp his paper before printing; nor is there anything in the appearance of his sheets to lead us to suppose that such a practice was adopted.

The representation of the "Printer" in the Book of Trades, 1569, shows that the presses then were fitted with both "tympan" and "frisket;" and many signs lead to the belief that similar appliances were used by Caxton's workmen. In short pages we often find a few lines of matter put at the bottom which was blocked out by the frisket, and answered the purpose of a "bearer." Several instances occur in the "Godfrey," at the Public Library, Cambridge; also in the "Life of our Lady," at the British Museum. In "Speculum vitæ Christi," we actually find "a bite," half of the bottom line remaining unprinted.

We have already noticed that only a page at a time was worked in the earlier part of Caxton's career; although later, at the probable introduction of Wynken de Worde, two pages were managed. This necessitated great care in getting the unsigned pages in their right places. That such care was needed is proved by several instances of error, such as those noticed at pages 5 and 6 post, and by other examples.

Before leaving this portion of our subject, a peculiarity probably connected with the mechanism of the press, must be noticed. A small hole at the four corners of each sheet appears in every book printed with Type No. 1. Such holes (first noticed by Mr. Tupper), have not been observed in any books printed with the later types, except "Quatre derrenieres choses," (and perhaps the "Propositio" which has not yet been examined with that object); the fact, however, so far as its evidence goes, agrees with the classification into Bruges-printed and Westminster-printed books, already established in Vol. I, Chapter V, of this work. The employment of points by modern Pressmen to obtain accuracy of register, and the punctures (called "point holes") in the paper, consequent upon the use of them, is well known. The holes under notice certainly suggest a similar practice.

After due time allowed for the ink to dry upon the paper, the printed sheets passed into the hands of the Binder, whose operations come next under consideration.

BOOKBINDER

The Art of Bookbinding in England had not, in the 15th Century, reached the perfection seen in the beautiful Continental specimens of the same period. Nor indeed was any uncommon binding required for the cheap productions of Caxton's Press. His sheets were not, as in modern practice, pressed between glazed boards after being printed, but went, without further process, from the press side to the hands of the Binder. The few specimens which have reached us in a pristine state show the indentation, more or less distinctly, made by the types. The edition of "Eneydos," 1490, was hurried through the Binder's hands so soon after the first section (which, containing the prologue and table, necessarily went to press last) was printed, that all the leaves of that section, in every copy I have seen, show a very bad "set off" from the type on the opposite pages.

SIGNATURES.

To enable the Binder to collate the sheets of each section correctly, it was the custom, as well with the Scribes as with the Printers, to place distinguishing marks on the first page of each sheet; these were called signatures, and, as Caxton used only 4th for his books, the Binder (as a rule) was sure that when he had got sheets a j, a ij, a iij, and a iiij together, his section was complete. Some Printers, who were irregular as to the number of sheets to a section, adopted the plan of signing the centre sheet of every section upon the 3rd as well as the 1st page, so that the Binder by this distinguishing mark might directly see the number of sheets intended for each section, however great the irregularity. In such cases the 4^a would be signed on the first 5 rectos, leaving only 3 unsigned. Caxton, however, never adopted this plan, his sections always containing the same number of unsigned as of signed leaves. The sheets having been collected into sections the signatures served again to collate the sections into volumes, the only use for which they are now retained. All the early books from Caxton's Press are described as unsigned, because the signatures were not printed, but inserted in manuscript.

COLLATION.

The modern Binder begins by folding all his sheets into quarto, octavo, &c., according to the size of the book, each folded sheet making a section; they are then collated and bound. In Caxton's books the collation of the sheets preceded the folding. It has been already observed that the quarto sizes were treated, both in printing and binding, as folio, the paper being cut in half before going to press. The type was so arranged that when 3, 4, or 5 sheets were folded inside one another, quirewise, the pages should be in their proper sequence. The open sheets of each section being gathered, were knocked even and folded in the middle. This adoption of one plan for books of all sizes was in accordance with the old usages of the Scribes, who necessarily cut their vellum sheets to the intended size before the manuscript was commenced, and varied their sections from 3 sheets, if very thick, to 6 or 7, if very thin. The section of 3 sheets was called "ternio"—of 4 sheets "quaternus"—of 5 sheets "quinternus"—and so on. Caxton adopted the "quaternus" or "quarternion," for all his books, using a larger or smaller section only if the beginning or end required it. Wynken de Worde, however, made frequent use of the ternion.

From the foregoing remarks we see that the ternion, quarternion, and quinternion, must necessarily be arranged in the order of the following diagrams, by consulting which the Reader may easily know the pages belonging to any given sheet.

CATCHWORDS.

Catchwords are not seen in any of Caxton's books, although here and there a word by itself at the foot of a page may simulate them; but this word in every instance will be found to form an integral part of the text, and, therefore, in no sense a catchword, which by its very nature must be treated as the first word of the next page.

In paper manuscripts of the 15th Century it is not uncommon to find vellum used for the inmost sheet of each section, or that a slip of parchment was pasted down the centre of each section. This was to give an increase of strength to the back where the Binder's thread would be likely to tear through the paper. Instances where these slips are used are common in "unwashed" specimens from Caxton's press. The manuscript volume at Althorp, containing "Propositio," is served so throughout, and in the quarto poems at Cambridge the marks of the paste, where the slip was torn away at the rebinding of the volume, are very visible.

Eygentliche
Beschreibung
&c., &c.

The earliest pictorial representation of a Binder at work is displayed in the little Book of Trades to which reference has already been made; but as there is nothing in it peculiar to the age we will pass on to the material of the covers. This was very frequently only a stiff piece of parchment, with the edges turned in, and a blank leaf pasted down inside as a lining. A few books still remain in this state, just as issued from the "Red pale" by Caxton. Such are the copies of "Tully de Senectute" in Queen's College, Oxford; the "Art and Craft," "Directorium," and the "Game and Play of the Chess," in the Bodleian; and the "Godfrey of Boloyn" in the library of Mr. Holford. If intended to be more durable, Caxton used "boards," sometimes made of oak, or beech, and sometimes (fortunately for Bibliographers) of waste sheets from the press pasted together. These were covered with brown sheepskin, upon which was a simple pattern of circles, or crosses, &c. Instances may still be seen in the 2nd edition of the "Festial" at the British Museum; in the "Servitium de Transfiguratione," lately purchased for the same library; in the 2nd edition of the "Mirroure of the World," at Bristol; and at other libraries. In the last-mentioned volume 4 leaves of the unique "Fifteen Oes" were used as linings for the inside of the boards. An account of a "Boethius," of which the interior of the covers was composed entirely of "waste sheets," is given in this volume at page 73.

When bound, we may consider that the book was generally ready for delivery to the Purchaser. It was so with all Caxton's later publications, but the earlier books still required the services of the Rubricator, or "Scriver."

CHAPTER VII.

THE ILLUMINATOR, THE RUBRISHER, AND THE WOOD-ENGRAVER.

The Division of Labour among the Scribes—Caxton's use of the Rubricator, &c.—The Wood-cuts and Initials in Caxton's Books—Two Artists at least employed—The Crucifixion cut—The Device.

It has already been noticed that, in the latter half of the 15th Century, the great development of Book manufacture led to a corresponding division of labour. Thus in Bruges we find there were Scrivers, or persons who wrote the text only of books, Verlichters, who probably confined their attention to illuminated capitals, and Vinghette makers (miniatores), who were Artists capable of designing and painting subjects to order. In only one instance do the books of Caxton suggest the idea that the services of the Vinghette maker were to have been employed. At the commencement of his edition of Gower's "Confessio Amantis" (sig. 1 2) the prologue of the Author is begun more than half-way down the page. The blank was evidently intended for a design of some sort, possibly for a large wood-cut, after the fashion of Colard Mansion, who printed all the great cuts to his "Ovid" by a separate working. As a rule, however, Caxton's books required no help from the Vinghette maker, although he certainly employed, so late as 1485, the services of a Scriver, or Rubricator, to insert the initial letters at the beginning of chapters, and to make paragraph marks in appropriate places. For this purpose a vermilion ink was nearly always used, although occasionally a light blue alternated. For the initial of the first chapter a square space was left equal to the depth of 4 or 5 lines of type: for succeeding chapters a space of 2 lines was generally considered sufficient.

The first use of wood-cut initials † was in 1484, after which year they were never (except on rare occasions when a sort ran short) omitted. Caxton had only 2 or 3 of each letter, and sometimes only one, as may easily be seen by the recurrence of a particular initial. Some of them have their heavy blackness relieved by a few white dots punctured in the face of the letter, a practice frequently adopted by the German School to lighten the ground-work of early wood-cuts. Caxton's initials are varied in shape, and often elegant in design, but with the exception of the floriated A at the beginning of the "Order of Chivalry," and "Æsop," and perhaps the B in "Eneýdos," they demand no especial notice.

† The initials in many early printed books have been a puzzle to Bibliographers, especially the great B and others, in the Mayence Psalter. These are frequently referred to as showing, at the earliest period of the art, great skill in colour-printing. If, however, the Museum copy of the Bible, printed by Sweynheym and Pannartz, in 1467, be examined, a curious (and I believe hitherto unnoticed) practice of the early Printers will be revealed. Here the varied appearance and colours of the initial letters on the same sheet would be both difficult and expensive if done by the press; but the initials to the 15th and 19th chapters of Numbers, the 27th chapter of Deuteronomy, and numerous other chapters, plainly evince the process adopted. The initials were all printed, but after the pages were inked, pieces of paper were laid over them (or they were blocked out by the frisket), and upon the pull being made, the initials gave an uninked indentation on the sheet. The Illuminator then carefully painted over the design with colours according to his fancy. In the Bible alluded to (and occasionally in the Mayence Psalter) this operation was performed heedlessly, and many spiral lines, finials, and little ornaments have been left uncoloured, and only visible by the indentation made by the press.

An Inquiry concerning the Invention of Printing,
&c., &c., &c.
by the late
W. Y. Ottley,
London, 1868

The wood-cut illustrations to Caxton's books have not received much attention from the Writers on the early history of wood-engraving. Strutt, Singer, and Ottley in his "Enquiry" have omitted to notice them. Dibdin and Jackson have devoted a few pages to their consideration; and Ottley, in the posthumous work on the Invention of Printing, just published, has some interesting remarks on the early use of the art in England. His opinions are enforced by a facsimile of some rude wood-cuts in his own possession, which he believed to have been executed as early as the celebrated S. Christopher of 1423. From his arguments we may conclude that although no great amount of vitality can be attributed to the art of wood engraving in England in the early part of the 15th Century, it nevertheless was known and practised by native Artists. The use of native talent for Caxton's books was therefore possible.

Gr. 7806.

At the same time it requires no artistic education to see that there is a great similarity in general appearance between the illustrations in some of the early Dutch books, and the wood-cuts of Caxton's "Chess Book," "Golden Legend," and others. In the "Troy Book," folio, printed at Augsburg, in 1483, and the French-printed "Æsop," 1476, the broad outline and heavy black feet of the figures at once suggest a similarity of style if not identity of Artist. But whether Caxton's cuts be native or foreign there can be little doubt of the origin of the designs. His Artist merely copied the outlines found in the manuscript from which the book was being (or to be) printed. At that period there were a certain number of standard works always in demand, and for each of these the Illuminators had a conventional treatment, which appears repeated over and over again in different books. To those who have examined the illuminated manuscripts of the 15th Century, executed in the Low Countries (of which there are numerous examples in the Royal Collection of the British Museum), the identity of design and treatment in Caxton's engravings will be evident.

It is somewhat remarkable that wood-cut illustrations preceded the use of wood-cut initials in Caxton's books by about 4 years. In the "Fables of Æsop," 1484, we meet with printed initials for the first time, while wood-cuts, illustrative of the text, had been used in great abundance for the "Golden Legend," the "Chess Book," the "Mirrour of the World," 1st edition, and "Parvus et Magnus Catho," the last dating about 1481. THE WOOD-

Had Caxton's opportunities allowed, he would probably have used the Wood-engraver's art to a much greater extent. The above table shows that in 1481, when he first employed wood-cuts, he also discontinued them: that in 1484 he again, for one year only, used them; and that in 1487 they took a permanent position in his Typography. This seeming capriciousness was probably owing to the difficulty experienced in obtaining the services of a Wood-engraver.

The engravings used in 1481, 1484, and partly in 1487-8, appear to have come from the hand of the same Artist. In the last year, however, we find considerable improvement, as shown in the illustrations to the "Royal Book," and "Speculum Vitæ Christi;" but Caxton's best specimen of the Wood-engraver's art, and one which has been much praised by Dibdin, and especially Jackson, for its composition and feeling, is the well-known "Crucifixion" (see Plate LVII). This design is frequently seen in the books of Wynken de Worde, who received great credit for it until its earlier use was discovered as a frontispiece to Caxton's "Fifteen Oes."

The largest wood-cut known to have been used in Caxton's books is the Assembly of Saints, at the beginning of all the editions of the "Golden Legend," (Plate XXXVIII), and the smallest, of which there are four, are found in illustrations to the text in the "Speculum vitæ Christi" (see Plate XLVII).

THE DEVICE.

This portion of the subject must not, however, be dismissed without a few words upon that most interesting of all Caxton's wood-cuts—the large Device. Caxton used but one, which is represented in Plate X; the small Device; of a similar design, which is commonly attributed to him, and which is first seen in the "Chastising of God's Children," being certainly not earlier than 1491.

The interpretation of this Device offers a question by no means of easy solution. The common sense reading W. C. 74, meaning William Caxton, 1474, is doubtless correct, and we may, therefore, dismiss, as unworthy of serious notice, the suggestions that the figures should be reversed to read 1447, or that the 74 or 47 refer to Caxton's age and not to a particular year. The problem to be solved is why did Caxton use the year 1474 on his device? Bibliographers have hitherto assumed that it must be in reference to his introduction of printing into England, and quote the colophon to the 1st edition of the "Chess Book" in support of the argument. But, as already shown, the date of the "Chess Book" refers to the translation of the work, the printing having been certainly accomplished at Bruges, and probably in 1475, Caxton's settlement at Westminster not having occurred until late in 1475, or perhaps in 1476.

On the whole it seems most natural that a date used in that manner would refer to some turning point in Caxton's typographical career; and I therefore believe that the old reading of 1474 is correct; and suggest that the reference is probably to the date of printing "The Recuyell," which, although translated in 1471, was circulated for a considerable time in manuscript only. Caxton certainly learnt the art while assisting to print this book; it appears also from his description that it was the first fruit of his authorship, and at the same time the first book printed in his native language—all which circumstances would lead him to look back upon 1474 as an epoch to be commemorated.

The following list of books in which the Device is found shows that it was not until the end of Caxton's typographical life that he adopted this distinguishing mark. THE WOOD-

CHAPTER VIII.

The Annual Produce of the Westminster Press—Commercial Success.

In the preceding chapters we have followed Caxton through the various branches of his new art, and endeavoured to show the means by which he produced his books. In conclusion we have only to state in a summary manner the results of all this labour, during the 14 or 15 years he occupied the "Red pale" as a Printer. The relative claims of the earliest works printed with Caxton's types have already been discussed in the first volume of this work, and their appropriate dates settled as follows:—

1472-74. The Recuyell.

1475-76. Chess Book, 1st edition, and Le Recueil.

After 1476. Les Fais du Jason, Meditacions, &c., Les quatre derrenieres Choses, Propositio, and Infancia Salvatoris.

These were all, doubtless, printed abroad.

In 1476-7 Caxton was in full work at Westminster, and we will, therefore, now add to the name of each book the number of printed pages it contained.

Where the number can only be approximated on account of no perfect copy being known, the mark (?) is appended.

1477.—Jason (294 pages); Dictes, 1st edition (150 pages); Horæ, 8vo. (100 pages) ?

RESULTS.

- RESULTS. 1478. Canterbury Tales, 1st edition (742 pages); Moral Proverbs (8 pages).
 Ante 1479. It is very difficult to fix the dates of all the quarto pieces of poetry which were, at an early period, issued from Caxton's press. Some of them were, doubtless, among his earliest productions, and of all the following it may with certainty be stated that they were printed between 1476-79:—Stans Puer (8 pages); Parvus Catho, two editions (68 pages each); The Horse, Sheep, and Goose, two editions (34 pages each); Temple of Glass (66 pages); Chorle and the Bird, two editions (18 pages each); Temple of Brass (48 pages); Book of Courtesy (26 pages); Anelida (20 pages); Boethius, folio (186 pages).
 Ante 1480. Directorium, 4to (200 pages)? Horæ, 2nd edition (200 pages)? Psalterium (180 pages)?
 1480. Dictes, 2nd edition (150 pages); Parvus Catho, 3rd edition (54 pages); Chronicles, 1st edition (360 pages); Description of Britain (58 pages).
 1481. Curia Sapientiæ (74 pages); Mirroure, 1st edition (197 pages); Reynard, 1st edition (165 pages); Tully (234 pages); Chess Book, 2nd edition (166 pages); Godfrey (284 pages).
 1482. Chronicles, 2nd edition (360 pages); Polycricon (890 pages).
 1483. Pilgrimage (220 pages); Vocabulary (50 pages); Festial, 1st edition (230 pages); Four Sermons, 1st edition (60 pages); Servitium de Visitatione (14 pages); Confessio Amantis (436 pages).
 1484. Knight of the Tower (208 pages); Caton (152 pages); Golden Legend, 1st edition (892 pages); Prayers (1 page); Æsop (284 pages); Order of Chivalry (100 pages); Canterbury Tales, 2nd edition (622 pages); Book of Fame (56 pages); Curial (12 pages); Troilus (234 pages); Life of our Lady (190 pages).
 1485-86. Saint Winifred (30 pages); King Arthur (862 pages); Charles the Great (188 pages); Paris and Vienne (70 pages); Golden Legend, 2nd edition (892 pages).
 1487. Royal Book (320 pages); Good Manners (132 pages); Directorium, 1st folio edition (318 pages).
 1488. Speculum, two editions (292 pages each).
 1489. Doctrinal (184 pages); Fayts (286 pages); Statutes (80 pages); Gouvenal (36 pages); Reynard, 2nd edition (140 pages); Blanchardyn (240 pages)? Four Sons of Aymon (556 pages); Directorium, 2nd folio edition (388 pages).

1490. Eneydos (168 pages); Horæ, 3rd edition (300 pages)? Fifteen Oes (44 pages); Dictes, 3rd edition (138 pages); Mirroure, 2nd edition (174 pages); Ghostly Matters (192 pages); Art and Craft (26 pages).
 1491. Servitium de Transfiguratione (20 pages); Book of Courtesy (28 pages); Festial, 2nd edition (270 pages); Four Sermons, 2nd edition (68 pages); Chastising (96 pages).

RESULTS.

The "magnum opus" of Caxton was undoubtedly the edition of "The Golden Legend," 1483. The translation alone of this great work must have been no slight task, while, as to number of leaves, and size of both paper and printed page, it far exceeded his edition of "King Arthur," which was the next largest. The smallest pieces of his printing now extant are "The Advertisement" and the "Indulgences."

The commercial results of Caxton's trade as a Printer are unknown; but as the fees paid at his burial were far above the average, and as he evidently held a respectable position in his parish, we must conclude that his business was profitable. The preservation of the Cost Book of the Ripoli Press has already been noticed, and some extracts of interest translated therefrom. We may presume that Caxton also kept exact accounts of his trade receipts and expenditure, and if such were extant the many doubts which now surround the operations of his printing office would be definitely solved. We should then know the price at which he sold his books—how many pence he asked for his small quarto "quayers" of poetry, or his pocket editions of the "Horæ" and "Psalter"—how many shillings were required to purchase the thick folio volumes, such as "Canterbury Tales," "King Arthur," &c. That the price was not much dearer than that paid for good editions now, we may infer from the rate at which fifteen copies of the "Golden Legend" sold between 1496 and 1500. These realised an average price of 6s 8d each, or about £2 13s 4d of modern money, a sum by no means too great for a large illustrated work. This, however, would depend on the number of copies considered necessary for an edition, which probably varied according to the nature of the work. On a blank leaf in the 1st edition of "Dictes," at Althorp, is written, apparently by Bagford, "N.B.—Caxton printed 44 books, 25 of which were with Dates, and 19 without." One would imagine that so definite a statement must have had some foundation, but it appears to rest entirely on the Writer's bare assertion. Some Foreign Printers issued so many as 275 or 300 copies of editions of the Classics, but it is not probable that Caxton ventured upon so large an impression, as the demand for his publications must have been much more restricted.

EXPLANATION OF TERMS AND CONTRACTIONS

USED IN THIS VOLUME.

Perfect.—In describing a book, it is called "perfect" when every printed leaf is preserved as originally issued, notwithstanding the blank leaf, or leaves, may be wanting.

Made perfect.—When two or more imperfect volumes have been united to form a perfect copy, such a volume is described as "made perfect."

Imperfect.—Is applied to a book deficient in any part of the text; such deficiency not exceeding a fourth of the entire volume.

Very imperfect.—When the deficiency exceeds a fourth, and is less than half of the entire volume.

A large fragment.—A portion of a book exceeding one-fourth, but not amounting to half.

A fragment.—Any portion not exceeding a fourth of the entire volume.

i. stands for imperfect; v. i. for very imperfect; f. for fragment; i. 2 l. for imperfect to the extent of 2 leaves, &c.

5° for quinternion; 4° for quarternion; 3° for ternion. (These terms are explained at page xlix).

Measurement.—The size of a volume is, in all cases, exclusive of the outer cover, or binding.

Italic Letters placed before the year in the list of "SALE PRICES" show the recurrence for sale of a particular copy.

IN
TYPE No. 1.

No. 1.—THE RECUELL OF THE HISTORIES OF TROY. Translated
1469-71. Folio. Without Place or Date. (1472-4?).

COLLATION.—Book I has fourteen 5^m and one 4ⁿ=148 leaves, of which the first is blank. Book II has nine 5^m, one 4ⁿ, and one 3ⁿ=104 leaves. Book III has ten 5^m=100 leaves. Total 351 printed leaves and 1 blank.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—Type No. 1 only. Lines of very uneven length; full lines measure 5 inches, but vary in different parts from 4 $\frac{1}{4}$ to 5 $\frac{1}{4}$ inches. 31 lines to a full page. Without signatures, catchwords, or numerals. Space is left, with a director, for 3 to 7-line initials. As may be seen by the collation, each book begins a fresh gathering, probably for the convenience of binding in three separate volumes.

Commencing the work with a blank leaf Caxton's titular preface follows, printed in red ink, and occupying the 2nd recto.

The Text begins thus :—

The 4th verso is occupied by a title of 4 lines, in red ink, introducing the First Book, which commences as follows on the 5th recto, space being allowed for a 7-line initial, with director, and finishes on the verso of the 148th leaf, with 14 lines of print,

Thus endeth the first book of the recueyll or gadryng to gedre of the hystories of Trophe.

The Second Book begins at head of 149th recto, is followed on the same page by a title of 5 lines, in red ink, and finishes at foot of 350th verso,

the kynge Escorpus / the kynge prothenor / and the kynge Obtpneus 2c^f .

An epilogue by Caxton, of 1 page 19 lines, occupies the next leaf.

The Text ends on the 352nd recto, with 14 Latin rhymes, commencing

Pergama flere volo . fata danais data solo

Solo capta volo . capta redacta solo and finishing

femina digna mori . reamatur amore priori reddita victori . deliciis q3 thori

the verso being blank.

These lines appear, among other poems, in Cotton MS., Cleop. A viii, where they are entitled "Versus rhythmici Magistri Hildeberti."

REMARKS.—"Le Recueil des Histoires de Troye," the original of Caxton's translation, is generally ascribed to Raoul le Fevre. Its literary history shall be narrated when treating of the French edition, and its translation and subsequent printing have already been described in Vol I, pages 45-47. The prologue and epilogues are reprinted in Vol. I, pages 131-34. It was the first book printed in the English language, and, during its progress through the Press, Caxton, as he himself informs us in his prologue to the Third Book, learnt the new art.

I have not been able to trace any MANUSCRIPT of this version.

EXISTING COPIES.

1. BRITISH MUSEUM. King's Library, (C. 11. c. 1).—Made perfect by a few leaves taken from another copy. In very fine condition. Purchased at West's sale by "honest Tom Payne," having formerly belonged to the Harleian Library. Measurement, $10\frac{1}{8} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

2. CAMBRIDGE. Public Library, (AB. 10. 31).—Imperfect, wanting the first 12 printed leaves and the 19th in Book I, the last in Book II, and the last in Book III. Clean, and free from manuscript notes. Measurement, $10\frac{1}{2} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches. From Bishop More's collection.

3. THE SAME, (AB. 4. 14).—Another copy. Imperfect, wanting the first three printed leaves in Book I, as well as the 31st and 32nd; the last in Book II; and the 46th and last two in Book III. Several leaves patched and torn. Many manuscript disfigurements throughout the volume, which is stained and dirty. Measurement 11×8 inches. This also was one of Bishop More's books.

4. Trinity College.—Imperfect, wanting 7 printed leaves in Book I; also 94, 95, and the last two in Book III. In many parts of this volume pains have been taken to trace over each letter very carefully with black ink. In tolerable condition. Measurement, $10\frac{1}{2} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

5. OXFORD. Bodleian.—Imperfect. Wants the first two printed leaves of the First, and the last leaf of the Second Book. There is in this volume a curious accident: the verso of the 29th leaf has not been printed by the pressman, although the corresponding page on the same side of the sheet shows a good impression (See also the Devonshire copy). Clean, with a few manuscript notes. Measurement, $10 \times 7\frac{1}{4}$ inches. With this is bound up the 1st Edition of "The Game and Play of the Chess." Both belonged to James Bowen, of Shropshire, whose Autograph is on a fly-leaf at the beginning, and who bequeathed the volume in 1750 to this library.

6. Another copy. Imperfect, wanting the first three printed leaves in Book I, the 4th in Book II, and the first and last two in Book III. Clean, and without manuscript notes; some leaves cut with a knife. Measurement, $10 \times 7\frac{1}{4}$ inches.

7. PARIS. Imperial Library.—Very imperfect, wanting the first 125 leaves in Book I, the 35th and 51st in Book II, and 32 at the end of the volume. The printing on the 1st leaf is surrounded by an illuminated border cut from a manuscript and pasted on. The Autograph of Thomas Pike is on the 10th leaf, and several other leaves are disfigured by scribbling. The initials are a late insertion, in all colours and shapes. Measurement, $10 \times 11\frac{1}{4}$ inches. Purchased for £15, in 1826, at Mr. Inglis's sale, whose book-plate is inside the cover. Previously to this it had belonged to Steevens, the Shakspeare Commentator.

8. SION COLLEGE, London.—Imperfect, wanting 15 leaves at the beginning of Book I, and the last in Book III. Free from manuscript notes, but much stained. Measurement, $10\frac{1}{2} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Bequeathed, with 15 other books, by Matthew Forster, Merchant and Vintner of London, which is thus recorded at the foot of the 1st page, "Math : filius Ducis Math. forster donavit 1646."

9. DUKE OF DEVONSHIRE.—Imperfect, wanting the last leaf, which is supplied in facsimile. The inmost sheet of the 3rd quaternion has an error in the printing, which no folding can rectify, as the fourth page of the sheet is printed so as to back the first, and the second takes the place of the fourth. It is remarkable that a copy in the "Bodleian" shows a blunder in the same sheet. Two leaves at the end are mended, and the first in the book is mounted. The volume is otherwise in excellent preservation, beautifully clean, and of large size; the type also appears very sharp and clear. Measurement, 11×8 inches. This book is particularly interesting, from having belonged to Elizabeth Grey, Queen of Edward the Fourth, and sister to Anthoine Earl Rivers, the Poet, and patron of Caxton's Press. This appears from a manuscript inscription on the paper lining of the original vellum covering of the book, which has been carefully bound up at the end of the volume. The writing, of the 15th Century, is as follows: "This boke is mine quene elizabet late wiffe vnto the moste noble King edwarde the forthe off whos bothe sooles y beseche almyghty Gode Take to his onfynyght mercy above. Amen. Per me thomā Shukburghe juniorem."⁽¹⁾ The late Duke bought this interesting volume at the Roxburghe sale for £1060 10s. It had been purchased by the Duke of Roxburghe for £50, from Mr. Laing, who had received it in exchange from Major Swinton.

(1) On a slip of paper in a Collection of Autographs in the British Museum (Cotton MS., Vesp. F. XIII., fol. 60) is a similar inscription, "this boke ys myn elysabeth the kyngys dawghtyr 1462."

10. MARQUIS OF BATE.—A copy said to be perfect,⁽¹⁾ but much wormed and repaired; no further particulars can be added.

11. EARL OF PEMBROKE.—Imperfect. Wants 19 printed leaves in Book I, 2 in Book II, and 50 in Book III. It is tolerably clean. Measurement, $10\frac{3}{4} \times 7\frac{3}{4}$ inches.

12. EARL OF JERSEY.—Perfect, with the original blank, and very clean. A few leaves are mended, but altogether this is a magnificent copy. Measurement, $10\frac{3}{4} \times 7\frac{3}{4}$ inches. Purchased with Bryan Fairfax's Library in 1756 by Mr. Child. Autograph at the beginning of Book I, "Sir Th: Fairfax the elder knight oweth this booke."

13. EARL OF ASHBURNHAM.—Imperfect, wanting all before the 18th leaf, also 79 to 87 inclusive; the last leaf of Book II; 25, 79, 80, 81, 84, and the last 12 in Book III. Slightly stained; with few manuscript notes. Measurement, $10\frac{7}{8} \times 7\frac{3}{4}$ inches. From Mr. Utterson's Library.

14. EARL SPENCER.—Imperfect, but in beautiful condition, wanting only the 1st printed leaf, which is a mounted facsimile, admirably executed by Whittaker. Free from all stains or manuscript marks. Measurement, $10\frac{3}{4} \times 7\frac{3}{4}$ inches. On the cover is the book-plate of Henry Edmund Austen, Shalford, Surrey, who followed M. C. Tutet as its possessor.

15. SIR THOMAS PHILLIPPS, BART.—Imperfect. No further particulars can be given. (See Catalogue of his MSS. for 1848, No. 6012).

16. BERIAH BOTFIELD, ESQ., M.P.—Imperfect, wanting the 11th and 20th leaves in Book I, and 5 leaves in Book II, all supplied in fac-simile by Harris. Upon the original calf binding was "Agnes Cole, 1518." Measurement $10\frac{1}{2} \times 7\frac{3}{4}$ inches. Purchased of Payne and Foss for £168.

Explicit."—8. Harl. 5440 (French). The same.—The prologue to this has been printed in Vol. I, page 135.—9. Addit. 15698 (German verse), with coarse and grotesque illustrations.

There are several manuscript copies in the Imperial Library, Paris; No. 6483, (Latin) xiv cent., bears the following colophon,⁽¹⁾ "Explicit solatium ludi scacchorum tractatum ad mores editum a fratre Egidio de Roma." Nos. 7068^a and 7204 (French of Vignay). No. 7072^a (French of Faron).

REMARKS.—"Fynysshid the last day of Marche the yer of oure lord god a thousand foure honderd and lxxiii." The word "fynysshed" has doubtless the same signification here as in the Epilogue to the Second Book of Caxton's translation of the Histories of Troy, "begonne in Brugis, contynued in Gaunt, and finysshed in Coleyn," which evidently refers to the translation only. The date, 1475-6, has been affixed, because in the Low Countries at that time the year commenced on Easter-day; ⁽²⁾ this in 1474 fell on April 10th, thus giving, as the day of the conclusion of the translation, 31st March, 1475, the same year being the earliest possible period of its appearance as a printed book.

The literary history of the "Game and Play of the Chess" does not appear to have hitherto received that attention which is its due. Before 1285, Egidius Colonna⁽³⁾ had composed his renowned work entitled "De regimine principum," which treats of self-government, domestic government, and national government. The "Liber de ludo Scachorum," of J. de Cessolis appears to have been based upon this work, its chief originality being the representation of the several stations and duties of life by the Pieces used in Chess. Indeed, so much resemblance was there between the work of Cessolis and that of Ægidius, that in one manuscript (quoted above) we read "editum a fratre Egidio," &c. This was doubtless an error of the scribe, as it disagrees with all the other known manuscripts, which are unanimous in ascribing the work to Cessolis. J. de Cessolis was contemporary with Ægidius—was a Preaching Friar, and translated several of the Latin works of Ægidius into French. It does not, however, appear that he translated into French his own Latin compilation, "De ludo Scachorum," although from the number of manuscripts still extant we may fairly presume that it was in great repute. About the middle of the 15th Century two distinct French versions were made. The earlier was probably that by Jean Faron, in 1347, who translated it literally from the original Latin. About the same time appeared the favorite and standard work of Jehan de Vignay, who took great liberties with the text, and added many stories and fables. Both these men were also of the order of Preaching Friars, and seem to have worked quite independently of one another. We now approach Caxton's edition. This is principally from the version of Jehan de Vignay, to whom he gives the title of "an excellent Doctor of Divinity, of the Order of the Hospital of St. John's of Jerusalem," which is remarkable, as in his preface Jean de Vignay styles himself "hospitaller de l'ordre de haut pas"⁽¹⁾ and he is so termed in all the manuscripts. On comparing the English and the two French versions, it is evident that Caxton must have been well acquainted with both. His prologue addressed to the Duke of Clarence contains, nominis mutatis, the whole of Jean de Vignay's Dedication to Prince John of France; while Chapters I and III are taken entirely from the translation of Jean Faron.⁽²⁾ The remainder of the Book is from the version of Jehan de Vignay, with one or two special insertions evidently from the pen of Caxton himself. These have been reprinted in Vol. I, pages 135-8.

⁽³⁾ Egidius Colonna was, in 1292, General of the Augustines, and in 1294, Archbishop of Bourges. He was a celebrated Theological Commentator, and upon his death, in 1316, at Avignon, his body was translated to Paris, where his effigy in black marble with a Latin epitaph existed before the French Revolution.—Les Msc. Franc., vol. i, page 224.

The following quotation from “The Antiquary,” by Sir Walter Scott, looks so much like a true bibliographical anecdote that I am tempted to quote it, although not a single statement is founded on fact:—“Davy Wilson, commonly called Snuffy Davy, bought the Game of Chess, 1474, the first book ever printed in England, from a stall in Holland for about 2 groschen or twopence of our money. He sold it to Osborne for £20 and as many books as came to £20 more. Osborne resold this inimitable windfall to Dr. Askew for 60 guineas. At Dr. Askew’s sale this inestimable treasure blazed forth in its true value, and was purchased by Royalty itself for One hundred and seventy pounds.”

colophon.⁽¹⁾ Imperial Library, Paris.—Four copies, Nos. 6737, 6896, 6897, and 6897^a, of which the first, illustrated with 44 miniatures, is the finest, having been written for Louis de Bruges, whose Arms are frequently seen in the illuminations. No. 7138, in the same library, contains the first two books only, and bears the following remarkable title: "Cy commence le recueil des troyennes ystoires translaté du latin en francois par messire Guillaume de Failly,⁽²⁾ évesque de Tournay et abbé de Saint-Bertin, en la ville de Saint-Omer en Flandres. Au commandement de très redoubté prince monsieur Phelippe duc de Bourgongne," &c.

REMARKS.—The history of the Trojan War, a favorite subject for several centuries with European writers, was the foundation of numerous Romances. Of these the chief were the apocryphal history by Dares Phrygius, a Trojan Priest, celebrated by Homer; the account of the same war by Dictys Cretensis, a supposititious historian; and the History of the Siege of Troy by Guido of Colonna, a native of Messina in Sicily, who wrote in the 13th Century.⁽³⁾ The rise of these histories, their growth under the editorial care of successive scribes, the incorporation of incidents from other Romances, and their final development in the compilation of "Le Recueil des Histoires de Troye," form a curious and typical example of this class of literature.⁽⁴⁾ According to the unanimous testimony of all printed editions and all manuscripts of the complete work, "Le Recueil" was the composition of Raoul Lefevre, Chaplain and Secretary to Philippe le Bon, Duke of Burgundy: but in the manuscript No. 7138, noticed above, the first two books are attributed to Guillaume Fillastre. And this is remarkable—that Lefevre succeeded Fillastre (who was a voluminous author) in the office of Secretary to the Duke. Probably finding his predecessor's history unfinished, he took it up, and after adding Book III, issued the whole under his own name. In that age a similar course was by no means uncommon, nor was it an infringement of any recognised literary right: we can hardly, therefore, with M. Paris, call it (even if true) "une grande fraude littéraire." On the other hand, several copies were issued with the name of Lefevre while Fillastre was yet alive, and Caxton, who was contemporary with both writers, ascribes the whole work to Lefevre. Nor is there any noticeable variation in style between the two portions, as might be expected if composed by two authors; indeed, the style of "Le Recueil" is the same as that of "Les fais du Jason," an acknowledged work of Lefevre.

⁽¹⁾ More full particulars of this curious manuscript, which is noticed by Mr. Douce, in his "Illustrations of Shakspeare," p. 354, may be interesting. It is on fine vellum, beautifully written and illuminated, having the Royal Arms of England on the first leaf in each book. A Table of seven leaves, in which, however, the chapters are not numbered, opens the book. "Cy commence la Table des rubriques du liure nomme Hercules." On folio 1, under an illumination, the Romance begins, "Tous les fils de Noel espars p' les climatz," thus englished by Caxton, "At what tyme alle the children of Noe were sprad bi the climatz." The First Book ends "Et ainsi fut Troyes destruite la premiere fois / pourquor je metteray fin a ce premier liure," &c. In Book II the first eight lines of explanatory matter, in both French and English printed editions, are here omitted. This book ends "Cy fine le second liure Dercules." Book III commences "Les deux liures precedés nous a layde de dieu auos traittie des deux premieres destructions de troyes, &c. Ending "Et a tant fine ce present liure nomme hercules." The title of "Hercules," which appears attached to each of the three books, is difficult to explain, as they contain the text (and that only) of the work so celebrated throughout Europe as "Le Recueil des histoires de Troyes." Hercules indeed figures largely in the first two books, but in the third is not even mentioned. Another curious fact about this manuscript is, that whereas all the other known manuscripts have prologues or epilogues attributing the composition to Raoul le Fevre, this contains the text only of the Romance, which with a few immaterial exceptions is the same as that attributed to Lefevre; not so, however, the Rubrics at the head of Chapters, which in all cases are quite different in verbiage but not in sense, and in several cases are omitted altogether.

Steevens asserts that Shakspeare derived the greater portion of his materials for the play of "Troilus and Cressida" from Lydgate's metrical composition, "The last destruction of Troy;" but Douce, in his "Illustrations," is far nearer the truth in tracing the incidents employed by our great Poet to Caxton's translation of "Le Recueil des Histoires de Troie." The latter was popular, and frequently reprinted long after Lydgate's laboured metre had become antiquated.

EXISTING COPIES.

1. BRITISH MUSEUM. General Library (C. 21. d.)—Perfect In unusually fine condition. Purchased by the Trustees, in 1844, for £200, of M. Libri. It is clean, and almost free from manuscript notes. Measurement, $10\frac{7}{8} \times 8$ inches.

2. The same.—Another copy. (C. 12. c.) A large Fragment, consisting of the Second Book in good condition, wanting two folios near the end. Measurement, $10\frac{3}{4} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Note here the catchwords which appear in manuscript at the foot of the first five rectos of each quinternion: they were inserted for the same purpose as signatures, and in some cases, as was intended, have disappeared under the knife of the binder.

3. PARIS. Imperial Library.—Slightly imperfect, wanting 32nd leaf in Book II, and having leaves 71 and 72 in the same book transposed after 78. A portion of the 51st leaf in Book III is also wanting. In very fine condition; was purchased at Brussels in the early part of this Century by M. de la Serna for 150 francs. Measurement $10\frac{3}{4} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

4. HER MAJESTY, Windsor Castle.—Made perfect with a few leaves presented by the Duke of Roxburghe to George III. This volume, a present from Jacob Bryant, was among the few books retained by George IV when the Royal Library was made over to the Nation. A manuscript note states that it formerly was the property of Joseph Ames, the Bibliographer, who has inserted a leaf of the English edition between folios 8 and 9 for the sake of comparing the types. It is well printed, of good size, clean, and free from manuscript disfigurements. Measurement, $10\frac{1}{2} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

5. EARL OF ASHBURNHAM.—Imperfect; formerly in Earl Spencer's Library, who obtained it at the Roxburghe sale. It wants now leaves 30 to 60 inclusive, 139th and 148th, the beginning and end being perfect. It is in very good condition, clean, and free from manuscript notes. Measurement, $10\frac{1}{2} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

6. EARL SPENCER.—Perfect. Without the original blanks, otherwise in the finest possible condition, and uncut; clean, and free from manuscript notes. Purchased at Watson Taylor's sale, 1823. Measurement, $11\frac{1}{2} \times 8\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

MANUSCRIPTS.—There does not appear to be a copy in the British Museum. The beautifully illuminated example in the Imperial Library, Paris, No. 6953, is peculiarly interesting from having been executed for that celebrated patron of literature, Louis de Bruges, whose name in the epilogue is a substitution for that of the Duke of Burgundy. (See Les Manuscrits François, vol. ii, page 336.)

REMARKS.—Caxton, in the preface to his English version of Jason, informs us that the original was a previous production by the Author of "Les Histoires de Troye," and therefore, according to him, by Raoul Lefevre. But the name of Guillaume Fillastre is associated with the compilation of "Les Histoires de Troye" (See ante page 14), and it is remarkable that Fillastre wrote also a very elaborate treatise on the "Six Fleeces,"⁽¹⁾ the first of which he entitled "Jason;" but this is a work differing entirely from that under review, being a treatise upon the Virtue of Magnanimity. We have, therefore, no reason for doubting that Lefevre wrote "Les fais du Jason."

The existence of this edition was first made known in England by a letter from M. Van Praet to Dr. Dibdin, who sent an account of it to the "Gentleman's Magazine" for July, 1812.

Contradictory opinions are held as to the Printer by whom, the time when, and the place where, this work was printed. Bernard attributes it to Ulric Zel of Cologne, about 1470, under the direction of the Duke of Burgundy; while Brunet, Van Praet, and the English Bibliographers claim it for Caxton at the same place. The question has been fully discussed in the first volume of this work, where evidence has been adduced to show that the production of all the books printed with these types must be traced to Mansion, either alone or assisted by Caxton. We will only therefore remark, with reference to this work and the "Meditacions," that the even length of the lines proves them to be later productions than those in which the lines are more uneven; and this again is plain evidence that if these two works were printed by Mansion (as doubtless they were) it must have been after 1478; but if we attribute them to Caxton, we must suppose him to have forsaken his own establishment at the Red-pale, in or after the year 1480 (being the period when he first adopted the practice of making his lines of an even length), for the purpose of printing abroad what he had every facility for printing at home.

⁽¹⁾ Consult Les Mss. Franc. &c., vol. i, page 269; vol. ii, pages 336-340. From the second illumination in the manuscript of Fillastre here noticed, we learn the titles and something of the design of his great work on the Six Fleeces. They were, "Jason" (Magnanimity), "Jacob" (Justice), "Gideon" (Prudence), "Moses" (Fidelity), "Job" (Patience), and "Otoniel" (?) (Clemency). M. Paris supposes that the first two only were composed, when the death of the Author stopped further progress; but he was evidently unaware of a third which exists in the Royal Library of Copenhagen. "Le Catalogue des Manuscrits François du moyen âge de la Bibliothèque de Copenhagen," par M. Abraham includes 800 books printed ante 1480, and 20,000 manuscripts; among the latter is "L'Histoire de la Toison d'Or," by Guil. Fillastre, which includes "Jason," "Jacob," and "Gideon." The first two are well known, but the last is unnoticed by M. de Reiffenberg (Histoire de la Toison d'Or, page 13), as well as by M. Paris. "La Toison de Gideon" commences thus:—"Tres excellent et tres reluissant prince et mon tres redoubte Seigneur qui en resplendeur de vertus et de puissance reluisies et qui à œuvres vertueuses appliquez vostre excellent engin comme la haultesse & dignite de vos tres nobles principautes requierent. Pour ce que vous comme chief et souverain du tres noble ordre de la Thoyson d'Or auez commandé a moy Guillaume euesque de Tournay escrire des six thoysons dont par la sainte Escripture en diuers pas Maintenant est a parler de dame Prudence de laquelle par la grace et ayde de Dieu nous ferons le tiers liure qui sera de la thoyson de Gedéon."—See Journal des Savans for July, 1846. A manuscript of the Second Golden Fleece on "Justice" is in the British Museum (Reg. 19, A. vi.)—"compilé par reuerend pere en dieu Guillaume euesque de Tournay."

EXISTING COPIES.

1. ETON COLLEGE.—Perfect. An exceedingly fine copy, being beautifully clean, free from manuscript notes, and uncut, with the blank leaf at the beginning. Measurement, $11\frac{3}{8} \times 8\frac{1}{4}$ inches. Bequeathed in 1799 by Anthony M. Storer, Esq., of Purley Park, near Reading. As regards printing, paper, and condition, this volume is without exception the finest copy extant of books printed in this type.

2. PARIS. Imperial Library.—Perfect, wanting only the blank leaf at the beginning. Clean, and free from manuscript notes. Measurement, $11\frac{3}{8} \times 8\frac{1}{8}$ inches. Purchased for this library in 1808, for 2 louis, by M. de la Serna, from a stranger, who had obtained it for half that sum.⁽¹⁾ Van Praet describes it as being then, together with a printed work of Colard Mansion, entitled "Le Quadrilogue d'Alain Chartier," bound between veritable boards,⁽²⁾ and having a note upon the first page, in manuscript of the same age, Desen boeck hort toe licken van Banselen: or, "This book belongs to Lisette van Banselen."

3. THE SAME. Library of the Arsenal.—Imperfect, wanting the 8th leaf, which is supplied in manuscript. Several ragged and torn leaves. Formerly in the library of the Duc de la Valliere, which was purchased by the Count d'Artois. Afterwards in the possession of M. de Baulmy, who founded this collection.

No record of any public SALE can be found.

NO. 5.—MEDITATIONS SUR LES SEPT PSEAULMES PENITENCIAULX.

Folio. Without Printer's Name, Place, or Date. (147-?)

COLLATION.—Three 4th and one 5^a = 34 leaves, of which the last only is blank.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. The only Type used is No. 1. The lines are for the most part fully spaced out, though now and then there is a deficiency in this respect, which only occurs, however, on the verso of the folios, the recto throughout being fully spaced. This peculiarity is observable to a greater or less extent in all the French books printed in this type. The full lines measure 5 inches, and 31 make a full page. There are no signatures, folios, nor catchwords. Space is left, with a director, for the insertion of 3-line initials.

REMARKS.—This work is a translation from the original Latin of Cardinal Pierre d'Ailly, entitled, "Meditaciones Circa Septem Psalmos Penitenciales." It was composed about the end of the 14th Century, and translated shortly after into French, but by whom is uncertain, although, from the style, it is supposed by several of his biographers to have been from the pen of the Cardinal himself. It has been attributed to Antoine Belard, but on insufficient grounds, as his version, printed at Lyons, 1542, was a much later production. The Cardinal was the Author of about 42 works, which were very popular in their day. There does not appear to be any copy in manuscript either of the Latin or French versions of the "Meditacions" in the Bib. Imp., Paris, nor in the various collections of the British Museum. In 1483 it was printed in Latin by Ant. Cayllant. A printed copy of the 15th Century, and of German workmanship, but without place or date, is in the British Museum. It begins, "Incipiunt deuote meditationes Circa septē psalmos penitenciales per reuerēdissimum christo patrē dūm Petrum de Ayliaco, Cardinalem," &c., and agrees with the French translation. Another edition bears date, "Impressi argētine anno dñi. m. ccccxc." It was also reprinted in the "Orthodoxographia." Basil, 1555. The Commentary on the Penitential Psalms, printed by Wynken de Worde, was the composition of Bishop Alcock, and entirely differs from this.

Pierre d'Ailly,⁽¹⁾ of poor but intelligent parents, was born at Compiègne in 1350. His father, Colard d'Ailly, at the cost of many personal privations, managed to procure for his son a sound elementary education. The aptitude and talents displayed by the young Pierre obtained for him at an early age a Bursar's appointment in the College of Navarre, Paris, even then one of the most famous in Europe. In 1372 the name of Pierre d'Ailly, then twenty-two years of age, appears for the first time in the College Records in the class of "Théologiens." He now embraced with ardour the opinions of the "Realists" against the "Nominalists," and wrote and declaimed publicly. He also made himself master of the philosophy and science of his age, and composed several treatises on Astronomy, a study to which he was much addicted, as well as upon metaphysical subjects. At the age of twenty-five he is described as being the greatest discoverer, the best tutor, and the most skilful debater of his time. In 1380 the University of Paris conferred upon him the degree of Doctor; and in the succeeding year he delivered his famous oration on the healing of the Papal schism which at that time was shaking Christendom. It was probably this display, made before the Duc d'Anjou, then Regent of France, and the greatest nobles of the court, which procured him the benefice of Noyon, a post he held till 1384. In this year he was recalled to Paris to take the Grand Mastership of the College of Navarre, where only twelve years previously he had been studying as a pupil. Here Pierre d'Ailly laboured hard for the good of his alma mater, which now reached its highest fame as a seat of learning. At this period too his renown was much increased by his successful pleadings before Pope Clement VII against the novel doctrine of the Immaculate Conception of the Virgin Mary. In 1389 he was elected Chancellor of the University of Paris, as well as Confessor and Almoner to the young king, Charles VI. Here, already versed in Church politics, he became initiated in Court mysteries, and, by a happy mixture of wisdom, wit, and polished manners, greatly increased his fame and power. In 1391 he succeeded Louis d'Orleans as Archdeacon of Cambray, a position he occupied for four years. In 1394, the Canons of La Sainte Chapelle having become very neglectful of their duties, he was appointed to the responsible office of "Treasurer," in which capacity he initiated some sweeping reforms. The year 1396 saw him, after much opposition from the Duke of Burgundy, in the arduous office of Bishop of Cambray, in which his firmness and prudence surmounted the difficulties by which he was surrounded, and exercised the most happy influence in his diocese. His favours and patronage were conferred on those most worthy by their zeal and abilities to receive them, and he was especially anxious to avoid even the appearance of simony. In 1411 he was chosen Cardinal, and it must have been about this period that he gave to the world his "Meditationes Circa Septem Psalmos Penitentiales," upon which the present article is founded. He distinguished himself at the Councils of Pisa and Constance, and was President of the Session at which John Huss was condemned to be burnt. He died in the height of his fame in the year 1420. For a most interesting life of this celebrated Prelate the reader can refer to an article in the Mémoires de la Société d'Emulation de Cambrai for 1825, written by M. Arthur Dinaux, and entitled "Notice historique et littéraire sur le Cardinal Pierre d'Ailly."

(1) The number of variations to be found in the orthography of Pierre d'Ailly's name are almost equal to those of Wynken de Worde already noticed (vol. i, page 67). The following may be taken as a sample:—Ailly, Aillaco, Alliac, Aliaco, Alyaco, Eliaco, Ayliao, Haliaco, Ailliac, Alliac, and even Alciac and Artiac.

The typographical history of this book has been already fully discussed in Vol. I, chapter v. To the remarks there made the reader's attention is directed, as well as to the statements in the present volume when describing "Les fais du Jason," a work with which this, in a typographical sense, is intimately associated. It will be sufficient to state here that there seems good reason for attributing "Meditacions" to the Press of Colard Mansion of Bruges, at a period not earlier than 1478.

The only EXISTING COPY at present known was discovered in the General Library of the British Museum, in 1841, by Mr. J. Winter Jones, bound up with "Les quatre derrenieres choses." It is perfect, in an excellent state of preservation, clean, and free from all disfigurements. It has the final blank-leaf, the verso of which is covered with quotations in the handwriting of the 15th Century. These quotations are extended over the first recto (which is also a blank) of the book mentioned above as being bound up with it. Measurement, $11\frac{1}{2} \times 8$ inches. It was one of the old Royal Library books, imperfectly catalogued. For an article on both works, from the pen of Mr. Jones, see Archæologia, vol. xxxi, page 412.

TYPE No. 2.

No. 6.—LES QUATRE DERRENIERES CHOSES ADVENIR. Folio. Without Printer's Name, Date, or Place. (147-?)

COLLATION.—Nine 4^m = 72 leaves, of which the first only is blank.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—Type No. 2 only is used. The lines are of very irregular length, but, when fully spaced out, measure 5 inches ; 28 lines to a page. Without signatures, folios, or catchwords. Space is left at the commencement of every chapter for the insertion of a 3 or 4-line initial, with director. Commencing with a blank leaf the table follows on the 2nd recto, the first 3 lines being in red ink.

The Text begins :—

Ce present traictie est diuise en quatre parties principa les : Desquelles chascune contient trois autres singuli res parties en la fourme qui sensuit :

The Table ends with 8 lines on the verso, under which immediately follows the title to the prologue in one red line.

Cp commence le prologue des quatre choses derrenieres :

Then the prologue itself, with space for a 4-line initial QD, with director.

Emorare nouissima et in eternū non peccabis

At the foot of the third recto,

Cp fine le prologue de la premiere des quatre derrenieres choses aduenir :

The verso is blank. On 4th recto, at head of page, in red ink,

Cp commence la premiere partie des quatre derrenieres
choses qui sont a aduenir :

The Text ends on 72nd verso :—

quilz pourueissent aux choses derrenieres / dont la frequēte memoire et recordacion rapelle des pechiez a culpe aux ver tus et conferme en bones oeuvres / par quoy on parvient a la gloire eternelle : Amen

Explicit liber de quatuor Pouissimis

An important typographical peculiarity in this work is the mode in which the Printer has employed red ink for the title-lines of Chapters. As will be seen by reference to Vol. I, where the modus operandi is explained, and illustrated by a facsimile page (Plate VIII) from this very book, the red ink overlies the black. This curious and primitive practice is not seen in any books except that under notice, and those printed by Colard

Mansion of Bruges. Another typographical characteristic which intimately connects this book with those printed in Type No. 1 is the existence of two small holes on the outer margin of each leaf, made by points in use by the Pressman. These, it should be noticed, occur in all the works for which Type No. 1 was used, but in none, except the present, printed with Type No. 2; nor indeed in any English printed books. Again, we find among the undoubted first issues of the Press at Westminster that the books in folio, such as "The Life of Jason," "Dictes," "Canterbury Tales," "Cordiale," &c., have all 29 lines to the page, while "Les quatre derrenieres choses" has but 28. On taking, however, the actual measurement, it will be seen that the depth of the page is exactly the same as in the Type No. 1 books. Evidence has been already produced to show that the five books in Type No. 1 were printed in Bruges by Colard Mansion alone, or assisted by Caxton, and to the same source we have no hesitation in ascribing "Les quatre derrenieres choses."

MANUSCRIPTS.—In the British Museum (Royal 19 C iii), there is a beautiful copy on fine vellum, evidently the work of a Flemish artist, in the 15th Century. It begins "Cy commence le prologue des quatre derrenieres choses qui s'ot a venir." The first chapter is headed by a representation of two bishops, with two attendants—one of the bishops is transcribing a volume with a quill pen. The text is the same as our printed book, and has, like that, red-ink headings to every chapter. The Imperial Library, Paris, also possesses a very beautiful copy (No. 7310), rich in illuminations, which was executed for that celebrated patron of literature, Louis de Bruges. The manuscript "Traicte des 4 choses dernieres" in the British Museum (Royal 16 E ii), is entirely different to this, beginning "In omnibus operibus tuis memorare nouissima tua et in eternum non peccabis, &c. A ses treschers freres & seurs en dieu," &c.

REMARKS.—The title, "De quatuor novissimis," was applied to many religious treatises of the 14th and 15th Centuries; and so many Latin manuscripts of distinct works have come down to us that it is difficult to distinguish between them; nor were the early printed editions less numerous, Hain, in his "Repertorium Bibliographicum," giving the titles of twenty-one editions printed in the 15th Century. They all agree, however, in one particular, viz: that no copy gives the name of its Author. The Latin original of the present work is attributed to Denis de Leewis, natif de Rikel, who died in 1471: it was printed at Antwerp about 1486. Early French anonymous versions were also very numerous, and it is fortunate that a manuscript in the Royal Library, Brussels, has preserved the name of the Author to whom we are indebted for the present translation. It bears the following colophon: "Cy fine le traittie des quatre dernieres choses, translaté de latin en francois par Jo. Mielot l'an de grace mil cccc liij."

The name of Jean Mielot, Author, Translator, and Secretary to Philip, Duke of Burgundy, is little known, although he was the translator of at least twenty-three different works, the titles of which, as they have not hitherto been collected, are given in a note below.⁽¹⁾ Philippe le Bon, as is well known, employed many Secretaries for the purpose of adding to the treasures of his library by translations, collations, commentaries, &c. In this way were employed Guy d'Angers, David Aubert, de Hesdin, Droïn Ducret, de Dijon, and others. They brought into use that peculiar style of writing termed "grosse bâtarde," which, at a later date, Colard Mansion took as a pattern for his types. Among the Duke's Secretaries one of the most indefatigable was Jean Mielot. He united in himself the qualifications of Author, Translator, and Scribe, as he lets us know in the manuscript, "Traité de vieillesse et de jeunesse," now in the Royal Library, Copenhagen. He was born at Gaissart, near Ponthieu, was educated for the Church, and was a Canon of St. Peter at Lille. Many of his manuscripts, still extant, represent him on bended knee offering his works to his Royal Patron.

The only EXISTING COPY known was discovered by Mr. J. Winter Jones, while re-cataloguing a portion of the old Royal Library in the British Museum. It was bound in the same volume as the "Meditations," already described at page 19, to which the reader is referred for further particulars. It is in very good condition, large in size, and free from manuscript notes, except on the blank fly-leaf at the beginning, where, among some scribbling, appears "To my master, Doctor Shorton." Measurement, $11\frac{1}{2} \times 8$ inches.

NO. 7.—PROPOSITIO JOHANNIS RUSSELL. Quarto. Without Printer's Name, Date, or Place. (147-?)

COLLATION.—Four printed leaves, the recto of the first and the verso of the last being blank.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. Only one Type, No. 2, is used. The lines are very irregular in length, a full line measuring 4 inches. A full page has 22 lines, without signatures or catchwords. The speech, which is all in one paragraph, bears evidence of having been printed a page at a time. It commences with a 2-line space for the insertion of an initial, with a small director, and has been reprinted in full by Dr. Dibdin.

The Text begins on the 1st verso:—

Propositio Clarissimi Oratoris . Magistri Jo-hannis Russell decretorum doctoris ac ad hunc Ambasiatoris christianissimi Regis Edwardi

(For the entire page see Vol. I, Plate VII.)

The Text ends with 12 lines on the 4th recto, of which the last three are—

phare ad dei laudem / et exaltationem fidei christi-ane nostri q3 serenissimi regis robur . solacium revelationem q3 / et gloriam plebis sue . amen

No MANUSCRIPT copy of this oration appears to be known.

REMARKS.—In the eighth volume of the “Censura Literaria,” page 351, appeared the first public notice of this tract, which a glance at the facsimile (Vol. I, Plate VII) will show to be printed with Caxton’s Type No. 2 ; but, as already seen, those same types were used for “Les quatre derrenieres choses,” probably at Bruges, by Colard Mansion, and he it was who in all probability was employed, by Caxton himself, to print this tract. Whether this was so, or whether, as M. Bernard believes (see De l’origine de l’Imprimerie, vol. ii, page 429), the speech was printed as a first attempt of the Westminster Press, because “Lord John Russell devait tenir à conserver son discours, comme un témoignage de son honorable mission sur le continent,” the reader must settle for himself. To me it appears most likely that it was issued at Bruges at no long period after its delivery, and before Caxton’s final departure for England. At that town, both with the subjects of the Duke of Burgundy and the “English Nation” there resident, it would secure a good circulation : not so if issued seven years after its delivery in another country.

The history of John Russell and his printed oration, as connected with Caxton, is of considerable interest, although till now little noticed. Wiffen does not mention his name, but Lord Campbell, in his “Lives of the Lord Chancellors,” vol. i, reckons him among the ancestors of the Bedford family, notwithstanding the dissimilarity between the Armorial bearings of the two houses.

John Russell, “Orator clarissimus,” Bishop of Lincoln and Lord Chancellor, held many offices of trust under three Sovereigns. He was born in the parish of St. Peter’s, Winchester, in the beginning of the reign of Henry VI, and commenced his education there. At an early age he went to the University of Oxford, where he obtained the degree of Doctor of Decrees. In 1449 he was made fellow of New College ; was afterwards appointed to a prebendal stall in Salisbury, and in 1466 to the Archdeaconry of Berkshire. On the latter appointment he removed to Court, where he was much noticed by Edward IV. In September, 1467, he was commissioned by the King, together with Lord Hastings, Lord Scales, and others, to conclude a treaty of marriage between the King’s sister Margaret and the Duke of Burgundy. A few months later he was engaged in arranging the trade relationship between this country and Flanders. It was probably then, if not at an earlier period, that he became acquainted with our Printer. His name appears often after this as assisting in the negotiation of various treaties. In February, 1469-70, “Messire Galiard, chevalier ; Thomas Vaghan, Escuyer et Tresorier de la Chambre ; et Jehan Russell, Docteur en Decret, Arcediacre de Berkswir,” accompanied by Garter King at Arms, were commissioned by King Edward IV to invest the Duke of Burgundy with the Order of the Garter. On this occasion the oration which forms the foundation of the present article was delivered. The investiture took place at Ghent, and here, if Caxton were present, of which however there is no positive evidence, he would again make acquaintance with John Russell. In 1476, the Archdeacon was raised to the bishopric of Rochester, and in 1480 translated to Lincoln. In March, 1483, he appeared as "Orator" before Pope Sixtus IV (see Harleian MS. No. 433), and was probably in Rome when his Sovereign, Edward IV, who had appointed him one of his Executors, breathed his last. In the short reign of Edward V, he was appointed Lord Chancellor, to which office he was re-appointed by Richard III. In 1485, he retired to private life, and died in January 1494. He was interred in Lincoln Cathedral, under an altar tomb in the Chantry Chapel, founded by him on the south side of the Lady Chapel, and in the inscription on his tomb, which is as follows, his employment on embassies is specially alluded to.

He was the first Chancellor of Oxford appointed for life, in which University he was very popular. England also should keep his name in memory if only for the great change he initiated in promulgating the Statutes of the Realm in the vulgar tongue, instead of Latin or French ; a practise continued ever after. Sir Thomas More thus draws his character : " A wyse man and a good, and of much experyence ; and one of the best learned menne undoubtedly that Englande had in hys time." The arms borne by Bishop Russell were, Azure, two chevronels, or, between three roses argent : also the more ancient bearing of argent, a chevron between three cross-crosslets fitchy sable. Both these, with his device, a throstle (?) carrying in its beak an inscribed scroll, IE SVIS LE RVSCCELLVY may still be seen in the dining-hall at the ancient episcopal palace at Buckden.

In the British Museum (Royal 14 C vii) is an interesting manuscript "Matthæi Paris Historia a conquestu Angliæ ad A.D. 1259," containing a long Autograph by Bishop Russell, ending with the following maledictory colophon :—"Script^u p manū meam ppriam apud bukdene x^{mo} die Junij A^o 1488. Jo. Lincolñ. Qui deleuerit seu corruperit hoc scriptū / Anathema sit." Another manuscript (*Cotton. Nero. EXISTING COPIES.

1. EARL SPENCER.—Perfect, and uncut.—It appears to have been bound up by mistake in a volume of blank paper intended for manuscript alone, being in the original binding, and the whole volume otherwise consisting of the common manuscript hand of the 15th Century. The writing is carried on over both the initial and final blank pages of the printed tract. These manuscripts, of which Dibdin gives the titles, are of slight interest, and afford no indication of local execution. The printed copy measures $8\frac{1}{2} \times 5\frac{1}{2}$ inches. It was discovered in cataloguing the library of John Brand, which was sold by Mr. Stewart, in 1807, and where it appeared among the manuscripts (Part I, Lot 30) "A work on Theology and Religion, with five leaves at the end, a very great curiosity, very early printed on wooden blocks or type." The Marquis of Blandford bought it at the reasonable price of £2 5s. At the sale of his library in 1819 (Lot 5752), Earl Spencer was obliged to give £126 for it. It was for many years considered as unique.

2. EARL OF LEICESTER, Holkham.—Perfect (the two inner leaves transposed), and in good preservation. Measurement, $7\frac{1}{2} \times 5\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Apparently part of a collection formed by Thomas, Earl of Leicester, in the reign of George II, when it was in the original vellum wrapper, but since bound by Bedford.

NO. 8.—INFANCIA SALVATORIS. Quarto. Without Printer's Name, Date, or Place. (147-?)

COLLATION.—Eighteen printed leaves, unsigned, consisting probably of one 4^a and two 3^{as}, including a blank both at beginning and end.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—The Type is all No. 2. There are 22 lines of uneven length to a full page, and a long line measures $3\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Without signatures, folios, or catchwords.

The Text begins thus on the recto of the first printed leaf:—

No MANUSCRIPT copy of this tract is in the British Museum. It differs entirely from Royal 13 A xiv, "De Xti infantia;" but agrees partially with the "Evangelium Infantie" attributed to St. James, and printed in vol. i of the "Codex apocryphus Novi Testamenti," by Fabricius. Of this latter there is a 14th-Century manuscript in the Public Library, Cambridge.

MANUSCRIPTS.—This work having been, as we gather from the prologue, translated for the purpose of printing, we cannot expect to find manuscripts of an earlier date than the printed book. In the Public Library, Cambridge, there is a 15th-Century transcript from the printed edition, but without prologues, and wanting some leaves at the end. There is also a Dutch version (Addit. 10290) in the British Museum.

REMARKS.—As already noticed when treating of the original French version of "Jason" its Compiler was Raoul Lefevre, Secretary to the Duke of Burgundy, and while in the service of the Duchess it seems most probable that Caxton became possessed of a copy. The date of imprint has been generally attributed by Bibliographers to the year 1475, but this is, I think, too early. The features of Caxton's history about that time seem to point, as already shown in Vol. I, to the year 1476 as the date of his settlement in England; and November 18th, 1477, is, as we know, the day on which the printing of "Dictes" was finished. Now the typographical appearance of "Jason" proves it to have been one of the very earliest products of the Westminster Press, and Caxton's remarks in the prologue to "Golden Legend" show the translation to have followed "The Recuyell" and "Chess-Book." The evidence, therefore, seems to point to a date immediately preceding "Dictes," or the early part of 1477, when the young Prince, to whom it was dedicated, would be six years old, and much more likely to make use of the work than if presented to him two years earlier.

EXISTING COPIES.

1. BRITISH MUSEUM. King's Library (C. 10. b. 3)—Not quite perfect, several leaves at the beginning having been mended, and the 8th partially supplied in facsimile by Whittaker. A red-ink line is ruled round every page. Clean, and free from manuscript notes. Measurement, $10\frac{3}{4} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

2. OXFORD. Bodleian.—Imperfect, wanting two leaves in the middle. Slightly stained, and with manuscript notes. Measurement, $10 \times 7\frac{5}{8}$ inches. On the 1st page is the Autograph "John Marsh, Bury."

3. EARL OF ASHBURNHAM.—Perfect. The finest copy known, being uncut, and having the original blank. Slightly stained. Measurement, $11\frac{1}{4} \times 8$ inches. From the library of R. Heber.

4. EARL DYSART.—Perfect, with the original blank and some additional blanks at the end; slightly soiled and patched at the beginning. Measurement, $10 \times 7\frac{1}{4}$ inches. From the Harleian Library.

5. EARL SPENCER.—Perfect. Slightly stained. Measurement, $10 \times 6\frac{7}{8}$ inches. From the library bequeathed by Dean Honeywood to Lincoln Cathedral, the Dean and Chapter having disposed of this and others to Dr. Dibdin in 1811.

6. J. LENOX, Esq., New York.—Imperfect, wanting a leaf in the middle; otherwise a fine copy. Measurement, $10\frac{1}{2} \times 7\frac{1}{4}$ inches. From the White Knights Library.

A fragment of ten leaves, extracted from an old book-cover, is in King Edward VI Grammar School, St. Albans. (See Remarks under "Boethius.")

No. 10.—THE DICTES AND SAYINGS OF THE PHILOSOPHERS. Folio.
"Enprynted by me William Caxton at Westmestre." 1477.
First Edition; without Colophon.

COLLATION. Eight 4^m and two 3^m, or 76 leaves, of which the 1st is blank.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. Only Type No. 2 is used. The lines are of very uneven length, the longest measuring 5 inches; 29 lines to a full page. Without folios, catchwords, or signatures. Space is left at the beginning of chapters for the insertion of 3-line initials, with director.

Commencing with a blank leaf, Earl Rivers's prologue follows.

The Text begins thus, on the 2nd recto :—

Here it is so that euery humayn Creature by the w suffraunce of our lord god is born i ordeigned to be subgette and thral vnto the stormes of fortune
 And so in diuerse i many sondry wyfes man is perplex:

The prologue finishes half-way down the 3rd recto—rather syn after my rudenes not expert, I in my manere folow wed my coppe and the ground I had to speke vpor: as here after ensietwis .

The verso is blank. The work itself commences on the 4th recto, with space left for a 4-line initial, with director.

Ezechias was the first Philosophir by whom through the wil and pleaser of oure lorde god Sapience was vnderstande and lawes recey-ued . whiche Ezechias saide that euery creature of good beleue ought to haue in hym sixtene vertues

The work concludes on the verso of the 73rd folio at foot, and is followed on the 74th recto by Caxton's epilogue and additions, commencing with space for 3-line initial.

Ere endeth the booke named the dictes or sayengis

Et sic est finis . . .

This book is remarkable as being the first which bears a plain statement of the place and time of its execution. It is thought by some to be really the first book printed in England. A few of the quarto pieces may perhaps have preceded it, but there is none that can be proved of earlier workmanship, and if, as there seems good reason for supposing, Caxton did not settle at Westminster before 1476, he would not have had time to produce much.

MANUSCRIPTS of this work are not uncommon. The British Museum possesses one in Latin, three in French, and two in English. Additional, 16906, is a beautifully illuminated manuscript on vellum, in the original Latin, 15th Century.—Royal, 16 F x, on parchment, 15th Century, "Cy commence les dis moraulx des philosophes tranlatez de latin en frâcois par noble homme Messire guilleme de Tignonuille .cheualier;" this contains the chapter of Socrates on women.—Royal, 19 A viii, on paper, 15th Century, the same as the last.—Royal, 19 B iv, vellum, 15th Century, same as the last. Of the two English manuscripts, one is the translation of Lord Rivers, apparently a copy from the first printed edition, and the other an earlier translation by Stevyn Scrope, both having points of great interest. The earlier, Harl. 2266, is on paper, 15th Century. Unfortunately this is in a very dilapidated state, wanting some leaves at the beginning and in the middle. The following colophon however remains :—"This boke byfore wretyn is callid in frensh l'ris ditz de philosophi⁹ and in Englysh for to sey the doctryne & y^e wysedō of the wyse auncyent philysophers as arystotle plato socrates tholome & suche oy^r translatid out of laten in to frensh to kyng Charles the vjth of fraunse by wylliam tyngnovyle knyght late provest of y^e Cyte of parys. And syth now late translatyd out of frensh tung in to englysh the yer of our lord M cccc l to John Fostalf knyght for his contemplacōn & solas by stevyn scrope squyer sonne in law to the seide Fostalle .Deo gracias." From this we learn that the translation of Stephen Scrope preceded that of Lord Rivers by about 26 years, and, on comparing the two, there seems reason for supposing that the Earl may have cast a glance over the performance of his predecessor while making his own translation. As a reason for this opinion compare the following short extract :—

STEUVYN SCROPE. 1460.

(Harl. MS. No. 2266, fol. 7a.)

Oomer was an Auncyent vercefier in grece & of the grettest estate among the grekys And he was after moyses v c yere & lx the which did many good thynggis & all y^e verceifiers of grece folowid his techyng.

The other English manuscript, Addit. 22,718, is on paper, and a verbatim copy from EARL RIVERS. c. 1476.

(From Caxton's 1st edition.)

oMer was an anucient vercier in Grece and of the grettest astate there. he was after moyses / v . c . lv . yere he made many goode thingis and alle the verifiers of grece folowed his discipline.

Caxton's printed edition, bearing date 28th November, 1477. The copyist has transmitted his name, "Thomas Cokke," in the following couplet:—

Si the ponatur . et mas sibi associatur
Et Cokke addatur . q scripsit sic noiciatur

It is an interesting fact that until the presentation of this volume to the Museum by Sir W. C. Trevelyan, Bart., in 1859, it had remained in his family since the year 1479, as appears from various Autographs in the volume. The only other we will notice is the oft-quoted but much over-rated manuscript in the Archiepiscopal Library, Lambeth. It is on vellum, and has one inconsiderable illumination, famous only on account of giving the sole representation known of Edward V. Earl Rivers is presenting a copy on bended knee (probably this very one) to the Prince, who is seated on his throne. By the Earl's side is portrayed an ecclesiastic with shaven crown, probably "Haywarde," whose name appears at the end of the volume as the writer. We may suppose the Earl to be in the act of reciting the metrical prologue which appears at the commencement, and the first five lines of which are—

This boke late translate here in sight
By Anthony Earl (erasure) that vertuous knyght
Pleas it to accepto to youre noble grace
And at youre convenient leysoure and space
It to see reede and vnderstonde

The writing is the usual secretary hand of the 15th Century,⁽¹⁾ and the date of transcription, as given in the colophon, is December 29th, 1477, or about six weeks after the publication of Caxton's printed edition, of which it is a verbatim copy, with the addition of the metrical prologue already noticed, and the following paragraph which precedes Caxton's prologue to the chapter on women—"And suffice you with the translation of the sayinges of thes Philosophres, And one William Caxton atte desire of my lorde Ryuers / emprinted many bokes after the tonour and forme of this boke / whiche Willm saide as foloweth:" then comes Caxton's chapter. In the Imperial Library, Paris, are the following manuscripts:—Latin 6652; French 7068^a and 7204.

REMARKS.—The Latin manuscripts, the earliest of which appears to have been executed about 1350, afford no clew to the name of the Author. The French translation is unanimously attributed to the celebrated Provost of Paris, Guillaume de Tignonville, who died in 1414.

The history of the English translation of this work is interesting. It appears that Earl Rivers, moved thereto by remembrance of relief from many worldly adversities, determined to pay his vows at the Shrine of St. James of Compostella. In the British Museum (C. 18. e. 2) is "An Abbreviation of the graces and indulgences which

(1) Dibdin, who evidently never saw it, describes it as "written in a fine roman type!"—Typ. Ant. i, page 63.

Alexāder vj granteth to all true believing people of every sexe or communitie of the grete hospytall of Saynt James of Cōpostella." This shrine had been for many years the favorite resort of those who intended a short pilgrimage. Many ships, and those of the largest burthen, were engaged in this passenger traffic, the chief port of embarkation being Southampton. Thence in the year 1473 the Earl sailed, and while on the voyage Lewis de Bretaylles, a Gascon Knight,⁽¹⁾ at the court of Edward IV, showed the Earl a copy, in French, of "Les dits moraux des philosophes," with which Lord Rivers was greatly delighted, retaining it for more intimate perusal. On his return to England, in the same year, the King appointed him one of the Governors of the Prince of Wales; and now, having more leisure, the Earl began a translation of the work into English, which, however, notwithstanding the assistance of an earlier translation by Scrope, occupied him some years, supposing it to be completed only a short time previously to its being printed in 1477. Earl Rivers evidently had a good opinion of Caxton's literary abilities, for he requested him "to oversee" his translation before printing it, and the result was the addition of a chapter "towching wymmen," introduced by a very characteristic prologue from Caxton's own pen. This prologue is replete with a quiet humour, which seems to reveal to us more of Caxton's real disposition than all his other writings. It proves also the intimate terms which must have existed between Lord Rivers and himself. (For a reprint, see Vol. I, page 141).

We may infer that this, the 1st edition, had a rapid sale, as about 1481 a 2nd edition (described further on) was produced in the same type, and page for page, the same as the original. To enable the reader to form his own judgment, facsimile plates of the last lines of the 1st edition; of the same with the unique colophon; and of the last lines and colophon of the 2nd edition, have been appended.

EXISTING COPIES.

1. BRITISH MUSEUM. General Library.—(C. 21. d.) Made perfect. It wanted three leaves when purchased of Mr. Maskell, but was perfected from a copy already in the Museum. In poor condition, being much stained, mended, and scribbled over. Measurement, $9\frac{1}{2} \times 6\frac{1}{2}$ inches. On the last page is the Autograph of "Tho: Cardyffe."

2. THE SAME.—(C. 21. d.)—Very imperfect, wants the 1st printed leaf, 24th, 31st, and last two. Much stained; every leaf cut close to the text, and mounted. Measurement, $8\frac{1}{2} \times 6\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Autographs of "Reginald Hughes" and "Edward Leight." Purchased in 1856, of Mr. Stevens, being the copy referred to above.

3. CAMBRIDGE. Public Library.—Imperfect, wanting the 1st printed leaf. In poor state, much soiled, and scribbled over. Measurement, $11\frac{1}{2} \times 7\frac{3}{4}$ inches. In Bishop More's collection.

⁽¹⁾ Louis de Bretaylles was noted for his prowess in the field. A curious challenge, exceeding in extravagance anything found in the old Romances, is preserved in Laned. MS. No. 582. It was accepted by Sir Jehan de Chocsa in a similar style.

4. THE SAME. Trinity College.—Perfect, and in good condition. Measurement, $11 \times 8\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

5. EARL SPENCER.—Perfect, in good condition, and clean, with the original blank. A copy of the large type "Hand Bill" is preserved in the beginning. Measurement, $10 \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

6. THE SAME.—Another copy. Not quite perfect, half of the 1st printed leaf being torn away; clean and large. Measurement, $11\frac{1}{2} \times 8$ inches. From Ratcliffe's library. This volume is interesting, as presenting the following unique distinction of a printed colophon at the end of the epilogue, the same in substance, but differing in orthography and arrangement from the colophon appended to the 2nd edition. (See the Plate).

Thus endeth this booke of the dyctes and notable wyse say-enges of the phyllosophers late translated and drawen out of frenshe into our englishe tonge by myr forsaide lord Cherle of Ayuers and lord Shales and by hys comandement sette in forme and emprinted in this manere as ye maye here in this booke see Whiche was fynished the xviij. day of the moneth of Nouembre. ⁊ the seuententh yere of the regne of kynge Edward the .fourth.

A slight examination will convince any one that the types and "setting up" of this copy are identical with the others; yet no other known copy of this edition has any colophon at all, and although at first sight this may appear to be printed with a blacker ink than the other portion of the page, and therefore to be a later addition, yet a careful examination leads to the conclusion that this appearance is due entirely to the blue lines which surround the type setting off the colour of the ink, and that the colophon is genuine, and was printed by the same pull of the press as the remainder of the page. That very few copies were issued with this addition may be inferred from the fact of ten others having come down to us without it. It is indeed hard to imagine what reason could have induced Caxton to add the colophon at all, as the Translator's name, the Printer, with the place and year of imprint, are plainly stated in the epilogue. It was probably an afterthought, when there remained only a few sheets to be printed.

7. EARL OF ASHBURNHAM.—Perfect; slightly soiled, and with few manuscript notes. Measurement $11\frac{1}{2} \times 7\frac{3}{4}$ inches.

8. EARL OF JERSEY.—Imperfect, wanting the last two leaves. Slightly stained. Measurement $10\frac{1}{2} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches. At the end is Caxton's "Moral Prouerbes of Christyne."

9. H. HUTH, Esq.—Imperfect, wanting 7th, 49th, and 73rd leaves. Very fine and clean. Measurement, $11\frac{1}{2} \times 8\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Purchased for £80 from Lilly.

10. The MILLER LIBRARY.—Perfect, with original fly-leaf. Uncut, clean, and free from manuscript. Measurement, $11\frac{1}{2} \times 8\frac{3}{8}$ inches.

11. ———— Esq.—Imperfect, wanting the last three leaves. Rather soiled. Measurement, 10×7 inches. Purchased anonymously at Dr. Bliss's sale.

No notice having been taken in the early catalogues of any diversity of edition, it has been found impossible to class all the books with accuracy. Those copies, therefore, of which the edition is uncertain have the particulars inserted here, with the 1st edition, notices of the 2nd or 3rd editions appearing under their respective heads.

REMARKS.—From the small portion remaining of the original work it is impossible to state with accuracy under what particular class of service-books it should be ranged. To all appearance it is part of a Primer, or "Horæ secundum consuetudinem Angliæ;" though its diminutive size renders it improbable that it contained, as well as the Hours, the Litany, the Vigils of the Dead, and all the miscellaneous prayers usually found in this class of books. The above fragment will be found to include the following portions of the Suffragia at Lauds:—St. Thomas of Canterbury (the last few words only), St. Nicholas, St. Mary Magdalene, St. Katharine, St. Margaret; after which, in the four leaves that are wanting, there is room for All Saints, the Prayer for Peace, the Versicle and Response, Benedicamus domino, Deo gracias, and the commencement of the Suffragia of the Three Kings, the rest thereof occupying, as above, the head of the second portion of the fragment. Then follow the Suffragia of St. Barbara and the concluding verse Benedicam' dño Deo g's, with which the service ends. On comparing this with the Horæ of the same period it will be seen that these prayers always occur at the end of Lauds, and are peculiar in their order to the English Church, with the exception of the Three Kings and St. Barbara, which, in this sequence, are peculiar to this fragment. Suffragia of the Three Kings, and of St. Barbara, are found amongst the miscellaneous commemorations in most of the English Primers; but those of St. Barbara, as found in this fragment, differ altogether from those which occur elsewhere. The evidence which a perfect volume might afford being wanting, the following suggestion, by Mr. Bradshaw, of Cambridge, is offered:—It is well known that the Esterlings were a thriving and influential Corporation in Caxton's time, consisting of German Merchants from the City of Cologne and the other Towns in the Hanseatic League, and occupying the Steel Yard in Cannon Street as their London residence, with All Hallows the Great as their Parish Church, and St. Barbara as their Patron Saint. Now in their accustomed service, comprising Matins and Lauds, the Suffrages of the Three Kings of Cologne, which, as already remarked, do not commonly occur at those hours, would be most appropriate, not on account of the name so much as the subject of the prayer, which is for success in trade, and for peace and health in travelling;—"concede propitius . . . ut itinere quo ituri sumus, celebritate, letitiâ, gratiâ et pace, ad loca destinata in pace et salute et negotio bene peracto cum omne prosperitate, salvi et sani redire valeamus." This alone proves very little, but when we find that the next suffrages are those of St. Barbara, whose name never occurs in the English Lauds, but to whom the Esterlings prayed as their Patron Saint, it becomes probable that the fragment before us was part of an Anglican Primer (or Horæ), with additional prayers, for their especial use. And if these German Merchants, in whose country the Typographic Art had made great progress, wished to have this, their daily service, printed, to whom could they go but to Caxton, the only Printer then in England.

Should this view be correct it considerably increases the bibliographical value of the fragment, which is otherwise of great interest as being, in all probability, the earliest English-printed service in existence; and which, from the unevenness in the printing and the early types, must have been one of the first products of the Westminster Press.

The fragment on which the foregoing remarks have been founded is in the Bodleian Library (Douce Fragments). When originally extracted from an old book-cover it formed a half-sheet, but now two quarters. They measure $4\frac{1}{2} \times 3\frac{1}{2}$ inches, and $4\frac{1}{2} \times 3\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

No. 12.—CHAUCER'S CANTERBURY TALES. Folio. Sine ullâ notâ.
First Edition. (1478?)

COLLATION.—Forty 4th, one 3^d, one 5^a, one 3^a, one 5^a, one 3^a, one 5^a, and one 2^d; making together 372 leaves, of which the 1st only is blank.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. The only Type used is No. 2. The lines in the prose portions are very unevenly spaced, but the longest measure 5 inches; 29 lines to a full page. Without folios, signatures, or catchwords. Space is left at the beginning of chapters for the insertion of 2 and 3-line initials, with a director. The book commences with a blank leaf, after which is the prologue to the Tales, with a space 3 lines deep for the insertion of an initial.

The Text begins thus :—

Han that Aprill with his Houris tote to And the broughte of marche hath prid þe rote
 And badid euery beyme in suche licour
 Of whiche vertu engendrid is the flour

On the 372nd leaf recto are the following lines, being the conclusion of the Parson's tale :—

tification of spme / To that lpf he vs brpnge that bought with his precpous blood Amen.

Explicit Tractatus Galfrydi Chaucer de Penitencia vt dicitur pro fabula Rectoris.

The reverse is occupied by what is called Chaucer's retraction, commencing—n Oþw pray I to hem alle that hekene this litil treatple and ending—

deus . Per omnia secula seculor Amen .

which concludes the volume.

MANUSCRIPTS.—There are three complete copies in the British Museum; Harl. 7334, vellum, 14th Century, with beautiful initials; Royal 18 C II, vellum, 15th Century; Lansdowne 851, vellum, 15th Century, with a poor miniature of Chaucer at the beginning. Imperfect copies—Harl. 1239, 7333, 7335; Sloane 1685, 1686.

REMARKS.—Chaucer and his poetry have been so often the theme of able writers that no account of either need be added here. From the life of the Poet, by Sir Harris Nicolas, I gather the following facts, which are curious only as having an exact parallel in Caxton's history. Chaucer was probably born in Kent, and at any rate had relatives and owned property there; Caxton was born in Kent. Chaucer was sent by his sovereign on an embassy to the Low Countries—so was Caxton.—Chaucer was a Citizen of London (see a notice from the City Records in Gentleman's Magazine, March, 1859), though in what company does not appear; Caxton was a Liveryman of London. And, lastly, they both ended their days in a house under the shadow of Westminster Abbey.

EXISTING COPIES.

1. BRITISH MUSEUM. King's Library.—Perfect. Not very clean, and with manuscript notes. Measurement, $10\frac{3}{4} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches. At the beginning are inserted:—a manuscript letter from Mr. Rudd; one from Mr. West, in whose library this volume once was; a facsimile copy of the lease of Chaucer's house in Westminster; and a faded copy of Occleve's well-known portrait in Harl. MS., No. 4866.

2. THE SAME. Grenville Library.—Imperfect, wanting the 1st printed leaf, half of 2nd, 6th, 7th, and last 3; in all $6\frac{1}{2}$ leaves, supplied in facsimile. Washed, but in good condition. Measurement, $11\frac{1}{2} \times 8$ inches.

3. OXFORD. Merton College.—Perfect, clean, and free from manuscript notes.⁽¹⁾ At the commencement of each tale the margin is beautifully illuminated. Measurement, $10\frac{3}{4} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

4. EARL OF ASHBURNHAM.—Imperfect, wanting the first 7, and 8 other leaves, numerous leaves having been added since the volume was in Mr. Heber's Library. Slightly stained. Measurement, $11\frac{1}{2} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

5. THE SAME.—Imperfect, wanting the first 14 printed leaves, 26 in various parts, and 37 at the end. A poor soiled copy. Measurement, $11\frac{1}{2} \times 8$ inches. Procured from a Bookseller at Bristol.

6. EARL FITZWILLIAM.—Imperfect, wanting the 1st printed leaf, 312th, and last. Slightly stained and torn. Measurement, $8\frac{1}{2} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Ratcliffe's copy.

7. EARL SPENCER.—Imperfect, wanting the 1st, 2nd, and 6th leaves of the prologue and 3 in the tale of the Clerk of Oxenforde. All supplied in beautiful facsimile by Whittaker. Clean throughout. Measurement, $9\frac{1}{2} \times 7$ inches.

8. EARL DYSART. A large fragment, 102 leaves, much cut and torn, beginning in Wife of Bath's Tale and ending in the Shipman's Tale. Measurement, $11 \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

9. H. HUTH, ESQ.—Imperfect, wanting 2 leaves at the beginning, 8 at the end, and 6 others, which are supplied in facsimile. Purchased in 1860 of Mr. Lilly, who procured it from Ireland. Measurement, $10\frac{1}{2} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Autographs of "John Gifford" and "Mary Gifford."

Eight leaves, very dirty and cropped, rescued from an old binding, are among the Douce fragments in the Bodleian, and a leaf of the "Cokes Tales" is in the British Museum (634 M).

No. 13.—THE MORAL PROVERBS OF CRISTYNE. Folio. “Enprinted by Caxton At Westmestre”, 1478.

COLLATION.—Two sheets, or 4 leaves, all printed.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—The only Type used is No. 2. Being in metre the full length of a line does not appear. 28 lines to a page. Without signatures, catchwords, or folios. Space for a 2-line initial, with director.

The morale prouerbes of Cristyne

*t He grete vertus of oure elders notable Ofte to remembre is thing profitable
An happy hous is . where dwelleth prudence*

The Text ends on the 4th verso,

*At westmestre . of feuerer the . xx . dape
And of kyng Edward / the . xvij . pere braye*

Enprinted by Caxton

In feuerer the colde season

(A facsimile of the last page is appended).

MANUSCRIPTS.—Harleian No. 4431, is a beautifully illuminated vellum volume, containing the writings of Cristyne in their original tongue, and includes “Les prouerbes moraulx ;” copies also are in the Bib. Imp., Paris, Nos. 7088 and 7204, the latter apparently unrecognised by M. Paris. No manuscript of the English version is known.

REMARKS.—Cristyne de Pise was, with the single exception of Joan of Arc, the most famous woman of her age. She was born A.D. 1363, in Italy, and, at the early age of fifteen, married Étienne Castel. After a few happy years her husband was taken from her by death; and now, although, to quote her own words, "nourri en delices et mignottemens," she found herself almost in destitution, with aged parents and three young children dependent upon her. Fortunately her father, who had been Physician to Charles V of France, had taken great pains in her education, by which she had well profited. Urged on by necessity she devoted herself to a literary life, and soon became famous. Her writings, which show a vast amount of reading, were ever on the side of virtue, morality, and peace. Her unimpeachable life assisted the tendency of her writings, and both were an honour to the age in which she lived. For many years her labours were incessant. After a last song of rejoicing on the victories of the French arms under "La Pucelle" she retired to a Convent for the remainder of her days. The date of her death is unknown. The Biographers of Cristyne vie with one another in her praises. There is a charming Monograph upon her, by M. Raimond Thomassy, entitled Essai sur les Ecrits Politiques de Christine de Pisan. 8vo. Paris, 1838. See also Les Msc. Fran., vol. iv, page 186; and Mém. de l'Acad. des Insc., vol. ii, page 762.

"Les prouwerbes moraulx" were originally composed as a supplement to "Les enseignemens moraux," written by Cristyne for the instruction of her son, Jean Castel, who passed a part of his youthful days in the service of the Earl of Salisbury, in England.

In the "Fayttes of Arms," translated and printed by Caxton at a later period, we meet with another production of the same Authoress.

The translation of these proverbs into English by Earl Rivers appears to have taken place about the same period as his longer effort the "Dictes of the Philosophers." And here we may notice that the Earl has been credited by Horace Walpole and Dr. Dibdin with the pedantic design of making nearly all the lines of his translation end with the letter "e." A very cursory examination of the poetry of the 15th Century will show a similarity of termination, which in fact was unavoidable in the semi-French state of the English tongue at that period.

EXISTING COPIES.

1. EARL OF JERSEY.—Perfect, slightly stained. Bound at the end of Caxton's edition of "The Dictes." It is not noticed in the Fairfax or Osterley catalogues. From the Harleian Library. Measurement, $10\frac{1}{2} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

2. EARL SPENCER.—Perfect and clean, but much cropped. Measurement, $10\frac{1}{2} \times 6\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

Dr. Dibdin states (Bib. Spenc. iv, 224) that copies of this tract were in the British Museum and the King's Library. This is, however, erroneous, there being no trace of it ever having been in either collection.

3. The MILLER LIBRARY.—Perfect, slightly stained. Every leaf mounted. Measurement, $11\frac{1}{2} \times 8\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Formerly in the library of Mr. Grenville, whence, by exchange, it passed into the collection of Sir Francis Freeling, at the sale of which it was purchased by Mr. Miller.

A private reprint, with types in imitation of the original, has been executed by Mr. Blades.

NO. 14.—STANS PUER AD MENSAM—MORAL DISTICHS—SALVE REGINA.
Quarto. Sine ullâ notâ. (Ante 1479).

COLLATION.—One 2^a or 4 leaves.

STANS PUER AD MENSAM.

The Text begins, on the 1st recto, thus:—

. Stans puer ad mensam.
m I dere childe first thy self enable
With all thyn herte to vertuous discipline
Afore thy souerayn stondyng at the table

The poem concludes with two stanzas on the 3rd recto, the latter of which is:—

So litill bylle bareyn of eloquence
Prap pong children that the shal see or rede
Though thou be not compendious of sentence
Of the clawes for to take hede
Whiche to alle vertue shal thy pongth lede
Of the wrptyng though ther be no date
If ought be amys put the faulte in lidgate
. Explicit.

(1) "Balad Royal" was the title of a particular rhythm, each stanza of which, consisting of 7 lines, rhymed as follows: a-b-a-b-b-c-c.

MORAL DISTICHS : these immediately follow the above, and fill up the page. The whole is here given.

Arple erly	And arple temperatly
Serue god deuoutly	And to thyf soup soberly
The world besily	And to thyf bed merily
Goo thyf way sadly	And be there iocondly
Answer demurely	And slepe setwely
Go to thyf mete appetently	.Explicit .

SALVE REGINA: this begins on the verso of the preceding, at the head of the page.

An holf Salue regina in englyssh .

Alue with all obeisance to god i humbleste

Regina to regne euer more in blyste

Water to crist as we hyleue expresse

The "Salue" ends at the foot of the 4th recto,

Water of lpf and eterne creacion

Salue euer as feir as we can suffyle . Amen .

The reverse of this leaf gives the following :—

Wytte hath wonder and kynde ne can

How mayden is moder and god is man

True thyn askyng and beleue that wonder

For myght hath maistryf 7 skyll goth vnder

. Deo laus &c.

This is followed by six proverbial couplets, the last being—

Knowe er thou knytte 7 than thou maist slake

If thou knyt er thou knowe than it is to late

This finishes the Text as it stands in the only two copies known.

MANUSCRIPTS.—Fifteenth-Century copies of the "Stans Puer" seem by no means uncommon. It was probably a favourite lesson-book with the Tutors of that Age. In the British Museum are, with slight variations, Harleian 4211, Lansd. 699 and 762, Sloane 1986, and Addit. 5467.

REMARKS.—From the absence of the word Explicit, or any other similar ending which Caxton made a rule of placing at the end of his works, great and small, it is not unlikely that this piece is imperfect. This is rendered more probable by the absence of the blank leaf at the beginning, which, supposing a printed leaf wanting at the end, would be its counterpart. At the same time it should be noticed that the only two known copies agree in this deficiency, and that Wynken de Worde, who reprinted from Caxton's edition, concludes in the same abrupt way ; though it is not impossible that he printed from an imperfect copy, and did not know it, as in this very tract he has reproduced, with his usual carelessness, an accidental error of Caxton's edition. Caxton, in printing, had transposed the two pages of the 2nd leaf, proving that, even in the quarto size, he had not arrived at the art of printing more than a page at a time, and Wynken de Worde blindly repeats the mistake.

Among the many pieces which make up the catalogue of Lydgate's works must be included "Stans Puer ad Mensam," as the two concluding lines prove:—

"Of the writing, though there be no date
If ought be amiss put the fault in lydgate."

Dan John Lydgate, who knew Chaucer in his old age, and may have been acquainted with Caxton in his youth, was an indefatigable rhymester. Ritson gives a list of 251 pieces attributed to his pen. The dates of his birth and death are equally obscure, and the only fact concerning him, of any certainty, is that he was born at Lidgate, near Bury St. Edmunds, whence he doubtless derived his name. (Harl. MS. 2251, folio 283).

The "Stans Puer" is a translation of the "Carmen juvenile de moribus puerorum" of Sulpitius, of which the 1st edition was probably printed at Aquila in 1483." But the type used for Caxton's tract (the last dated use of which in its first state was in 1479), proves it to have been printed at least some years previous to the impression at Aquila; so that we may fairly consider this as the "editio princeps" of the tract. It was reprinted by Wynken de Worde, three times, early in the succeeding Century.

The "Salve Regina," in its style and metre, closely resembles the acknowledged pieces of Lydgate, and was also, in all probability, from his pen.

EXISTING COPIES.

1. CAMBRIDGE. Public Library (AB. 8. 48. 1.)—Imperfect, wanting the lower portion of the 1st leaf, but in good condition. Measurement, $8\frac{1}{2} \times 5\frac{1}{2}$ inches. The Autograph of "John Fawler." This tract, now in a separate binding, was formerly in a volume of poems all printed by Caxton, of which an account is here appended.

Bishop Moore's library, rich in old black-letter poems, contained, among its other treasures, one priceless little volume, in quarto, bound in plain brown calf, and lettered on the back "Old poetry printed by Caxton." The collection appears to have been made before it came into the Bishop's possession; but the fact of the poems being bound together led Middleton, and all succeeding Writers, to describe them as one work. A careful examination, however, showed that the volume contained eight distinct publications, which have since been bound separately. Some of these are unique, and some are found alone in other collections. Before re-binding, the volume contained the following pieces in the following order:—

Tract I. Stans Puer ad Mensam.

Moral Distichs.

The Salve Regina.

Tract II. Parvus Catho.

Magnus Catho.

Tract III. The Chorle and the Bird.

Tract IV. The Horse the Goose and the Sheep.

Stanzas.

The proper use of certain nouns.

The proper use of certain verbs.

Tract V. The Temple of Glass.

Tract VI. The Temple of Brass.

A treatise which John Skogan sent unto the lords and gentlemen . . . exhorting them to use virtues in their youth.

The good counsel of Chaucer.

Balad of the village without painting.

Tract VII. The Book of Courtesy.

Tract VIII. Anelida and Arcyte.

The Complaint of Chaucer to his purse.

There is nothing to show in what order these tracts were printed. Being all in verse we can draw no conclusions from irregularity of spacing, and even where two editions were printed it is sometimes impossible to say which had precedence. That they were all printed before February 2nd, 1479 we may safely assume, as they are, without exception, in the early state of Type No. 2, which then made its last dated appearance in "Cordiale;" and that many were among Caxton's first essays seems probable from their popular nature, and the small amount of labour required in their production. For these reasons they are treated consecutively, together with three other editions, in Nos. 14 to 25, those pieces whose longest lines all measure 4 inches being placed before those measuring $3\frac{1}{4}$ inches.

2. DUKE OF DEVONSHIRE.—Perfect. This copy agrees in every particular with that at Cambridge. It was found in the old library at Hardwicke Hall, in the original parchment wrapper, probably just as it issued from the workshop of Caxton. The torn leaves have been repaired, and it is now beautifully bound. Measurement, $7\frac{1}{4} \times 5\frac{1}{4}$ inches

NO. 15.—PARVUS CATHO.—MAGNUS CATHO. Quarto. First Edition.
Sine ullâ notâ. (Ante 1479).

COLLATION.—Three 4^m and one 5^m = 34 leaves, of which the 1st was doubtless blank, though wanting in the only known copy.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. The Type is No. 2 only. Full lines measure 4 inches, and each page contains 23 lines, counting the blank lines between the stanzas. Without signatures or catchwords.

The Text commences with title-line on the 2nd recto, a blank leaf having originally preceded it—

. Hic Incipit parvus Catho .

Cū aladūterē quā plurimos hoīes gūiter errare

Whan I aduerte to ny remembrance

And see how fele folkes erren greuously

"Parvus Catho" terminates in the middle of the 3rd recto,

Whan pe it rede let not pour hert be thense

But doth as this saith with al pour hole entente

. Hic finis parui cathonis .

making in all 7 stanzas, in "Balad Royal."

"Magnus Catho" immediately follows on the verso, with space left for the insertion of a 2-line initial B, with director.

. Hic Incipit magnus Catho .

I deus est aimus nobis vt carmina dicūt

Hic tibi precipue sit pura mente colendus

For thy that god is inwardly the wit

The Text ends on the 34th verso,

Here haue I fonde that shal pou gupde ⁊ lede

Streight to gode same ⁊ leue pou in hir hous

. Explicit Catho .

The work is in 4 books, containing 42, 39, 27, and 52 stanzas of "Balad Royal," each of which is headed by a couplet from the original Latin.

MANUSCRIPTS.—Latin, Cotton Vesp. B XIII—English, Harl. 4733; "Parvus et magnus Cato," ending with this colophon "Explicit liber Catonis composi⁹ per magistrum Bādictū Burgh Vicarium de Maldon, &c."—Harl. 271 has the same colophon—Harl. 172 contains "Magnus Cato" only, including the whole of Caxton's version, and an additional book, of which the last stanza, in the nature of an "Envoi," ends—"Nought causeth me but sympleness of wytt. Explicit liber Catonis." Other manuscripts will be found in Harl. 116, 2251, and Arundel 168.

REMARKS.—The "distichs" of Cato were very popular for many Centuries. Their Author, and even the origin of their title, is entirely lost, though some of their stanzas are traced as far back as the 2nd or 3rd Century of the Christian era. In the middle ages they were used as a school-book, to teach Latin, as well as to inculcate moral maxims; so that to be unacquainted with "Cato" was synonymous with general ignorance: Chaucer continually mentions the work. "He knew not Catoun, for his wyt was rude," says the miller of the rich "Gnof."⁽¹⁾ These remarks apply to "Magnus Cato" only. About 1180 Daniel Church, an ecclesiastic attached to the Court of Henry II, added a few Latin precepts as introductory to the original, and from that period the two were mostly transcribed together, being distinguished as "Parvus Cato" and "Magnus Cato." Of the English version of these "disticha" we cannot have a better account than that given us by Caxton himself in his preface to "Cathon" glossed; "which book," he says, "hath been translated out of Latin into English by Master Benet Burgh, . . . which full craftily hath made it in Balad Royal for the erudition of my Lord Boucher son and heir at that time to my Lord the Earl of Essex." This translation, of Benet Burgh, is the text printed by Caxton, twice in 4to, and once in folio with wood-cuts, before he undertook the translation of the extensive French Gloss, which will be brought to the reader's notice under the year 1483.

"Maister Benet Burgh" was Vicar of Malden in Essex when he translated "Cato," as we learn from the colophon in Harl. MS., No. 271. He afterwards filled the offices of Archdeacon of Colchester, 1464; Prebendary of St. Paul's, 1472; and soon after High Canon of St. Stephen's, Westminster. He appears to have been an Author as well as a Translator. The following is the title of a poem in Harl. MS. 7333, folio 149b—"A cristemasse game made by Maister Benet: howe god almyghty seyde to his apostelys and echeū off them were baptiste and none knew of othir, &c." He also appears to have written a considerable portion of the poetical translation of "De regimine principum" attributed to Lydgate, as we infer from Harl. MS. 2251, folio 236, in which occurs this side note, in the same handwriting as the body of the poem—"Here deyde the translato^r a noble Poet Dane John Lydgate And his folower gan his prolog in this wise p Benedictū Burgh." Heor Lydgate also wrote an original fourth book to "Catho Magnus," which, although not printed by Caxton, may be seen in several manuscripts. Ritson indeed (Bib. Poet., page 66), ascribes the whole to Lydgate.

It does not seem improbable that the printing of "Parvus et Magnus Catho" was undertaken by desire of "High Canon Burgh," who, holding a Canonry in Westminster, was likely to have become acquainted with Caxton.

The only EXISTING COPY is in the Public Library, Cambridge, (AB. 8. 48. 2). It is perfect, but without the original blank leaf, and measures $8\frac{1}{4} \times 5\frac{1}{2}$ inches. For an account of the volume which contained it, see pages 51, 52 ante.

(1) Canterbury Tales—line 3227; also 9251.

No. 16.—PARVUS CATHO.—MAGNUS CATHO. Quarto. Second Edition.
Sine ullâ notâ. (Ante 1479).

COLLATION.—Three 4^m and one 5^a = 34 leaves, of which the 1st was doubtless blank, although wanting in the only known copy.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—The variation in this edition is only typographical. The poem is reprinted page for page, and line for line, yet, on comparing the words together, scarcely any two agree in orthography, the variation being very noticeable in the use of double letters. The extent of the discrepancy will be partly shown in the subjoined quotations.

The Text begins, with space for a small initial, without director, on the 2nd recto,

Hic Incipit parvus Catho

Um aduerterem quā hoies grauit̃ errare
 Whanne I aduer̃te to my remembraunce
 And see how tele folk̃es erren greuously

At foot of 3rd recto,

Whan ye it rede let not pour hert be thense but doth as this saith with al pour hole ent̃te

Hic finis parui cathonis

On 3rd verso,

Hic Incipit magnus Catho .

I deus est almus nobis vt carmina dicūt
 Hic tibi precipue sit pura mente colendus
 For th̃p that god is inwardly the wit
 Of man and greupth hym vnderstanding

The Text ends on 34th verso,

Here haue I fonde that shall pou gupde ⁊ lede

Explicit Catho . . .

The only EXISTING COPY known is in the library of the DUKE OF DEVONSHIRE, at Chatsworth, where it is bound with the quarto edition of "Stans Puer," already described. A few leaves have been mended, and it measures 7½ × 5½ inches. It came from the old library at Hardwicke Hall, where it appeared in the original parchment wrapper, as issued. In the Harleian Library (III. 6202) the above two tracts appear together; probably the same copy.

No. 17. — THE HORSE, THE SHEEP, AND THE GOOSE.—VARIOUS STANZAS.

—THE PROPER APPLICATION OF CERTAIN NOUNS SUBSTANTIVE,
AND VERBS. First Edition. Quarto. Sine ullâ notâ. (Ante 1479).

COLLATION.—One 4^a and one 5^a = 18 leaves, of which the 1st was doubtless blank, although wanting in the only known copy.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. The Type is all No. 2. Full lines measure 4 inches, and each page contains 23 lines, inclusive of the blank line between the stanzas. Without signatures or catchwords.

THE HORSE, THE SHEEP, AND THE GOOSE commences on the 2nd recto, the 1st leaf being blank.

The Text begins, with space for a 2-line initial, with director,

c Outreverties / piers and discordes
Bittwene perlonen were two or thre
Sought out the groundes he recorder
This was the custōm of antiquite

On the 14th leaf verso,

Alle in one vessell to speke in wordes pleyn
That noman holde of other haue disdayn

. Thus endeth the horte the ghoos ⁊ the shep .

There are in this poem 77 stanzas of 7 lines each.

VARIOUS STANZAS. Some stanzas attributed to Lydgate, apparently chosen from the first stanzas of some of his minor poems, each bearing some probably well-known refrain. As only two of these have been recognised, they are given here in the hope of further identification.

- | | |
|----------------|---|
| (1st)—1st line | Hit is ful hard to knowe omy estate (&c. &c.) |

 last 2 lines Burte not thyself / lest thou fore rewe
 For thyn owen ele / kepe thy tonge in mete

(6th)—This stanza is a variation of the first of a poem by Lydgate, usually printed with the title "On the mutability of human affairs."

- 1st line The world so wyde the aper so remuable (&c. &c.)
 last 2 lines That made is of these foure thus knyting Shape endure stable and plesure in abyding

(7th).—This is among the acknowledged pieces of Lydgate, and generally entitled "On the instability of human affairs."

- 1st line The further I goo / the more behynde (&c. &c.)
 last 2 lines Though I gos loole I am tepde with a lyne
 As hit fortune or Infortune thus I fyne

. Explicit .

This ends with one stanza on the recto of the 16th folio, with nothing below it, and on the verso is—THE PROPER USE OF VARIOUS NOUNS SUBSTANTIVE AND VERBS.

This begins at the head of the page, without title or initial,

an Herde of hertes	a Whurther of crooves
an Herde of dere	a Wpdyng of rookes

And ends half way down the 17th verso,

a Thraue of Thresshers	a Wpeng of pardoners
a Tasshe of carteris	a Wastynes of cookes

. Explicit .

The lower half blank. On the 18th recto,

An hare in his forme	a Crane displayd
is holdring or lering	a Perek disgured
A douue sitteth	a Curlew unioynted

a Comp vnaced	If he take the londe he a Peron dismembrid	keeth. Explicit .

MANUSCRIPTS.—In the British Museum are :—Lansd. 699, and Harl. 2251, folio 306, sec. xv. These have some final stanzas not found in Caxton's edition of the "Horse, the Sheep, and the Goose," and entitled "The Auctor makith a lenvoie vpon all the mateer be fore said."

REMARKS.—This is an undoubted production of Lydgate, to whom it is expressly attributed in the above manuscripts. It is difficult to account for the omission of the "Envoi" by Caxton, unless he printed from an imperfect copy.

The only EXISTING COPY is in the Public Library, Cambridge (AB. 8. 48. 4), and was formerly bound with other pieces in a volume already described at page 51. This copy unfortunately wants the original blank and the 6th leaf. Measurement, $8\frac{1}{2} \times 5\frac{1}{4}$ inches. On the 3rd recto is the Autograph "my name is george fferrers." On the 8th verso, "George Ferrers the fift sone of Geo. Fer. his father . . he had sixe sonnes w^{ch} are Julius. fer Rychard. fer Edward fer, Jhon ferrers George ferr Frauncys fer. and a daughter named Jane Ferrers, of the sonnes dyed ij."

NO. 18.—THE HORSE, THE SHEEP, AND THE GOOSE.—VARIOUS STANZAS.

—THE PROPER APPLICATION OF CERTAIN NOUNS SUBSTANTIVE AND VERBS. Quarto. Second Edition. (Ante 1479).

COLLATION.—One 4^a and one 5^a = 18 leaves, of which the 1st is blank.

TYPGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS. These are the same as in the 1st edition, with the exception of the orthography and the use of a title-line, which in the other edition is altogether wanting, a sufficient reason for attributing this to a later period: for, had the 1st edition been printed with a head-line, we may certainly assume that the improved appearance would not have been omitted by Caxton in the reprint. In this edition we find the 6th leaf, noticed as wanting in the only known copy of the 1st edition.

The Text begins on the 2nd recto,

The hors. the shepe & the ghoos.
Ombreviers. ples and discordes
Birtwene persones were two or thre
Sought out the groundes be recorder
This was the custom of antiquite

On the 14th verso,

Alle in one bestell to speke in wordes pleyn
That noman sholde of other haue biddayn Thus endeth the horse the ghoos and the sheep.

The Text ends at foot of 18th recto, a heron dismembred fleeth. Explicit.

The verso blank.

COLLATION.—Three 4th and one 5th, unsigned, or 34 leaves, of which the 1st is (?) blank.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. The Type is No. 2 only. Full lines measure 4 inches, and each page contains 23 lines. Without signatures or catchwords.

After the blank the poem commences on the 2nd recto, with space for a 2-line initial, with director :—

. The temple of glas .

f Or thought conscieynt ⁊ greuous hevynesse
 For penitised and high distres
 To bed I went now this oþer nyght

The Text ends at the foot of the 34th recto,

I mene that hevynne and goodly of face
 Now go thy way and put the in her grace

. Explicit the temple of glas .

MANUSCRIPTS of this piece do not often occur even in collections of Lydgate's poetry. Add. 16165, xv. sæc., however, presents an example, which has the following title :—"Une soygne moult plesaunt fait a la request dun amoureux par Lidegate Le moygne de Bury." The 1st line is "For thought compleynt and gēuous hevynesse." It has also a running head to every page, "The dreeme of a louer."

REMARKS.—There seems no doubt that this was one of the less favoured compositions of Dan John, although by some Writers it has been attributed to Hawes. It was reprinted by Wynken de Worde.

The only EXISTING COPY is in the Public Library, Cambridge (AB. 8. 48. 5). It is perfect, excepting the blank (?) leaf, and was formerly bound with other pieces in a volume already described at page 51. Measurement, 8½ x 5½ inches.

No. 20.—THE CHORLE AND THE BIRD. Quarto. First Edition.
Sine ullâ notâ. (Ante 1479).

COLLATION.—One 5^a, or 10 leaves, of which the 1st is blank.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. The Type used is No. 2 only. Full lines measure 4 inches, and each page contains 3 verses of "Balad Royal," or 23 lines, including a blank line between the stanzas. Without signatures or catchwords.

After the blank the poem commences on the 2nd recto, space being left, with a director, for the insertion of a 2-line initial.

The Text begins thus :—

p Problemes of olde liknes and figures
Whiche prouyd ben fructuous of sentence

The Text ends on the 10th verso,

Soe litell quaper and recomande me
Unto my maister with humble affection
Beseke hym lowly of mercy and pyte
Of thy rude makynge to haue compassion
And as touching thy translation
Out of frensch / how that hit englisshid be
All thing is laid vnder correction
With supportacion of his benygnyte

. Explicit the chorle and the birde .

MANUSCRIPTS of this piece are uncommon. Harl. 116, sæc. xv—"Problemys of olde liknesse and figures," "Explicit tractatus de Aue et Carlabundo." Lansd. 699, sæc. xv—"Incipit de Aue et Rustico; Problemys, likenensis & figures." Cotton Calig. A. II. sæc. xv—The same.

REMARKS.—This fable is always included among the compositions of Lydgate. It was reprinted by Pynson, and a copy in the Grenville library (11226), has the following Autograph note :—"The same story is told by Alphonsus in his fable of the labourer and the nightingale, and in Gesta Romanorum, cap. 169."

EXISTING COPIES.

1. CAMBRIDGE. Public Library (AB. 8. 48. 3).—Perfect. This was formerly in the volume of poems already described at page 51. Measurement, $8\frac{1}{2} \times 5\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

Sine ullâ notâ. (Ante 1479).

The similarity of these two editions is exact so far as the number of stanzas, number of lines to a page, and the general state of the text; but there is an evident variation in the typographical minutiae, such as the omission of the director, the use of full-points and colons as ornamentation, and above all the constant variation in orthography. Take the 1st line as an example:—

No. 22.—THE TEMPLE OF BRASS, OR THE PARLIAMENT OF FOWLS.—
 A TREATISE WHICH JOHN SKOGAN SENT UNTO THE LORDS . . .
 EXHORTING THEM TO LOSE NO TIME IN THEIR YOUTH.—THE GOOD COUNSEL OF CHAUCER.—BALAD OF THE VILLAGE WITHOUT PAINTING.—ENVOY OF CHAUCER TO SKOGAN. Quarto. Sine
ullâ notâ. (Ante 1479).

COLLATION.—This is only known from the first three 4th, or 24 leaves.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. The Type used is No. 2 only. Full lines measure $3\frac{1}{4}$ inches, instead of 4 inches, as in the former pieces, and each page contains 23 lines. Without signatures or catchwords.

The Text of the TEMPLE OF BRASS begins on the 1st recto, without a blank leaf—

he lpf so short the craft so lōge to lerne
 Thastape so hard so tharp the conquerpng

On the 17th recto,

That I shal mete some thinge for to fare
 The better / and thus to rede I wil not spare

Explicit the temple of bras

This makes 98 stanzas in "Balad Royal." On the same page follows—

Here next foloweth a tretple / whiche John Skogan sente vnto the lordes and gentil men of the kynges hous / exortyng them to lose no tyme in theyr poughthe / but to vse vertues .

On the 21st verso,

God conforme you / in vertuous goodnes
So that thurgh negligence / no thing ye lese

Thus endeth the traytpe wiche John Skogan sent to the lordes and esta tes of the kynges hous .

A blank of 5 lines in depth ; then a 7-line stanza—

Wyth empty honde men may no hawkes lure

And wene thy self be noght / ⁊ be a wrecche

A blank line, and then ensues—

The good counceyl of chawcer which is the last line in the page.

On the recto of the 22nd leaf are Chaucer's counsels :—

Fle ye fro ye prees ⁊ dwelle with sothfastnes Suffre vnto the good yf it be smal making 3 stanzas of "Balad Royal," and filling the page. On the verso,

Salade of the vilage without pepntynge Plapntyf to fortune

making 10 stanzas. The poem ends thus, near the foot of the 24th recto,

Praye ye his best frende of his noblesse
That to som better estate / he may attayne

A blank line, and then follows—

Thenuoye of Chaucer to Skogan which is the last line in the page. On the 24th verso follows "Thenuoye," which often appears as a separate poem. It begins thus :—

To broken ben the statutes hye in heuen
That create were / eternally tendure

but, in the only two copies known, breaks off after the 3rd stanza, which ends :—

Was neuer erst skogan blamed for his tōge

MANUSCRIPTS.—Of the "Temple of Brass" there seems to be only one in the British Museum, Harl. 7333, which is entitled "Parliament of Fowls," and ascribed to Chaucer. The other pieces are not unfrequent in the poetical collections of the 15th Century, and appear to have been written also by Chaucer, with, perhaps, the exception of the Exhortation of Skogan.

REMARKS.—It is impossible now to say what (besides the concluding stanzas of the poem) the remaining portion of this tract contained.

The 33rd stanza gives the title of the poem "The temple of bras." It was reprinted by Wynken de Worde, and is commonly known as "The Parliament of Birds," or "The Assembly of Fowls." Dr. Middleton (and others quoting him), calls it "Scipio's Dream"—a misnomer derived from the words "Somnium Scipionis," written in an old hand on the Cambridge copy, and from the opening stanzas where Chaucer mentions Cicero's "Somnium Scipionis" as suggestive of this poem.

Very little is known of Skogan. None of the Editors of Chaucer, nor the Biographers of the Poets, have cleared away the confusion in the various accounts of him. From the "Exhortation," and from Chaucer's "Envoy," it is certain that he must have lived in the reigns of Richard II and Henry IV. In Lansd. MS. 762, sæc. xv, folio 20, is a Latin epitaph of two stanzas on "John Skogan."

COLLATION.—One 4^a and one 3^a = 14 leaves, of which the last is blank.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. The Type is all No. 2. Full lines measure 3½ inches. 23 lines to a page, including a blank line between the stanzas. Without signatures or catchwords.

The Text begins thus :—

I ptyl John lpyh pour tendre enfance

The Text ends on the 13th recto,

And how to hurte / Ipeþy euer in a waþte
Kepe your quaper / that it be not ther bapte
Explicit the booke of curtesye.

The 13th verso, and the 14th leaf are blank.

The only EXISTING COPY is in the Public Library, Cambridge, (AB. 8. 48. 7), and was formerly in the volume of tracts described at page 51. On the final blank are two verses in manuscript by "J. F." (John Fowler?) and the Autograph "Arundell" twice.

A second edition will be described among the books printed in Type No. 5.

No. 24.—QUEEN ANELIDA AND FALSE ARCYTE.—THE COMPLAINT OF CHAUCER TO HIS PURSE. Quarto. Sine ullâ notâ. (Ante 1479).

COLLATION.—One 5ⁿ or 10 leaves, all printed.

t hou fiers god of armes / mars the rede
That in the frostþ contre called trace Within thy greþþ temple ful of drede

The Text ends on the 9th recto,

How that arcite / anelida so fore
Path thirled with the pepnt of remembrance

Thus endeth the compleynt of anelida

On the same page is Chaucer's Complaint to his Purse.

The oþleif of chaucer unto his empty purse

To pou my purs / and to none other twicht Compleyne I for þe be my lady dere making 3 stanzas in "Balad Royal," with the refrain—

Be heup agapn / or ellis mote I dye and ending on verso of same leaf.

This is followed by a single 5-line stanza,

¶ Chenuope of chaucer into the kynge

¶ conquerour of brutes alþon

¶ þaue mynde vpon my supplicaciō

¶ Explicit . . .

The 10th folio is occupied on the recto by what is commonly called Chaucer's Prophecy, which is here given in full.

¶ *Whan seþth failleth in prestes lawes
And lordes bestes ar holden for lawes
And robber is holden purchas
And lecher is holden tolas
¶ Than þal the lond of alþon
Be brought to grete confusiō*

¶ *Hit falleth for euery gentilman
To save the best that he can
In mannes absence
And the soþ in his presence
¶ Hit cometh by kynde of gentil blode
To cast away al heuynes
And gadre to gidre wordes good
¶ The werk of wisdom berith witnes*

¶ Et sic est finis . . .

The verso is blank.

MANUSCRIPTS.—There are three manuscripts of "Anelida and Arcyte" in the British Museum; Harl. 372, Harl. 7333, and Addit. 16165. They are all of the 15th Century, and, like Caxton's edition, omit the final stanza usually found in the printed versions of this poem, beginning:—

¶ *Whanne that Anelyda this wofull quene
Hath of her hande written in this wise,*

REMARKS.—This poem is expressly attributed to Chaucer by Lydgate, in the following verses from the prologue to his translation of the "Fall of Princes."

¶ *Of Anelyda and of fals Arcyte
He made a compleynte, doleful and pitous.*

"Chaucer's Prophecy," as here given, is the same version as that in Thynne's edition of his works, but differs from, and is more full than, the version given by Mr. Singer in his edition, and adopted from that by Robert Bell. Thynne, indeed, whose edition (London, 1532, folio) is the basis of all that followed, appears in several instances to have taken Caxton's edition for his Text.

The only EXISTING COPY known is in the Public Library, Cambridge (AB. 8. 48. 8), and was formerly in the volume of tracts described at page 51. Measurement, $8\frac{1}{4} \times 5\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Autographs:—"Constat Paulo Haynes."—"Sum liber m^r Birkenhed clic Comptr."—"This is Henry brikened boke."—"Thomas Bristow"—"Waterhous"—"Thomas haln̄."

No. 25.—BOETHIUS DE CONSOLACIONE PHILOSOPHIÆ, translated into English by Geoffrey Chaucer. Folio. "I William Caxton have done my devoir to enprinte it." Without Place or Date. (Ante 1479).

COLLATION.—Eleven 4^m and one 3ⁿ = 94 leaves, of which the 1st is blank.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—Without title-page, signatures, catchwords, or folios. Two Types, No. 2 for the body and No. 3 for the Latin quotations, are used. The lines are not spaced to one length. Full lines measure 5 inches, and there are 29 to a page. Space has been left at the commencement of chapters for the insertion of 2-line initials.

After a blank leaf the Text commences with the title in Latin in Type No. 3, on the 2nd recto, the English translation being uniformly in Type No. 2:—

Boecius de consolacione philosophie

Carmina qui quondam studio florente peregi flebilis heu mestos cogor inire modos

a Ulas I wepyng am constrained to begynne vers of soroufull materre That whylom in flourisshyng studye made delitable dities / for lo rendyng mules of

On the 93rd recto, 3rd line, open of the Jugges that seeth and also that demeth alle thynges / Deo gracias

Explicit boecius de consolacione philosophie

Caxton has added an interesting epilogue, which occupies the remainder of the recto and the whole of the verso, being followed, on the 94th recto, by the "Epitaphiū Galfridi Chaucer," printed in Type No. 3, which concludes on the verso, and the last few lines of which are :—

Post obitum Caxton voluit te viuere cura
Willelmi . Chaucer clare poeta tui
Nam tua non solum compeffit opuscula formis
Has quoq; & laudes . iussit hic esse tuas

This epitaph was written by a brother Poet, Stephen Surigo, Lic. Decr., of Milan, and is most interesting as showing, in connexion with the previous epilogue (given in Vol. I, page 149), that not only did Caxton perpetuate the memory of the great Poet by printing his works, but that he also raised a public monument to his memory before St. Benet's Chapel, in Westminster Abbey, in the shape of a pillar supporting a tablet upon which the above "Epitaphye" was written.

MANUSCRIPTS.—The following are in the British Museum :—1. Harl. 3236 (Latin, sæc. xiv), with a Latin gloss—2. Lansdowne 842 (Latin sæc. xv), the text alone, in Italian characters, with beautifully illuminated initials—3. Harl. 4335–39 (Latin and French, A.D. 1476), five volumes, with text and gloss in Latin, and the translation with French gloss by Jehan de Meun—4. Harl. 4330 (French, sæc. xv), Jehan de Meun's translation—5. Addit. 21602, the same—6. Harl. 2421 (English, xv sæc.), Chaucer's translation, beginning "Allas I wepyng am constreyned to begynne verse of sorowful matere;" it agrees exactly with Caxton's text, and, like that, has a Latin couplet preceding each chapter, but is without prologue or epilogue—7. Addit. 16165, the same, written for Lord Shirley, and with a metrical prologue to "ye Kalandare of yis litell booke," from which the following verses in praise of Chaucer are extracted :—

And for to put hit in your mynde
First yus by ordre shul ye fynde
Of Boece ye hole tranalacyoun
And phylosofyes / consolacyoun
Laboured by Gefary Chaucier
Whiche in oure wolgare hade neuere his pere
Of eloquencyale Betorryke
In Englishe was neuer noon him lyke
Gyff him ye prys and seyye yer hoo
For neuer knewe ye suche na moo

Besides the above, English metrical translations are found in Royal 18 A XIII, Harl. 43 and 44, and Sloane 554.

REMARKS.—There are few ancient Authors whose works received greater attention in the 15th Century than those of Boethius. M. Paris gives an account of five different translations of the "De consolatione" into French verse, all of that age, and contained in the Bib. Imp., Paris. One of these agrees with Harl. 3236 above noticed.

Some writers, and among them Dibdin (Typ. Ant., vol. i, page 306), have doubted whether Chaucer was the real translator of the version under review, but none of the manuscripts attribute it to any other writer; and, not to quote the express mention of it in the "Retraction," Chaucer himself includes it among his works in the following couplet (line 425) from the "Legend of Good Women"—

And for to speke of other holynesse
He hath in prose translated Boece.

In this translation Chaucer appears to have chosen the original Latin for his text. He certainly did not take it from any of the French versions noticed above, nor from those described by M. Paris; nor is it, as Dibdin suggests, from the anonymous translation, printed by Colard Mansion, in 1477. But from whatever source derived, it was, if we may judge from the many copies extant, very favourably received. Our Printer especially took great delight in what he terms the "ornate and fayr" language of the Poet, and in the epilogue to his edition he has left us a most interesting tribute of his admiration.

There was another version of this work in English metre, which, from the existence of several copies in various libraries, appears also to have been extensively circulated. It was, according to the majority of manuscripts, the production of Johannes Capellanus, who, from a manuscript in Balliol College (316A), appears to have been John Walton, Canon of Oseney. We will mention three in the British Museum. Harl. 44 (sec. xv) has a proeme of 31 stanzas preceding the work, from which these two are taken as a specimen:—

To Chaucer that is flour of Rethorik
In Englyssh tonge and excellent poete
This wote y well no thyng may I do like Thoghe so that I of makyng entirmete
And Gower that so craftley doth trete
And in his booke of moralite
Thoghe y to theym in makyng am vnmete
Yet must y shewe it forth that is in me

And eny lorde and ladye what ye be
Or Clerk that liketh for to rede thys
Beseechyng lowly with humylite
Supporte wher y haue doo anyase Correcte only ther that nedeful is Yf worde or sentence be noght as it sholde
My silf y am vnsufficient y wyse
For yf y cowthe haue better done y wolde

The Text follows—"Alas y wreche that whilom was in welthe," &c. At the end is the following colophon—"Explicit liber Boecij consolacōne Phie de latino in anglicum translatuſ Anno dñi Millessimo CCCC^{mo} x^{mo} per Capellm̃ Johanneſſem." Harl. 43, (ſec. xv) is the ſame tranſlation, but without the proeme, and in the handwriting of "Thomas Chaundeler Vniuerſitat⁹ Oxoñ et ecclie Welleñ Cancellarius." It begins—

Allas I wroch that whylome was in welȝ
And luſty ſong veeðe for to wrytte

Royal 18. A. XIII, (ſec. xv, early) : this agrees exactly with Harl. 44, as alſo does Sloane 554.

Every library of the 14th and 15th Centuries, of which we have any account, appears to have contained a copy of "Boethius:" many had ſeveral copies. In the Ducal Library, Bruges, 1467, was a manuſcript with this title, "Boece de Conſolacion en englois," which is not unlikely to have been the tranſlation of Chaucer. (See Les Mſc. Franc. No. 7071, 7071¹, 7072, 7072², 7201, 7204, Dibdin Typ. Ant. I., 303; Notice ſur Colard Mansion, page 31; Barrois, No. 1088).

13. MARQUIS OF BATH.—Said to have a copy, (See Clarke's Repertorium) but no particulars can be given.

(1) Some account of this, the most extensive recovery of its kind on record, may be found interesting, and shows strongly the importance of examining the covers of old books before rejecting them. In the summer of 1868 I embraced an opportunity of inspecting the old library in the Grammar School attached to the Abbey of St. Albans. I found a few valuable books all contained (and I believe are at the present time) in an old deal cupboard, upon which the leakage from the roof had dripped, apparently, for years. It must have been long since any one had touched a book there, and the amount of dust and decay was certainly enough to deter even a bibliomaniac from so doing. After examining a few interesting books I pulled out one which was lying flat upon the top of others. It was in a most deplorable state, covered thickly with a damp sticky dust, and with a considerable portion of the back rotted away by wet. The white decay fell in lumps on the floor as the unappreciated volume was opened. It proved to be Geoffrey Chaucer's English translation of "Boecius de consolatione philosophiæ," printed by Caxton, in the original binding, as issued from Caxton's workshop, and uncut!! On examining the amount of damage it had sustained, I found that the wet, which had injured the book, had also, by separating the layers of paper of which the covers were composed, revealed the interesting fact that several fragments, on which Caxton's types appeared, had been used in their manufacture. After vexatious opposition and repeated delays the Acting Trustees were induced to allow the book, which they now prized highly, to be deposited in the care of Mr. J. Winter Jones, of the British Museum, for the purpose of rebinding. On dissecting the covers they were found to be composed entirely of waste sheets from Caxton's Press, two or three being printed on one side only. The two covers yielded no less than 56 half-sheets of printed paper, proving the existence of three works from Caxton's Press quite unknown before. The following is the list of the fragments, all genuine specimens of England's first Printer, though unfortunately mostly in very poor condition.

NO. 26.—CORDYALE, OR THE FOUR LAST THINGS. Folio. With Printer's Name, but without Place. March 24th, 1479.

COLLATION.—Nine 4^m and one 3ⁿ = 78 leaves, of which the 1st and last are blank.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. Two Types are used, Nos. 2* and 3, the latter for proper names and Latin only. The lines are not spaced out to one length. A full line measures 5 inches. Mostly 29 lines to a page, but sometimes 28. Without signatures, catchwords, or folios. Space left for the insertion of 3 and 4-line initials, with director. Commencing with a blank leaf the prologue of the Translator follows on the 2nd recto, space being left for a 4-line A.

The Text begins thus :—

MANUSCRIPTS.—There does not appear to be an English version in the British Museum. In the Public Library, Cambridge (Nn. 3. 10. 1), is a copy on paper, unfortunately imperfect at beginning and end, but an exact transcript of Caxton's printed version, which the Scribe evidently took as his pattern, even to the star-shaped full-point. Indeed, of books, like the present, written for the Press, manuscript copies are not to be expected, unless transcripts from the printed editions, like that just mentioned.

REMARKS.—The French edition of this work (see page 25 ante) was, if similarity of workmanship in all points may justify the conclusion, before the Printer while at work upon this the English edition.

Dr. Dibdin, to whom the French edition was unknown, says that Earl Rivers translated from the Latin; but as all the other productions of the Earl's pen, printed by Caxton, were from the French, there would be strong grounds for supposing that this had come through the same channel, were not the fact established by its not being a literal translation of any Latin edition, while it is an accurate reproduction, line for line and almost word for word, of the French edition.

About the date also there has been some confusion. Mattaire and Panzer attribute the printing to 1478, Lewis to 1479, Dibdin to 1480; and Lord Orford thinks Caxton, unless he was two years employed upon it, has made a typographical error in the date. The dates in reality are very plain. Caxton says that Lord Rivers delivered the English translation to him to be printed, upon the day of "The Purification," which is further stated to have been the 2nd day of February, 1478; but as the year did not then begin until the 25th March, it would, according to the present reckoning, be February, 1479. The printing was begun the very next day, on the "morning after the said Purification," and completed upon the 24th day of March in the 19th year of Edward IV. This regnal year was comprised between March 4th, 1479, and March 3rd, 1480, thus again giving the year 1479 for the completion of the book. From this it is evident that instead of taking over two years for the printing it occupied Caxton just seven weeks. In Vol. I, page 149, may be seen the entire epilogue, as written and printed by Caxton.

For the literary history of "Cordiale" see the remarks on "Les quatre derrenieres choses," already noticed.

REMARKS.—There can be no doubt in the mind of anyone acquainted with the Westminster books that this issued from Caxton's Press. It agrees with them not only in character of type, but in length of line, depth of page, and other typographical peculiarities. Nor is there much uncertainty about the date. It was not written till July, 1478, and the first dated book in the types with which it is printed (Type No. 2*) made its first appearance in March, 1479, the latest dated book in the preceding Type (No. 2) being February, 1478. In 1480 Caxton discontinued entirely the practice of leaving his lines of an uneven length; but the majority of pages in this volume have their lines uneven. The book was therefore printed after July, 1478, and before or very early in 1480.

It is worthy of notice, that about the same time that Caxton, at Westminster, was engaged upon this work, the Printer-schoolmaster at St. Albans was also making it one of the first essays of his Press. There certainly was not a longer period than two years and a half between the two editions, which, so far as the text goes, agree very closely, the St. Alban's Printer having apparently reprinted from the edition by Caxton.

It is also very remarkable that this work should have been known and described for more than 150 years, yet never till October, 1861, recognised as the production of Caxton's Press. In the Public Library, Cambridge, is a volume of Documents, relating to Corpus Christi College, which was used by Strype for his Life of Archbishop Parker; and among them is a Catalogue of the Books bequeathed by the Archbishop to the library of that College. At folio 255 is the following entry under the general head of "Books in parchment closures as they lye on heaps on the upmost shelves":—"Rethorica nova impressa Canteb. fo. 1478." Strype, in his Life of Parker, misled by this entry, attributed the book to an early Press at Cambridge; and Bagford, writing to Tanner, in 1707, says—"I cannot but impart unto you, that very lately good Mr. Strype hath gave me an account of a booke which archbishop Parker gave to the Publick library of Benet college, and is a piece of rethorick, by one Gul. de Saona, a minorit, printed at Cambridge, 1478." Ames, who only knew the book from these accounts, and a facsimile of the beginning and end sent him by Mr. North, placed this work at the head of the list of Cambridge books in his Typographical Antiquities, 1749, and gave an engraving of North's facsimile; which led him to state that "the types were much like Caxton's largest." Herbert merely repeated the account of Ames; and thus it was reserved for Mr. Bradshaw in consulting the library of Corpus Christi College for another purpose, to examine the volume and to recognise the interesting fact that, although compiled at Cambridge in the year 1478, it was printed with the unmistakeable types of Caxton, and agreed in typographical particulars with the books issued from the Westminster Press between 1479-80.

Laurentius Gulielmi de Traversanis, of Saona (or Savona, as it is more commonly called), was born about 1414. His native city, not very far from Genoa, is better known as the birthplace of Christopher Columbus. He entered the Franciscan Convent there under Francesco di Rovere, afterwards Pope Sixtus IV. He studied at the Universities of Padua, Bologna, Cambridge, and Paris, and seems finally to have retired to his own convent at Savona, where he died, and to which he was a great benefactor. Wadding (Scriptores Ord. Min. folio, Romæ, 1650) mentions several of his works as existing in manuscript at Savona:—"Rhetorica pro junioribus," probably a companion to the present volume, which the Author calls "Margarita—ad eloquendum divina accommodata;" "Correctorium vitæ humanæ;" "Dialogus de vitâ et verâ felicitate;" "De bono conjugali, sive Matrimoniali;" "De pudicitia B. Virginis;" and "Triumphus quinque Jesu Christi," of which the "De Justitia" was dedicated to our King Edward IV. A brief notice of him is given in Monti's Compendio. 8vo. Savona, 1698.

REMARKS.—The difference between this and the 1st edition (see page 36 ante) is considerable. That was printed from the original fount of Type No. 2; this from a re-casting of the same fount, showing many alterations in the punches. (See the preliminary chapter to this volume). That has the pages throughout the volume very uneven as to the length of the line; this nearly always even. That, with the unique exception of the Althorpe copy, is without the colophon; this has the colophon, of which a facsimile is given in the annexed plate, in every copy. Lastly, the orthography varies throughout the whole volume.

We must here notice the first instance of a practice common among the early Printers, and, doubtless, inherited from the Scribes:—namely, that of reprinting in subsequent editions the colophons and dates strictly applicable to the 1st edition only. Thus the three editions of “Dictes and Sayings,” which issued from Caxton’s printing office, all bear the same date of imprint, November, 1477, while we know that Type No. 2*, in which the 2nd edition is printed, was not used till after February, 1478, and Type No. 6, in which the 3rd edition is printed, was not in use till about 1488.

The literary history of “Dictes and Sayings” has been already recounted at page 38 ante.

No. 29.—AN INDULGENCE GRANTED BY POPE SIXTUS IV FOR ASSISTANCE
AT THE SIEGE OF RHODES. On parchment. (1480)

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—The Type is No. 2* only, but from the warping of the skin assumes in many parts a very deceptive appearance. The lines, which are considerably extended, but all of one length, measure 9½ inches. The large 4-line wooden initial is to be noticed as being in all probability the earliest instance of printed initials in this Country; they certainly do not appear in any book for which this type was used. The following is the whole of the document:—

REMARKS.—The following particulars concerning John Kendal are gathered from an article in Archæologia, vol. xxvii, page 172, written by Sir F. Madden, and entitled "Documents relating to Perkin Warbeck."

In a deposition made by one Bernard de Vignoles, at Rouen in 1495, concerning a plot against the King's life, one of the persons implicated was John Kendal, Grand Prior of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem in England. He is also remarkable as having been the subject of the earliest contemporary English medal in existence, which is dated 1480, the period of the Siege of Rhodes. On this he is styled "Turcopolier," or General of the Infantry of the Order, the office of which was annexed to that of Grand Prior of England. Yet although the medal so designates him, it is not probable that he was actually present at the siege, as in that very year (Rymer, April, 1480) Edward IV ordered all persons to assist John Kendal, in Ireland, in procuring aid and money against the Turks. In this proclamation he is styled "Turcopolier of Rhodes, and locum tenens of the Grand Master in Italy, England, Flanders, and Ireland."

There are probably two EXISTING COPIES, although but one is at present known. This is in the British Museum (C. 18. e. 2), and was purchased in 1845. The blank space for the name is filled in with "Symoni Mountfort et Emme uxori ei," and it is dated the last day of March, 1480.

The Rev. Joseph Hunter noticed the existence of this "Indulgence," and wrote to Herbert about it, but it was not then recognised as a production of Caxton's Press; and, although the same document, must have been another copy, as the blanks were filled in with the names of Richard Cattlyn and John Cattlyn, April 16th, 1480.

NO. 30.—PARVUS ET MAGNUS CHATO. Folio. Sine ullâ notâ. With Woodcuts. Third Edition. (1481?)

COLLATION.—a b c 4^m, d 2ⁿ = 28 leaves, of which a j is blank.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. Two sizes of Type occur, No. 2^o and No. 3, the latter being used for the Latin couplets as well as the "Incipit" and "Explicit" lines. Length of long lines 4½ inches. 29 lines to a page. Signatures are met with here for the first time, lower-case letters and Roman numerals being used. Without folios or catchwords.

Commencing with a blank leaf the title-line follows, on a ij recto, in Type No. 3. (See the annexed Plate). The Text begins thus :—

Hic incipit parvus Chato

(Woodcut of Four Pupils, one of whom wears a fool's cap, kneeling before a Tutor, who, rod in hand, sits in a high-backed chair).

Am aia aduerterē quam hoīes grauit̃ errare
 Whan I aduerte in my renewbraunce
 And see how fele folkes erren greuously

On sig. a iij recto,

Whan ye it rede let not your herte be thence
But doth as this sayth with al your entente
Pic finis parui cathonis

(Woodcut of Five Pupils kneeling before their Tutor, who, seated in a chair, is teaching them from a book upon a lectern before him).

"Parvus Chato" contains 7 stanzas, and is followed, on sig. a iij verso, by

Pic incipit magnus Chato

I deus est animus nobis vt carmina dicunt
Pic tibi pricipue sit pura mente colendus
For thy that god is inwardly the wyrt
Of man and geuyth hym vnderstandyng

The First Book has 42 stanzas. On sig. b ij recto,

Incipit secundus liber

This has 39 stanzas. On 8th recto of sig. b, 3 lines down,

Incipit liber tercius

This has 27 stanzas. On sig. c iij recto, half-way down,

Incipit liber quartus

This has 52 stanzas. In Parvus and Magnus Chato together 167 stanzas.

The Text ends, on 4th recto of sig. d—

Here haue I fond that chal ye gupde and lede
Strepght to good fame 7 leue poii in hyr hous

Explicit Chato

REMARKS.—The Text is evidently a reprint from one of the early editions in quarto (see pages 52 and 55 ante), and was by no means intended "as a kind of supplement" to the "Cathon glossed" printed a year or two later by Caxton, as supposed by Dr. Dibdin in Typ. Ant., vol. i, page 201.

Two woodcuts add to the interest of this volume; one being at the beginning and one at the end of the "Parvus Chato." (See Plate 27.) The same cuts also appear in the "Mirroure of the World," which raises the question of precedency. Here, at first sight, one would give priority to the "Mirroure," as the cuts appear newer and cleaner; but this is very deceptive, depending more upon the amount of ink and pressure used than on the condition of the cuts. The breakage of some of the lines in the "Mirroure" is a much more sure sign, and this tells strongly in favour of "Parvus Chato." The greater appropriateness of the designs to the "Parvus Chato"—a boy's book—than to the illustration of grammar and logic as in the "Mirroure," leads to the same conclusion. It is therefore considered that these two cuts were designed originally for the "Parvus Chato," which in that case must have been printed previously to the "Mirroure," 1481.

There is nothing to induce us to attribute to Foreign Artists the production of these woodcuts, which show no amount of skill either in design or execution, which is not far surpassed in the undoubted productions of English Scribes and Miniature Painters of the same period. They may, therefore, be considered as probably the earliest specimens of wood-engraving in England.

2. EARL SPENCER.—Perfect, and clean, but measuring only $8\frac{1}{8} \times 6\frac{7}{8}$ inches.

Dr. Dibdin errs in attributing a copy to the Harleian Library. That described in the Catalogue (III. 6202) was a quarto, and was doubtless the same as that now in the collection of the Duke of Devonshire.

MANUSCRIPTS.—Cotton, Vesp. E. III (Latin, sæc. xiv), "Incipit liber ymago mūdi Ad instructionem multorum quibus deest copia librorum, hic libellus edatur, nomen q. ei. ymago mundi indatur. eo qd. dispositio totius orbis in eo quasi in speculo conspiciatur." Without diagrams, prologue, epilogue, or colophon; and although similar in subject and treatment is shorter than the French manuscripts either in metre or prose.—Birch 2435 is a French metrical composition entitled "Ymage du monde." It is splendidly illuminated, and bears date 1245. This was the original of the French prose version from which Caxton translated.—Royal 20 A. III, the same transcribed a century later.—Harl. 334 (14th Century), similar.—Royal, 19 A. IX (15th Century), French prose. This agrees closely with Caxton, and has several illuminations showing the same designs as in his own woodcuts. Several parts of Caxton's prologue are borrowed from this version, in the preface to which we are told that this manuscript, "fu grosse et de tous points ordonne cōme dit est, en la ville de bruges lan del Incarnacion n're seign Jhū crist mil quatre cens soixante et quatre." Copies were in all the chief libraries of the 15th Century. Dibdin is in error about "the English original of Caxton's work" being among the Royal manuscripts in the British Museum (Typ. Ant. vol. i, page 109).

There is a fine manuscript in the Imperial Library, Paris, No. 7070 (French), which appears to agree in all particulars with Caxton. It is described by M. Paris (t. v, page 31), under "Le Roman de l'image du Monde, par M^e Gossouin."

REMARKS.—The origin of this work cannot be traced very satisfactorily; but as showing a much better acquaintance with the cosmogony of the world than any previous composition, it may be interesting to examine the evidence of its authorship. Consult Notice sur Vincent de Beauvois, par Danau; Histoire Litt. t. xviii, page 460; Les Msc. Franc. t. v, page 31.

Vincent de Beauvois, of the Order of Preaching Friars, who, from the dedication attached to several of his productions, appears to have flourished in the reign of St. Louis, composed an extensive work in Latin, consisting of four parts—"Speculum Naturale," "Speculum Doctrinale," "Speculum Historiale," and "Speculum Morale." The whole was entitled "Speculum majus," for the following reason, given in the 3rd chapter of the First Book, "Majus autem, ad differentiam parvi libelli jamdudum editi, cujus titulus Speculum vel Imago mundi, in quo scilicet hujus mundi sensibilis dispositio et ornatus paucis verbis describitur." M. Daunou thinks that the "parvus libellus" here referred to was the "Imago Mundi" from which "Lymage du Monde" was translated, and that it was a previous composition of Vincent de Beauvois; and Montfaucon quotes a manuscript in the St. Germain collection (Fonds Latin, 926) to support his view, in which we read "Iste liber intitulatus Speculum vel Imago Mundi editus a fre. Vincentio ordinis fratrum predicatorum." But Vincent's reference to a Speculum Mundi, "jamdudum editus," by no means suggests that he wrote that as well as his own; and unfortunately as no copy is known, the fact even of its agreement with "Lymage du Monde" cannot be verified. The manuscript quoted by Montfaucon is no evidence at all, as M. Paris, on examination, found it to be identical with the "Speculum Historiale," or the Third Part of Vincent's "Speculum Majus," which is by no means "a rational description of the World and its products shortly described." The compilation of "Speculum Mundi," from Vincent's "Speculum Naturale," as suggested by Greswell, is equally far from the truth. Although no copy of the Latin "Speculum vel Imago Mundi," referred to by Vincent, is known, there appears little reason to doubt that it existed in the 13th Century. Perhaps an earlier copy of the Latin manuscript in the Cotton Library, already described, may have formed the foundation of the French version, although in that case, as in Vignay's translation of the Chess-Book, considerable additions have been made. The history of the "Mirroure of the World" may be summed up thus:—Before the middle of the 13th Century an unknown Author wrote in Latin "Speculum vel imago Mundi;" of this no copy has yet been recognised (Cotton, Vesp. E III?) In 1245 this was turned into French metre for the Duke of Berry, of which manuscripts in several libraries attest the popularity (Birch 2435; Royal 20, A III). In 1464 the old French metre was turned into French prose at Bruges, probably by "Maistre Gossouin," who added illustrations and divided it into chapters (Royal 19, A. ix; Bib. Imp., Paris, No. 7070). Here we find the Text used by Caxton for his translation, who even adopted a considerable portion of the French prologue (see ante Vol. I, page 153). Who this "Gossouin" or "Gossevin" was, and whether he was the Author or only the Scribe is quite unknown; perhaps he was identical with the Scribe "Gossein," who, upon the flight of Colard Mansion from Bruges, succeeded him as tenant of the scriptorium over the church-porch of St. Donatus.

The celebrated Cardinal Pierre d'Ailly compiled, in 1449, a work entitled "Tractatus de ymagine mundi" (Harl. MS. 637), which, however, is principally astronomical, having little in common with the work under review.

The publishing of this work was not a speculation on Caxton's part. He was employed, as we learn from the prologue (printed verbatim in Vol. I), to translate and probably to print it by Hugh Brice, Citizen and Alderman of London, who wished to make a present to Lord Hastings. To adorn, as well as illustrate the pages, the art of the Wood-engraver was employed, and we may consider the figures here displayed as some of the earliest specimens of that Art in England. The designs were borrowed from the manuscript copy, the illuminations in the French manuscripts showing the same treatment. All the copies issued from Caxton's Press have the words necessary for the explanation of the diagrams inserted with the pen, instead of being engraved on the wood, which may perhaps be an argument for their home execution, as the Flemish Artists were certainly well skilled in engraving words in their blocks. They all appear to have been perfected by the same Scribe, which probably induced Oldys to assert that they are in Caxton's Autograph. Of this there is no evidence. Many of these woodcuts came, at a later period, into the possession of Laurence Andrewe, who used them in printing his undated edition of the same work.

Hugh Brice, of the same county as Caxton, where he held the manor of Jenkins (Lysons, vol. iv, page 75), was also of the Mercers' Company, although Stow calls him a Goldsmith (Thoms's Stow, page 77). He was knighted about 1472; and in that year accompanied John Russell and others on a trade embassy to Bruges. John Russell was the orator whose celebrated speech, upon the reception of the Order of the Garter by the Duke of Burgundy, is one of the earliest pieces attributed to the Press of Caxton. In 1473, Hugh Brice, who is called, "Clericus in officio Contrarotulatoris Monetæ nostræ," was sent on a similar embassy, "De difficultatibus super intercurso Burgundiæ removendis;" and on both occasions would necessarily become personally acquainted with Caxton, who at that time was in the service of the Duchess of Burgundy at Bruges. (Rymer, edit. 1727, vol. xi, page 738, &c. &c.) He also held the offices of Keeper of the King's Exchange, London; Governor of the King's Mint in the Tower, under Lord Hastings; and Mayor of London, 1494. He died in 1496.

No. 32.—THE HISTORY OF REYNARD, THE FOX. First Edition. Folio. Translated in the Abbey of Westminster by William Caxton, 1481, but without Printer's Name, Place, or Date.

COLLATION.—a b c d e f g h i are 4^{na}, k and l are 3^{na}, a l and l 6 being blank. Between the leaves h 8 and i 1 is inserted a leaf half printed on both sides. This was probably owing to the accidental omission of a page by the compositor. Total, 84½ leaves, of which the first and last are blank.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. The Type is No. 2*, none other being used throughout the volume. The lines are spaced out to one length, and measure 4¾ inches. A full page has 29 lines. Without folios or catchwords. Arabic figures are used in the signatures. Spaces 2 lines deep are left for the insertion of initials.

The Text begins, on sig. a 2 recto, thus:—

REMARKS.—The date of printing this book is nowhere stated, though it was probably put to press directly after if not during the translation, which was finished on the 6th June, 1481. The literary history of this fable is very obscure. It appears to have had great popularity for some centuries previous to Caxton's time, as quotations from it appear so early as the 12th Century. Caxton's translation was made from "Die Historie van Reinaert die Vos, gheprent ter goude in hollant by mi ghehaert leeu Jnt iaer Mcccc en lxxix." This prose composition was obtained from the union of two Flemish poems on "Reinart." These again were derived from the French. It is rather remarkable that, although so many manuscript copies were in existence in the 15th Century—(there were three in one library, that of Charles V of France: See Barrois, Nos. 176, 1826, 1828)—few have descended to our times. In Harl. 219 (Latin) some of Reynard's stories are narrated, and in Harl. 913 there is a ballad of Reynard's adventures, in English verse, but there does not seem to be any manuscript, in any language, in any way similar to Caxton's version.

Equally rare are the early-printed editions, of which there are many. Of that by Gerard Leeu, in 1479, there are but two copies known. The Gouda edition, 1485, is very scarce; while of the reprint at Lubeck, 1498, only one copy, and that imperfect, exists. The first English edition, by Caxton, is comparatively common, as five copies are catalogued below; but of Caxton's 2nd edition, and of the undated reprint by Pynson, we cannot quote a perfect copy in any library. The later reprints are too numerous to specify, although we must mention the excellent verbatim reprint of Caxton's 1st edition, edited by Mr. Thoms, in 1844, for the Percy Society.

No. 33.—TULLY OF OLD AGE; TULLY OF FRIENDSHIP; THE DECLAMATION OF NOBLESSE. Folio. “Enprynted by me symple persone William Caxton.” No Place. 1481.

COLLATION.—Old Age: sigs. 1 and a are 3^{ms}, with 1 l, and the 6th leaf of a, blank—b c d e f g h are 4^{ms}—i is a 2^a, with i 4 blank. Friendship and the Declamation: a b c d e f are 4^{ms}, with no blanks. The 1st section in the “De Senectute” is signed in Arabic numerals only, thus: 1 2—1 3—1 4, the rest of the work being signed in letters and Arabic numerals. The three tracts together have 117 printed and 3 blank leaves.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page to any of the three treatises. The Type is all No. 2*, except where Latin quotations or proper names are introduced, when Caxton's largest Type, No. 3, is used. The lines are fully spaced out, and the long lines measure: 4½ inches; 29 lines make a full page. Without folios or catchwords. Space is left at the beginning of the chapters, with a director, for the insertion of 2 to 5-line initials. The peculiar 2cƿ belonging to Type No. 1 is used in this book.

After a blank leaf the Text begins on sig. 1 2, space being left for a 2-line initial h with director,

h Ere begynneth the prohempe vpon the reducinge / both out of latyn as of frenshe in to our englyssh tongue / of the polyptrique booke named Tullius de senec-tute . whiche that Tullius wrote vpon the disputaciōs 7

This proheme is divided into three long paragraphs, with space for an initial letter for each, and ends on the 4th recto, being followed immediately by the “Remembrance,” or table of contents, which gives the subjects of the different chapters, but no means of reference to the chapters themselves.

The “Remembrance” ends at the foot of the 5th verso of sig. a,

Thus endeth the remembraunce of thistorpes compyled and towehid in this lptil booke entituled Tullpus de Se-nectute /

A blank leaf follows, and the work itself commences on sig. b 1 recto, with space for a 6-line initial m, m Fouerapn frende Attitus / howe be it that I knowe certaynly that thou art bothe myght and day penif and careful / for the gouernement of the comyn profpste of the Romayns / cal-lyd in latyn Res publica / like as is Tytus flaminus the noble consul of Rome neuer:

The treatise "De Senectute" ends, with the following lines and colophon, at the head of the 3rd recto of sig. i, map preue tho thyngys whiche ye haue herd of me / which be by me wretyn in this my boke callid olde age :

Explicit :

Thus endeth the boke of Tulle of olde age translated out of latyn in to frenche by laurence de primo facto at the comaundement of the noble pryncce Wolvys Duc of Burbon / and enprynted by me symple persone William Caxton in to Englyshe at the playfir solace and reue-rence of men growping in to olde age the xij day of August the yere of our lord . M . CCCC . lxxj :

The remainder of the page and the reverse of the leaf are blank, and the 4th leaf of the signature is blank also. The signatures then commence afresh, and on a 1, at the head of the page,

Here foloweth the laid Tullius de Amicia translated in concluding on d 4 recto, whiche I myght sape vnto pou of frendshyp . Now I ex-horte pou / that ye so sette vertue / withoute the whiche / frendshyp map not be / that excepte the same ye deeme that nothyng map be better than frendshyp .

A blank of 3 lines, and then commences the epilogue of Caxton—

Thus endeth this boke named Tullius de Amicia / which finishes half-way down the verso of sig. d 4, werkes / we map atteyne aftir this shorte / transpatorie lpf

On the 5th recto of sig. d,

Here foloweth the Argument of the declamacyon / which laboureth to shewe . wherein honoure sholde reste :

The "Declamation" finishes on the verso of the 7th leaf of sig. f, with the following words :—

whether of thise partys is the better / I leue it to poure dome and sentence :

Thus endeth thoracion of Gapus Flammpneus

Another epilogue, by Caxton, follows directly underneath, with which the volume concludes, the Text ending with 13 lines on the 8th verso of sig. f, that we at our departing maye departe in suche wyse / that it maye please our lord god to receyue vs in to his ruitlastyng blisse. Amen :

Explicit Per Caxton

Dibdin errs greatly (Typ. Ant., vol. i, page 129) when he attributes to Herbert the oversight of the concluding paragraph of this volume; he himself having mistaken a portion of the first prologue for the last lines in the book.

That, although in three distinct treatises, Caxton intended them to form but one volume is plainly stated in the epilogue, which renders it difficult to imagine a reason for his printing the volume with two sets of signatures.

MANUSCRIPTS.—Burney 163 (Latin) contains the bare text of "De senectute" and "De Amicitia."—Addit. 17433 (French) is the translation of Premierfait, and has the following colophon, "Cy fine le liure de Tulle de viellesse translate de latin en francois du commendement de tresexcellant glorieux & noble prince Loys duc de Bourbon par moy Laurent de Premierfait cinquiesme iour de nouembre mil. Quatrezens & cinq."⁽¹⁾—Harl. 4917 (French) includes both the treatises of Cicero as translated by Premierfait, whose prologue to the Duke of Bourbon occupies 26 pages.—Harl. 1883 (Latin) contains "The Declamation," the prologue to which commences thus:—"Apud maiores fros scriptores de nobilitate." "Estate illa florētissima qua inclitū romi impiū adoleuit claruit senatorij ordīs vir quidā fulgentius felix," &c., the tract ending "Explicit controuersia de nobilitate int' publiū corneliū scipioē et gayū flamineū p' legū doctore egregiūq3 oratorē bonacursū pistorieñ. Amen."—Arundel 139: the same.—Harl. 4402 (French) contains "the Declamation," and is evidently the original of the translation printed by Caxton, although commencing with a prologue not inserted by

The paper used in this manuscript is from the very same mill as some of Caxton's, and has two water-marks, the hand on some sheets and the forked p on others. No English manuscript of any portion of "The Declamation" is known.

REMARKS.—We learn from manuscript Addit. 17433, as also from Caxton's own pen, that the translation of Cicero's "De senectute" and "De amicitia" into French was made by the command of Louis Duke of Bourbon, in 1405, by Laurence de Premierfait. This learned Priest was a native of the city of Troyes, and obtained great celebrity by his numerous translations, of which, however, we will only notice "Seneque. Des 4tre Vertues Cardinales" (Royal 20 A xii)—"Jehan Bocace. Livre des cas des nobles hommes et femmes, 1409" (Royal 20 C iv), printed afterwards by Colard Mansion—"Le Decameron" (Bib. Imp. Paris, 6887),—and "Epitres de Pierre Abelard et d' Heloise" (Les. Msc. Franc. vii, page 241). He flourished A.D. 1380 to 1420.

Two noted Poets, one the grandson of the other, and both bearing the name of Bonaccursus de Montemagno, flourished in the 14th and 15th Centuries. Some account of them may be found in Bibliotheca Pistoriensis, by F. A. Zacharia. The Abate Casotti published a collected edition of their works, entitled Prose e Rime de' due Buonaccorsi da Montemagno. 12mo. 1718. Brunet also quotes an edition printed in 1559. The younger, who died in 1429, was the Author of "The Declamation," which he originally wrote in Latin, but which he appears also to have translated into Italian, both being included in Casotti's edition. There seem to have been many 15th Century editions in Latin, and in one the authorship is attributed to Leonardo Aretino, to whom also it is given by Fossi; but there is certainly more probability that a piece by Montemagno should get attributed to Aretino, than vice versâ. Among the numerous translations of Jean Mielot (see ante, page 27) we must reckon the French version of "The Declamation," in which he styles the Author "Surse de Pistoie, Docteur en Loix, et grand Orateur." This was one of the first books that issued from the Press of Colard Mansion at Bruges.

The English translation of the "De Senectute," now under review, was accomplished, as we learn from the first prologue, at the ordinance and desire of Sir John Fastolfe. It has been ascribed by Leland to the Earl of Worcester, and by Anstis to Wyllyam de Wyrcestre; in both cases without evidence. We have seen already that the "Dictes and Sayings of the Philosophers" had been translated in 1450 for Sir John Fastolfe, by Stephen Scrope, his son-in-law (see page 37 ante), and this possibly came from the same pen. Whoever the translator may have been he took for his text the work of Laurence Premierfait, of which this version is a most literal translation, notwithstanding his assurance (see the end of the first prologue) that "this book is more amply expounded and more sweeter to the reader, keeping the just sentence of the Latin." The English version of "De Amicitia" and the "Declamation" are attributed by Caxton to the Earl of Worcester, a great traveller, a great collector of books, and a great orator. The Earl's history and acquirements have been described by Fuller, Dr. Henry, and many others; Caxton's admiration for him is expressed in the most touching and characteristic terms. Rastell issued an undated reprint of the treatise on "Friendship"; and Sir John Harrington, while a prisoner in 1562, made from the French a re-translation entitled "Tullius his booke of frendship."

REMARKS.—The woodcuts in this volume number only 16, not 24, as Dibdin and other writers say, 8 of them being impressions from blocks used for previous chapters. As already noticed, there seems a probability that the two cuts for "Parvus Chato," 3rd edition, were the earliest used by Caxton. These were soon after printed again, with the addition of many others in the "Mirrour of the World." The present cuts were perhaps the third essay of Caxton in this department, and for these, judging by the general style, and greater breadth of treatment, he appears to have employed another Artist.

The literary history of the work has been given under the 1st edition, but we must notice that the original prologue dedicated to the Duke of Clarence, the major portion of which was a translation from the French, has been superseded in this edition by a prologue from Caxton's own pen, the ideas in which, with the exception of the first few lines, and almost the very words, are often met with in manuscripts of that age.

The year in which this edition is generally considered to have been issued seems to me very incorrect. Ames assigns no date to it, but Dibdin, probably misled by Bagford's observations, thinks it one of Caxton's earliest efforts, while in some remarks attached to a reprint of this edition by Mr. Figgins, it is considered as the earliest specimen of the Westminster Press, and to have been printed from cut metal types. An examination of the work, however, with a typographical eye does not afford a single evidence of very early workmanship. All Caxton's early books were uneven in the length of their lines—this is quite even. Not one of the early works had any signatures—this is signed throughout. These two features alone are quite sufficient to fix its date of impression at least as late as 1480, when Caxton first began the use of signatures, but when we find that every known copy of this edition of the "Chess-Book" presents a thicker and more worn appearance than any one copy of any other book, there is good reason for supposing that this may have followed the "Tulle" of 1481, and have been the last book for which Type No 2* was used.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—The Type is all No. 3, the whole advertisement being in one paragraph of 7 lines, unevenly spaced, the longest measuring 5 inches. The verso is blank.

REMARKS.—This is an interesting relic, not only as giving us the name of the house inhabited by our first Printer—the Red Pale (“reed” was commonly used by Caxton for “red”)—but also as a specimen of advertisements in the 15th Century. Our Printer was not alone in issuing book-advertisements, although, from the fugitive nature of such productions, copies are very rarely to be found. An interesting list of books printed by Coburger, at Nuremberg, in the 15th Century, is in the British Museum (C. 18. e. 2. 27), to which is attached the following heading—“Cupientes emere libros infra notatos venient ad hospiciū subnotatum Venditorem habituri largissimum,” &c.

Although small in size this may be considered as the earliest known instance of a “broadside” printed in this Country. Dr. Dibdin has given an inaccurate facsimile in his Typographical Antiquities, vol. i, page cii.

The “Pye”* was a Collection of Rules to show the Priest how to deal (under every possible variation in Easter) with the concurrence of more than one office on the same day. In reading Caxton's Advertisement the question arises—in what respect did the “pyes of two and three commemorations of Salisbury Use” differ from the ordinary Pyes of Salisbury Use? The Very Reverend Canon Rock, D.D., has kindly placed at my disposal an explanation which confines the “pye of two commemorations” to the Rules for Easter and Whitsuntide, and the “pye of three commemorations” to the Rules for Easter, Whitsuntide, and Trinity.* Caxton's Advertisement therefore refers to separately published portions of the common "Directorium seu Pica Sarum," applicable, perhaps, to the current year only. In the succeeding article is described a "Pica," which, in some particulars, agrees entirely with Caxton's description.

* The Pica type of Printers is commonly supposed to derive its name from having been used for printing the early “Pica seu Directorium.” I have searched in vain among the earliest editions of the Directorium for a copy printed in types approaching the size of Pica. They are mostly the size of modern Brevier.

EXISTING COPIES.

1. OXFORD. Bodleian.—A poor, stained, and worm-eaten specimen, taken apparently from the binding of some book, as were most of the "Douce fragments," among which this is enumerated. Measurement, $5\frac{1}{2} \times 3\frac{1}{8}$ inches.

2. EARL SPENCER.—In good condition. Measurement, $5\frac{1}{2} \times 3$ inches. Inserted in "Dictes and Sayings of the Philosophers," 1st edition, after the prologue. From the library of Dr. Farmer.

The Rev. M. Walcott, in his History of Westminster, ascribes a copy to the library of Brazenose College, Oxon. There is, however, no trace of its ever having been there.

NO. 36.—DIRECTORIUM, SEU PICA SARUM. First Version. Quarto. Sine ullâ notâ. (Ante 1480.)

No perfect copy of this book being known the COLLATION is necessarily omitted. The four fragments from the covers of the St. Albans "Boethius" present the following particulars:—Their size is folio, but, being printed on both sides, each fragment gives four quarto pages, making a total of 16 pages.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—Only one Type, No. 3, is used in these fragments. The lines are not spaced out to one length. The longest measure $3\frac{1}{8}$ inches. A full page has 22 lines. Without signatures, or catchwords, or printed folios to the leaves. There are no initial letters, nor is there any space left for them.

* "Easter being a moveable feast, and ruling the time for Septuagesima, Sexagesima, and Quinquagesima Sundays, and the beginning of Lent, as well as the Sundays for Witsuntide and the beginning of Trinity, makes great and ever recurring alterations in the Services of the Calendar on Saints' days. Hence was it to shew the Cleric at a glance how to commemorate the Saints' days that came in the ever changing times of Lent, Easter, Witsuntide, and the Octave of the Trinity, the Pica began by giving a table of the Dominical letters, which made the Keys of all the rest of the Pica; and after such a way no matter what Month or Week Easter might fall on, the manner of commemorating the Saints' days happening then, or of putting them off till another time, was accurately described for all variations. But, as the chief variations in keeping the Saints' days happened at Easter and its following week—at Witsuntide and its week or Octave—and at Trinity and its Octave; and, as during these three great feasts, with their Octaves, the occurring feast itself was chiefly celebrated with mere mention, or Collect, or Commemoration; and, as people in Caxton's days had not printed but hand-written Breviaries without the Pica or Pye in them, Caxton printed, to supply their want, "pyes of two and three commemorations"—that is to say, directions for saying the whole Office of two Octaves or Commemorations, say of Easter and Witsuntide, and of three Octaves, Easter, Witsuntide, and Trinity. It should be borne in mind, as I have pointed out in t. 4, p. 139 of "The Church of our Fathers" that the Laity as well as the Clergy used to say the Breviary. Hence Caxton's invitation to buy his "pyes" to the Laity too."—Extract from a letter, to J. F. Goulding, Esq., from the Very Rev. Canon Rock, D.D.—February, 1862.

The whole is in very contracted Latin, of which the following page is a fair specimen—

REMARKS.—There can be no doubt that this was the product of Caxton's Press, as all the circumstances connected with it tend to prove. It was extracted from the covers of a book which was evidently bound in Caxton's workshop, and for the binding of which he had used waste sheets from the Press (see ante page 70). The fragments belonging to known books, were all printed by Caxton before 1481; while the "Advertisement" and "Directorium," reasoning from the uneven length of their lines, were certainly printed before 1480.

This "Directorium" is not the same version as that printed by Caxton, about 1486, in Type No. 5, and a 2nd edition of which was issued a few years later in Type No. 6. These last are the text revised for Bishop Rotherham, founded upon an earlier version, of which the leaves under notice appear to be a portion.

The 8 leaves which give rise to this article are in the library of King Edward VI Grammar School, St. Albans, and are considered unique. (See page 70 ante). Measurement, 8 × 5½ inches.

No. 37.—HORÆ AD USUM SARUM. Second Edition. Quarto.
Sine ullâ notâ. (1480?)

No perfect copy of this being known the COLLATION is necessarily omitted, and the following remarks are made from three fragments rescued from the St. Albans "Boethius" already noticed.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—The only Type used throughout the volume appears from these relics to have been No. 3. The lines are spaced out, and measure $3\frac{1}{8}$ inches. A full page contains 20 lines. Without signatures, catchwords, or folios. The initials and paragraph marks are not inserted.

The first fragment, a quarto leaf printed on both sides, but very defective, contains part of the "Suffragia of the Three Kings," which are among the additions to the First Part of the "Primer"; and in an early edition by Wynken de Worde immediately precede the Latin Fifteen Oes.

The following lines are at the head of the recto and verso of the leaf, which has a considerable portion torn away.

RECTO.	verso.
et faba don magos orienta-Eus illa Ichior ⁊ Baltha
da populis tu

The second fragment is also but one leaf, and contains the commencement of Part II of the Horæ, the "Ne reminiscaris" being the anthem preceding the Seven Penitential Psalms.

Ne reminiscaris
 Omne ne in furore tuo arguas me neq; in ira tua corripas me iſecretæ mei domine quoniã infirmus sum sana me dñe qm̃ con-turbata sunt ossa mea ⁊ anima

The third fragment consists of two pages of prayers, printed side by side on a half-sheet. One page contains the first of the Fifteen Oes in Latin, and the other some prayers very near the end of the Litany, the beginnings of which are :—

eus qui caritatis dona p̃ gratiã sancti spiritus tuorũ cordib; fidelium infundis da famulis ⁊ famu
 &c. &c.

*Eus a quo sancta desideria rec-ta consilia et iusta sunt opera da ser-
&c. &c.
Pfectibilem miam tuam qucumus
dñe nobis clementer ostende. vj ff*

REMARKS.—As all the Fifteen Oes and the Litany, as well as other prayers, intervene between these two pages, it is evident that they were not intended to be printed on one sheet; this, added to the fact that the paper is printed only on one side, makes it clear that these two are trial or proof pages.

This edition of "Horæ" is entirely unknown to any of our Bibliographers, and was probably a 2nd edition of that noticed already (see page 42 ante). Its claims to be considered the workmanship of Caxton rest on the same grounds as those of the "Directorium" (see pages 70 and 102 ante).

The date 1480 has been attributed to this production for the following reason. It is without signatures, and has the lines spaced to an even length. Now, in the latter half of this year Caxton changed his practice from uneven to even length lines, and about the same time began the use of signatures. This book is in a transition state, and therefore printed about the time of the change.

The only fragment known, consisting of 4 quarto leaves, is in the library of King Edward VI Grammar School, and was extracted, with many others already noticed, from the old binding of a "Boethius."

No. 38.—PSALTERIUM, ETC. Quarto. Sine ullâ notâ. (1480–83?)

COLLATION.—a b c d e f g h i k l m n o p q r s t u x p are 4th, with a l blank; but as only one copy is known to be in existence, and that imperfect, no complete collation can be given.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is only one Type, No. 3, used throughout the work, excepting for the signatures, where the Arabic numerals belong to Type No. 2. The lines, which are spaced out, measure $3\frac{1}{4}$ inches, and a full page has 20. Without printed folios or catchwords. Space for the insertion of 2 to 4-line initials, generally without director, is left at the beginning of paragraphs. The signatures are in letters and Arabic numerals, a mode of signing used by Caxton only between the years 1480 and 1483.

The book doubtless commenced with a blank leaf for a l, which is wanting in this copy.

The Text begins, at the head of a 2 recto, thus :—

Iheronimus de laude dei super psalterium

Nichil enim est in hac vita mortali in quo possumus sa-miliarius inherere deo q̄ diuinitis laudibus. Nullus em̄ mor-

"Iheronimus super Psalterium" ends on a 6, recto, and is followed by two prayers and a metrical hymn. The hymn, on a 7 recto, is as follows :—

Ag̃e x̃p̃iste clementissime : tu cor da nostra posside : ut tibi laudes debitas : reddamus omni tempore . Gloria tibi domine qui natus es de vir-gine cum patre et sancto spiritu in sempiterna secula Amen

On the verso of the same leaf commences the Psalter—

Incipit liber hymnorum vel soliloquior p̃s. i.

Etatus vir qui nō abiit in concilio impior̄ et in via peccator̄ nō stetit : ⁊ in cathedra pestilencie nō sedit ed in lege dñi voluntas ei :

The Psalter finishes on sig. t 3 recto, and is followed by the Canticles, Te Deum, Athanasian Creed, a general Litany, including most of the Prayers now in use, and on sig. p 8 recto by—

Incipiunt vespere mortuorum
Placebo dño in regione viuorū . p̃s
Dilexi quoniā exaudiet Hec me q̃

The verso ends abruptly, and all after sig. p is wanting.

The only EXISTING COPY known of this book is in the old Royal Library in the British Museum (C. 35. e), and was once in the possession of Queen Mary I, whose initials "M. R." are lettered on the back of the volume. Although imperfect, it is in very good condition, and very clean. Some small circular copper-plates, probably by the master of 1466, are pasted over most of the red initials. Measurement, $8\frac{1}{2} \times 5\frac{1}{2}$ inches. It was first recognised as being printed with the types of Caxton by Mr. Bullen, of the British Museum, through whose hands it passed while re-cataloguing.

TYPE No. 4.

NO. 39.—THE CHRONICLES OF ENGLAND. Folio. “Emprynted by me William Caxton in thabbey of Westmynstre.” June 10th, 1480. First Edition, with short commas.

COLLATION.—Prologue and title a 4^a, signed ij, iij and iiij, the 1st leaf being blank. a (a j blank) b c d e f g h i k l m n o p q r s t u x are 4^{as}; p is a 3^a. Total 182 leaves, of which 2 are blank.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. Type No. 4 only is used. There are 40 lines to a full page. The lines are spaced out to an even length, and measure 4½ inches. The signatures are in lower-case letters and Arabic numerals. Spaces left for the insertion of initials. Without folios or catchwords.

Commencing with a blank leaf, the prologue follows on sig. ij recto, the Text beginning, with space for a 5-line initial,

I the pere of thyn carnacion of our lord Ihu crist M.
CCCC. lxxx. And in the xx. pere of the regne of kyng Edward the fourthe / Atte requeste of dyuerce gentilmen I haue endeoured me to enprunte the cronicles of Englonde as in this booke shall by the suf-fraunce of god folowe / And to thende that euery mon map see and shortly fynde suche mater as it shall plesse hym to see or rede I haue ordepned a table of the maters shortly compiled & chapitred as here shall folowe which booke begynneth at Albion how she with her su-sters fonde this land first & named it Albion & endeth at the beginnyng of the regne of our said souerain lord kyng Edward the iiij.

The table commences on the same page, finishing half-way down the 8th verso of the same signature, with the other half blank. On sig. a 2, with a blank leaf preceding, commences the Chronicle—

How the lande of Englonde was fyrst named Albion And by what encheion it was so named

The Chronicle ends on the 6th recto of sig. p, the verso being blank,

Thus endeth this present booke of the cronicles of englonde / enprynted by me william Caxton In thabbey of westmynstre by london fynnysshid and accomplisshid the x. day of Iuny the pere of thyn-carnacion of our lord god M. CCCC. lxxx. And in the xx. pere of the regne of kyng Edward the fourth

MANUSCRIPTS.—Royal 17 D. xxi (sec. xv) agrees generally with Caxton, so far as the Siege of Rouen, where the manuscript ends.—Harl. 1568 (sec. xv) has rude illuminations, and begins, “Here may a man here how Engelande was first callide Albion and thorow whan it hade the name." The text is the same as the previous manuscript.—Harl. 266 is an imperfect copy of the same.—Harl. 200 (sæc. xv) is an anonymous French version of the same chronicle.—Lambeth Palace (sæc. xv); a manuscript, imperfect at beginning and end, being Caxton's text interpolated.

REMARKS.—The use of short commas, which characterises the early state of this type, would induce us to give priority to this edition over the other, in which the long commas are used, independently of any printed date.

The history here printed by Caxton differs but little from the "Cronicle of Brute," one of the most popular of the 15th and 16th Century books. It is, however, carried further than any manuscript chronicle I have seen, and it appears probable that, as any writer who felt competent made his own additions in transcribing, so Caxton added more or less to his copy, and brought the history down, as he acknowledges having done in "Polycronicon," to the battle of Towton. The old "Cronicle of Brute" was so called from the opening chapter which describes the settlement of Brutus, the descendant of the great Æneas in Britain. The respective parts due to Nennius, Douglas of Glastonbury, and Geoffrey of Monmouth, are probably too obscure to determine. The St. Albans Chronicle, printed two or three years later, and in types somewhat resembling those of Caxton, is the same text, interpolated throughout with a history of the Popes, and ecclesiastical matters. This, and the edition of Machlinia (Caxton's text), about the same date, are not unfrequently catalogued erroneously as from Caxton's Press.

EXISTING COPIES.

1. CAMBRIDGE. Public Library (AB. 10. 32. 2).—Perfect and clean. Measurement, $10\frac{3}{4} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Bound with "The Description of Britain," which precedes it.

2. OXFORD. Bodleian.—Imperfect, wanting part of a 4 and all p 1, but has both blanks. A fine copy, uncut, and in the original binding. Measurement, $11\frac{1}{2} \times 8$ inches. In manuscript, "Th: Seld: £1. 18." "The Description of Britain" follows in the same volume.

3. THE SAME. Another copy.—Imperfect, wanting the last leaf, and with 4 leaves mounted. Slightly stained. Measurement, $10\frac{1}{4} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

4. THE SAME. St. John's College.—Imperfect, wanting q 2. Very clean, and measures $9\frac{7}{8} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches. "The Description of Britain" precedes it in the same volume. "Liber Coll. S. Joan: Bapt: Oxon. Ex legato Nath: Crynes Alu. ejusdem olim Socii 1745."

5. GLASGOW. Hunterian Museum.—Not quite perfect, half of d 8 being torn away. A very poor stained copy, and is preceded by the "Description." Measurement, $9\frac{1}{2} \times 7$ inches.

6. LAMBETH PALACE.—Made perfect by the addition of two leaves (sigs. g 4 and 5) from a smaller copy; p 1 is bound after p 5. The paper of this example is remarkably stout and clean. "The Description of Britain" precedes it. Measurement, $10\frac{1}{2} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

7. DUKE OF DEVONSHIRE.—Made perfect. Clean. The leaf r 8 placed between p 5 and 6. Measurement, $10\frac{1}{2} \times 7$ inches.

Five leaves—b 7, b 8, c 1, c 2, and c 3—are in the Pepysian Library, Cambridge, bound at the beginning of an imperfect St. Albans Chronicle.

A fragment is also attributed by Mr. Botfield to the Chapter Library of Westminster Abbey. Here, almost on the spot where Caxton lived, and worked, and died, it would have been most interesting to have found a goodly collection of his books, but unfortunately no relic of our first Printer has been discovered, the fragment above noticed being a portion of the St. Albans Chronicle. Here, too, we may notice that there are many imperfect copies and fragments of both the St. Albans and Machlinia Chronicles in various libraries. These are nearly always, on account of a certain similarity in appearance, erroneously attributed to the Press of Caxton.

No. 40.—THE DESCRIPTION OF BRITAIN. Folio. “*Fynyshe*d by me William Caxton.” No Place. 18th August, 1480.

COLLATION.—Three 4^m and one 3^m, unsigned. 30 leaves, the last only being blank.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. Type No. 4 only is used. There are 40 lines to a full page. The lines are spaced out to an even length, and measure 4½ inches. Spaces left for the insertion of initials. Without signatures, folios, or catchwords. The signatures were probably omitted on account of the limited extent of the work.

The Text begins, on the verso of the 1st leaf, thus:—

Hit is so that in many and diuerse places the compyn cronicles of englonde ben had and also now late enprinted at westmynstre making 7 lines over the table, which ends on the same page.

after the name of Albryne the oldest daughter of Dioctesian, and had xxxij. sisters, And they were first that enhabited this lande / And because she was the oldest suster she named this lond Albion after her owne na-
The Text ends on the 29th recto,

Here endeth her discription of Britayne the / whiche conteyneth en gland wales and scotland / ⁊ also bicause Irlande is vnder the reu le of englonde ⁊ of olde tyme it hath so continued therfore I haue

william Caxton the xvij. day of August the yere of our lord god
M. CCC. lxxx. and the xx. yere of the regne of kyng Edward the fourthe.

REMARKS.—“The Description of Britain” is one of the chapters out of Ralph Higden’s “Polycronicon.” Caxton printed it as a supplement to the Chronicles, and evidently intended it to follow on after the termination of that work. The blank leaf at the end instead of the beginning favours this idea.

It is improbable that a 2nd edition of “The Description of Britain” was issued, as no copy with the long commas (/) has yet been found.

EXISTING COPIES.

1. BRITISH MUSEUM. King's Library (C. 10. b. 24).—Imperfect, wanting the 8th leaf, with several in a bad state. The first is mounted and inserted backwards. Bound alone. Measurement, $9\frac{1}{2} \times 7$ inches.

2. CAMBRIDGE. Public Library.—Imperfect, wanting the 1st leaf. Bound with the 1st edition of "Chronicles," which it precedes. The uninked impression of 5 or 6 lines of type at the foot of the last page, which is short, may be noticed in this and in some other books. Measurement $10\frac{3}{4} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches. In an old hand, "E libris N. Johnson, M.D." This was probably Nathanael Johnson, M.D. of Pontefract, a contemporary with Bishop Moore.

3. OXFORD. Bodleian.—Perfect, with the blank leaf. In the same volume as the 1st edition of "Chronicles," which it follows. Very large. Measurement, $11\frac{1}{2} \times 8$ inches.

4. THE SAME. Another copy.—Imperfect, wanting the first 2 leaves, and having 4 others mounted. Stained throughout. In the same volume as the 1st edition of "Chronicles," which it follows. Newly bound in blue morocco. Measurement, $10\frac{1}{2} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

5. THE SAME. Another copy.—Imperfect, wanting the 1st, 8th, and 11th leaves. (For this last see the "Polychronicon," in this library, where it is bound in by error). Measurement, $9\frac{1}{2} \times 6\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Bound alone. The book-plate of F. Douce.

6. THE SAME. St. John's College.—Imperfect, wanting the 24th leaf. Preceding the 1st edition of "Chronicles," with which it is bound. Measurement, $9\frac{7}{8} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches. "Ex legato Nath: Crynes."

7. LAMBETH. Archiepiscopal Library.—Perfect, with final blank, and in excellent preservation. Bound with the 1st edition of "Chronicles," which it precedes. Measurement $10\frac{3}{4} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

MANUSCRIPTS.—The only manuscript copy of this poem which can be found after considerable research is preserved in the library of Trinity College, Cambridge. It belonged formerly to John Stow, who has noted several omissions in the text, as compared with some other copy, probably the printed edition; and who has written over the top, "By John Lydgate." The poem itself is headed "Here beginneth a brief compiled treatise called by the Author thereof Curia Sapientia." The same title appears at the end of both the first and second book of the poem.

REMARKS.—The following description by Oldys is taken from Bib. Harl., vol. iii, No. 3313: "Though neither the Author's nor Printer's name appears to this poem, it was visibly enough printed by Caxton and composed by Lidgate, had we not the authority of John Stow for it, in the catalogue of his writings. The Author tells us it was written at the command of his Sovereign (perhaps King Hen. V), and it seems to be one of the scarcest of his pieces extant. There seems to be more invention in it and variety of matter than in most other poems of his composition, displaying, after a copious debate between Mercy and Truth, Justice and Peace, a distinct survey throughout the palace and domains of Sapience, of all the products of nature, in distinct chapters, and of arts and sciences; with his further reference, at the end of each, to the Authors who have written on them."

That Lydgate was the real Author of the poem rests on the evidence of Stephen Hawes, who included it in the list of his master Lydgate's works in 1506. All later Writers, including Stow, have but followed his steps. There are, however, several reasons for doubting Hawes's correctness in this instance. Although the effusions of Lydgate are more commonly found in manuscripts of the 15th Century than those of any other Poet, yet the copy of "Curia Sapientia" above noticed is the only one at present known of this remarkable poem. It appears improbable that the inferior productions of this popular Writer should have become multiplied so plentifully, while copies of this, which would rank highest among his works, should be allowed to sink almost into oblivion. Again, the internal evidence of the following stanzas, taken from the proeme, as printed by Caxton, is by no means suggestive of Lydgate as the Author:—

My comune ne vulgare eke moost interupte ;
And J conuersaunte and born in the partes
Where my natyfe langage is moost corrupt ;
And with most sundry tonges myxt and rupte .
O , lady myn , wherfor J thee byseeche ,
My muse amende , dress , forge , my nesse and eche .

For to al makers here J me excuse ,
That J ne can delycately endyte ;
Rude is the speche of force , which J must use
Such infortune my natyfe byrth may wyle ,
But o ye lordes , whiche haue your delyte
In termes gay / & ben moost eloquent /
This booke to you no plesaunce may present ,

After full allowance for the self-depreciation common to Writers of that Age, we can hardly believe that Lydgate could, with any degree of truth, thus speak of himself. He was not born in a part where the English speech was most corrupt and mixed with sundry tongues, a description more applicable to the Weald of Kent, or parts bordering on the Sea; but was, as he himself says, "borne in Lidgate," an inland town near Bury St. Edmunds. Here, as we learn from his "Testamentum," he was put to school in his boyhood, and, when his "yeeris accountyd ful fifteene," he says—

Entryng this tyme into religioun, Unto the plouhe J putte forth myn hoond.

which refers to his embracing the Rule of St. Benet. The young "monke of Burye" then went through the usual tuition, being instructed—

By vertuous men religious & sad,
Full weel expert, discreet, prudent and wise;

and, if we may judge by his future fame and his popular writings, profited well, and had no reason to excuse himself for the "infortune" of his "natife byrth."

"I take Caxton to be the poet or author, by the above verses," says Ames (Typ. Ant., page 67), after quoting the whole of the "Prohemium." This opinion was, perhaps, too readily adopted. Although there is a curious parallel between the Poet's statement of his rude and corrupt speech, and the apology of Caxton in his additions to "The Recuyell" for his "vnperfightnes" in English, owing to his having been educated where was "spoken as brode and rude English as in any place of England;" and although we know that Caxton could put together a few verses, as in the instance of the last two stanzas of "Moral Proverbs;" yet, judging from the literary ability of his known works and translations, we should hardly be justified in ascribing the authorship of "Curia Sapientiæ" to him. The plan of this work, in which Theology, Geography, Natural History, Horticulture, Grammar, Rhetoric, Arithmetic, Geometry, Music, and Astronomy are all, in turn, described, was certainly too high a flight for our Printer. Moreover, it seems probable, from the frequent use of Latin titles to the various divisions of the book, and especially from the colophon "Explicit Tractatus de Fide et Cantus famule sue," that the poem was not original, but a translation from the Latin. Although we cannot doubt that Caxton understood Latin, yet all his acknowledged translations are from the French.

Until further evidence, then, be produced, we must consider the Author as unknown.

The titles for this book, viz:—"The werke of Sapience" and "Tractatus de Fide et Cantus famule sue," erroneously adopted by Ames and other Bibliographers, were taken from the first and last lines of the poem. The proper title appears at the end of "Liber Primus."

NO. 42.—THE HISTORY OF GODFREY OF BOLOYNE; OR THE CONQUEST OF JERUSALEM. Folio. Printed the 20th November, in the Abbey of Westminster, by William Caxton, 1481.

COLLATION.—a is a 3^a, with a j blank; b a 2^a, b 1 being blank; 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, and 16 are all 4^{as}, 17 is a 3^a=144 leaves, of which two are blank. Excepting the first two gatherings, the signatures are entirely in Arabic numerals. Dibdin corrects Ames, and says he counted 146 leaves, but Ames was right.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. The Type is entirely No. 4. A full page has 40 lines, which are of an even length, and measure 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Without folios or catchwords. Space at the commencement of chapters is left for the insertion of 3 to 7-line initials.

The volume commences with a blank leaf, after which follows the prologue, the Text beginning on a 2, with space for a 4-line initial,

MANUSCRIPTS.—Royal 15 E 1. Large folio, on vellum, 15th Century, with numerous illuminations. The character of the writing very similar to the large type of Colard Mansion. Begin, "Les anciennes histoires diet que eracles fut moult bon xpien et gouverneur de lempire de romme." The text is without doubt the original of Caxton's translation, with which it agrees chapter for chapter, but is carried much further than the death of Godfrey, ending with the following chapter—"Comment le roy dangleterre avec grant naue arriua en la cite de palerne / et en cecile / et alla a meschines deuers le roy de France." Neither the prologue nor epilogue in Caxton have any counterpart here. The only other manuscript known in the British Museum is Royal 17 F. v, which does not agree with Caxton, being considerably shorter and in different phraseology. They both, nevertheless, are evidently of the same origin. The description of an abridgment of this manuscript, which M. Paris ascribes to Guillaume de Tyr, is worth consulting (see Les Msc. Franç., vol. iii, 10).

REMARKS.—I have not been able to obtain any trustworthy account of the Author of this Romance; which, notwithstanding the scarcity of copies, both manuscript and printed, appears to have enjoyed a considerable degree of popularity.

An edition was printed at Paris, in 1500, with the title "Les faits et Gestes de preux Godefroy de Bovillon et de ses chevalereux freres Baudouin et Eustache."

10. S. HOLFORD, ESQ.—Perfect, clean, and free from manuscript, having the blank leaves a j and b j. Measurement, $11 \times 7\frac{3}{4}$ inches. The initial at sig. 1 2 is beautifully illuminated. The volume is in its original vellum cover, and contains the following interesting notice:—"This was king Edw. y^e fourth Booke." Also the Autographs, "ptinet Rogero Thorney," and "Rob^t Wellborne." The former of these names is worth a comment, because it throws some doubt upon the accuracy of the previous notice. Roger Thorney, like other literary Mercers of his time, was probably a friend and supporter of Caxton: he certainly patronised his successor, Wynken de Worde, as the following lines show:—

"————— this boke of Policronicon
" Whiche Roger Thorney Mercer hath exhorted
" Wynken de Worde of vertuous entent
" Well to correcte, and gretely hym comforted,
" This speycal boke to make and sette in prente."

From W. de Worde's edition of Polychronicon, 1496.

How then did Roger Thorney become possessed of the copy of "The History of Godefroy of Bulloyn," belonging to his King? On the inside cover is also the book-plate of Sir John Dolben, Bart., of Finedon, in Northamptonshire. This volume was sold among the books of Secondary Smyth, in 1862, and passed into the library of the Earl of Peterborough. It was afterwards in the Vernon collection, which is now included in that of Mr. Holford.

Two leaves of the table are among the Douce fragments in the Bodleian.

MANUSCRIPTS.—Addit. 10105 (sæc. xiv), Latin, from Heber's library. The original chronicle of one Roger, Monk of Chester. It commences at Book III, chapter 31 of Caxton's print, and ends A.D. 1327. Reg. 13 D 1 (sæc. xv), Latin, Ralph Higden's Chronicle, founded on Roger's text. From the old Church library of St. Peter, Cornhill: "Liber Ecclesie S. Petri super Cornehill Londini." Copies of Higden are also—Harl. 655, 1320, 3877; Egerton 871; Arundel 86. Harl. 3600 is carried, by an anonymous Writer, to the 8th year of Henry VI. In Harl. 3671, under the year 1232, is added "Ranulphus comes cestr' lincoln & huntingdon obiit ap Wallingford & sepultus est apd cestr' in capilō mōchor' cum p'genitoribus suis." Addit. 10104, 12118, and 24194, the last from the library of Archbishop Tenison, are the usual Latin version of Higden. Harl. 2261 (sæc. xv), English; an anonymous translation, very different from that by Trevisa, as the following quotation from the first prologue will show:—

Harl. 1900 (sæc. xv), Trevisa's translation, exactly agreeing with Caxton's print, except in the arrangement of the prologue, beginning "Syth the tyme that Babel," &c.; this in Caxton is made one continuous and intricate paragraph, but here appears, in proper shape, as a dialogue between "Clericus" and "Dominus." Cotton, Tib. D VII, same text as Harl. 1900: injured by fire. There is a copy in Peterhouse College library, in which is written "Fynyshe & ended after the cōpye of Caxton then (in?) Westmynster."

REMARKS.—Few of Caxton's books have excited more interest and research than the "Polycronicon." It appears to have had its origin with Roger, Monk of St. Werberg, in Chester, who, about the beginning of the 14th Century, made an extensive compilation in Latin from several of the old Chronicles and Works on Natural History then in existence. Ralph Higden, of the same monastery, who died before 1360, amplified this compilation, entitling his work, "Polycronicon;" and this, judging from the numerous copies still extant, had a very extended popularity. In 1387, Trevisa, Chaplain to the Earl of Berkeley, translated the Latin of Higden into English prose. An account of Trevisa, with a history of his works, is given by Dr. Dibdin, in Typ. Ant. vol. i, page 140, who, however, has not included in his list Trevisa's English translation of the Gospel of Nicodemus (Addit. MS. 16165). Nearly a century later, Caxton revised the antiquated text of Trevisa, which, together with a continuation of the history to the year 1460, was finished on July 2nd, 1482, and printed soon after. Caxton entitled his continuation "Liber ultimus," and it is most interesting as being the only original work of any magnitude from our Printer's pen. A literal reprint may be found in Vol. I of this work.

Caxton tells us very little of the sources of his information. He mentions two little works, "Fasciculus temporum" and "Aureus de Vniverso," from which, however, he certainly obtained but little material for his "Liber ultimus," which treats almost entirely of English matters.

As a specimen of the alteration made by our Printer, when he "a lytyl embellyshed" the text as rendered by Trevisa, the following quotation is given, in which the consequences of Man's fall are graphically described. The embellishment chiefly consists in modernising the old English; although here and there Caxton added sentences to the text.

20. BERIAH BOTFIELD, ESQ.—Made perfect by the union of two or three copies. Measurement, $10\frac{3}{8} \times 7\frac{3}{4}$ inches. Purchased of Pickering for £100.

21. ROBERT GLENDINING, ESQ.—Imperfect, wanting all before a; 1 6 and 1 8. In fair state. From the library of Sir Patrick Blake, whose books were sold in 1808. Measurement, $10\frac{1}{2} \times 7\frac{3}{8}$ inches.

22. W. E. WATKYN WYNNE, ESQ.—Imperfect, wanting all before sig. 1 8; 11 leaves in various parts, and all after sig. 52 8. Much mutilated, scribbled over and torn, with the original parchment wrapper left on one side only. Measurement, $10\frac{3}{4} \times 8$ inches. This volume has had many owners. It was deposited very early, probably as soon as printed, in the monastery of St. Werberg, Chester, the very birthplace of its Latin original. There "Dompnus Johēs Ley, þor (Prior) huius cenobij, Custos huius libri," claimed it by his Autograph as the property of the monastery. The name of the 25th and last Abbot "Dompnus Thomas Clarke huius cenobii," shows that at the time of the Reformation, when the abbey was converted into a cathedral, the volume was still safely preserved. In his manuscript is also "A boke of seynte Werburge in Chester." It was doubtless about this time that it was abstracted, and the Autographs of several generations of the "Smythe" family, "Drapers of y^e Cety of Chestre," as well as of the "Wryght" family, also Drapers, show that in the 16th Century it was no longer "a boke of St. Werberg." In 1637 it had passed over to Ireland, and thence probably came into the possession of its present owners.

Besides the foregoing, copies are said to be in the libraries of the Marquis of Bath and the Marquis of Bute. Very imperfect copies are in the libraries of the Duke of Devonshire, and of J. Simes, Esq., of Brighton; two others are in the possession of Mr. Lilly, of Bedford Street, Strand. Six leaves are in the British Museum, Addit. MS. 14927.

In Mr. Tutet's copy there was written on the last leaf of the index, in an old hand, "Presens liber p̄inet ad Willm̄ Purde empt a Willm̄o Caxton Reg' Imp̄sor vicissimo Novembris anno Rg' Edwardi quarti vicissimo secundo."—Typ. Ant., vol. i, page 151. I have not been able to trace this manuscript note in any of the above copies, all of which, except that in the Astor library, have been in my hands.

MANUSCRIPTS.—British Museum Addit. 22937 (sæc. xv): this manuscript, which is beautifully illuminated, contains the three Pilgrimages, as originally written in French metre by Deguilleville, and begins—"Cy commence le pelerinaige de vie humaine expose sus le roumant de la rose."

After this prologue is "Cy apres est la vision que guillaume de guileville moine vit en son dormât." This is followed by "Le Pelerinage de l'Ame," and "Le Pelerinage du Jesus Christ."—Egerton, 615 (sæc. xv), is an English prose version of "The Pilgrimage of the Soul." It begins, "This is the Kalender of the book caled Grace de dieu." Unfortunately chapter I and part of II are wanting, but the remainder, although differing somewhat verbally, closely agrees with the text as printed by Caxton.—Cotton, Tib. A vii (sæc. xiv), a metrical English poem, entitled "The Pylgrim," is a different work.—In the Public Library, Cambridge (MS. Kk. 1. 7), is an interesting manuscript (sæc. xv), entitled "Incipit liber qui nūcupatur Grace dieu," and beginning, "As I lay slepyng in my bed in a seynt lawrence nyzt. I fel in a ful merveylous dreme." "Her endith ye drem of ye pilg'mage of ye soule." This is the translation complete, as printed by Caxton.—The Imperial Library, Paris, is rich, having copies of the original version, of the enlarged version, and of the prose version. See Nos. 6988, 6988², 7086, 7210, 7210⁴, 7211, 7211², 7212, and 7213, as described by M. Paris, to whom I am indebted for portions of the following remarks. The colophon to 7211² (sæc. xiv) is as follows:—"Explicit iste liber nuncupatus liber Peregrini quem composuit dominus Guillaume de deguilleville," &c.

REMARKS.—The common custom among Preachers of the Middle Ages of engaging the attention of their hearers by spiritualising tales and even jests current among the people is well known. This practice seems to have suggested to a Monk, named Guillaume de Deguilleville, the idea of moralising the celebrated "Roman de la Rose." His poem was divided into three parts, and completed about 1335. It contains more than 36,000 lines, and its title is "Le Romant des trois Pelerinages." These three Pilgrimages are "Le pelerinage de la vie humaine;" "Le pelerinage de l'Ame;" and

"Le pelerinage du Jesus Christ." Addit. MS. 22937 contains the three parts complete. None of these appear to have been printed. Not satisfied, however, with the result of his labours, Guillaume again set to work and recast the whole poem, with many amplifications and additional verses. This, which was finished about 1350, and of which a manuscript copy is in the Bib. Imp. Paris, 6988¹, is the text of which several editions were issued from the early French Press.

Nearly a century passed when another Monk, Jehan de Gallopes, transposed the rhymes of Deguilleville into French prose. This was with the object of modernising the old language, or, as he says, "pour esclaircir et entendre la matiere la contenue." Gallopes, however, apparently extended his labours no further than "The Pelerinage de l'Ame," and here we find the text used by the Translator of "The Pylgremage of the Sowle," printed in 1483, by our William Caxton. Manuscripts of the prose "Pelerinage de l'Ame" are very scarce, but a perfect copy is in Bib. Imp. Paris, No. 7086.

Of the Author and Translators mentioned above, but little can be said. Guillaume de Deguilleville was Monk, and afterwards Prior, of the Abbey of Chalis; and this seems all that is known of him. His name appears in the later manuscripts as Guillaume de Guilleville, and is mostly so printed, but is spelt correctly in some of the early French printed editions. In a 14th Century manuscript, already noticed, the name appears "de Deguilleville," and that this is the true orthography is placed beyond question by an acrostic, consisting of two "chansons" in the French text. Here the Author has veiled himself in the initial letters of each line, and by putting these together we obtain his real name, "Guillaume de Deguilleville."

"Jean de Gallopes, dit le Galoys," as we learn from the prologue to his French prose version, was the "humble chapellain" to John, Duke of Bedford and Regent of France, for whom the translation was undertaken. It was, therefore, executed before the death of the Regent, in 1435, and there seems reason to suppose that its Author was an Englishman. In the Imperial Library, Paris, is a manuscript, mentioned by M. Paris (Les Msc. Franç., vol. v, page 132), entitled "Vie de Jesus Christ," which is attributed also to Gallopes, but which appears to be a different work from the third "Pilgrimage" of Deguilleville.

To John Lydgate, Monk of Bury, is generally attributed the English version of "The Pylgremage of the Sowle," and, probably, with truth, as some of the additional poems found here form a part also of Lydgate's well-known poem "The Life of our lady." He is also supposed, from internal evidence of style, to be the Author of "The Pilgrimage of man" (Cotton MSS., Vitel. C. xii), an English metrical translation of Deguilleville's "Pelerinage de la vie humaine."

The numerous copies of the "Pilgrimages," still extant in our old libraries, prove that they must have attained a considerable amount of popularity. In France there were several printed editions; but in England, probably owing to the growth of the Reformation, "The Pylgremage of the Sowle," printed by Caxton, is the only known edition.

An expurgated reprint of Caxton's text, in which the chapters most characteristic of the Age when the allegory was written are omitted, has been edited by the Hon. Katharine Isabella Cust. 4to. London, 1859.

EXISTING COPIES.

No. 46.—A VOCABULARY IN FRENCH AND ENGLISH. Folio. Sine ullâ notâ.

COLLATION.—Two 4^m, and one 5ⁿ, unsigned = 26 leaves, the 1st being, doubtless, blank.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title of any sort. The Type is No. 4 throughout. 42 lines in double column (84 lines) make a full page, and the long lines measure 2 $\frac{7}{8}$ inches. The words "Frensshe" and "Englisshe" appear as head-lines to every page. Without folios, catchwords, or initials.

The Text begins, in double column, on the 2nd recto, thus:—

Frensshe	Englisshe
Ep commence la table	Hier begynneth the table
De cest prouffitable doctrine	Of this prouffitable lernynge
Pour trouuer tout par ordene	For to fynde all by ordre

Premierment linuocacion de la Crinite	Fyrst the callinge of the trinite
Comment on doit chescun saluer	How euery man ought grete othir

The Text ends, with 7 lines on the 26th recto, thus:—

Frensshe	Englisshe
La grace de saint esperit	The grace of the holy ghoost
Deul enluminer les cures	Wylle enlyghte the hertes
De ceulx qui le apprendront	Of them that shall lerne it
Et nous doinst perseuerance	And vs gyue perseuerance
En bonnes operations	In good werkes
Et apres ceste vie transitorie	And after this lpf transitorie
La pardurable ioye ⁊ glorie	The cuerclastpng ioye and glorie

REMARKS.—"A Book for Travellers" is the title given to this work in Typ. Ant. vol. i, page 315, but as there is no especial suitability in it for the use of travellers, and as from its composition it appears to have been formed with a scholastic aim, it has been thought advisable, even at the risk of their being taken for two separate works, to change so evident a misnomer.

No manuscript of this compilation in French or English is known to exist, nor is there any clue to the Author.

MANUSCRIPTS.—Harl. 2391, 15th Century; Harl. 2403, 15th Century; Lansd. 392, 15th Century; Cotton, Claud. A II, early in the 15th Century. All the above are English, and vary, more or less, from Caxton's text. The Cotton manuscript is the earliest, and, at the same time, the nearest to Caxton, with which it agrees exactly, except in having the following additions:—a prologue; homilies on the Burial Service and the Paternoster; and colophon. The prologue and colophon are extracted in full, as the former supplies a good account of the intention of the Compiler, and the latter affords some particulars concerning him:—

(Prologue).

(Colophon).—Explicit tractatus qui dicitur Festial Per frēm Johēm Mirkus compositus canonicū regularem Monast' de Lulshul cuius anime propicietur deus Amē."

In Harl. 2247 (sæc. xv) we have not only the text as printed by Caxton, but two or three additional sermons for every feast.

REMARKS.—The above tells us that the compiler, John Mirkus, was a Canon of the Monastery of Lilleshul, an old foundation in Shropshire. That finding many Priests, from incapacity, were, like himself, unable to teach their Parishioners properly, he had taken pains to compile sermons for all the principal feasts of the year, which he had extracted chiefly from the "Golden Legend." The omission of the prologue, by Caxton, as well as the sermons on Burial and Paternoster, mentioned above, makes us suspect that our Printer had a copy imperfect at beginning and end. The subject of nearly every chapter in "The Festial" may also be found in the "Golden Legend;" but, taking the two books, as printed by Caxton, for comparison, it will be seen that the sermons for the Moveable Feasts, with which each work commences, have nothing in common but their subject, and that the histories of the Saints are treated very differently, and often disagree even in their supposed historical facts. The "Gesta Romanorum" furnished many stories for the "Golden Legend," but in "The Festial" that mine of anecdotes has contributed still more largely to the illustration and enforcement of the Preacher's remarks. "The Festial" is yet further removed from our Book of Common Prayer, with which it has been associated.⁽¹⁾ With the exception of the names in the calendar there is nothing in common between them.

Although in Caxton's edition of this work it is entirely without a name, there seems no reason for giving it the Latin title by which it is generally known, "Liber Festivalis." John Mirkus, its Compiler, who wrote it in English, says, "I will and pray that it be called a Festial;" and accordingly it was so called by Wynken de Worde in several editions, by Rood of Oxford, and by other early Printers.

(1) Dibdin in Typ. Ant. vol. i, page 162.—Here also may be noticed that Palmer's account of a very rude impression (id. page 168) was evidently taken from the rare Oxford edition of Rood.

No. 48.—FOUR SERMONS, ETC. (QUATUOR SERMONES, ETC.), First Edition.
Folio. “Enprynted by Wylliam Caxton at Westmestre.”
Without Date. (1483?)

COLLATION.—a b c are 4th, d a 3rd = 80 leaves. No blanks.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title. The Type is entirely No. 4*. The lines are fully spaced out, and measure 5 inches. A full page has 38 lines. Without folios or catchwords. In this book we find, for the first time, the paragraph mark (¶) used—a mark which never appears in the early state of this type.

The Text begins on sig. a j, with space for a 3-line initial, without director,

Enprynted by wylliam Caxton at westmestre /

REMARKS.—The name of the Writer of these homilies is not known, nor do they appear attached to any of the manuscripts of the Festial, above noticed. That they were, however, printed by Caxton at the same time as the Festial appears evident from the identity of their typographical arrangements, strengthened by the fact of their being in several instances under the same cover. That Caxton also intended to allow their separate use may, nevertheless, be deduced from the first gathering having a for its signature, and from the existence of some copies unaccompanied by the Festial. In the Lambeth copy the Sermons precede the Festial.

The four sermons are thus apportioned :—

1. On the Paternoster, the Creed, and the Ten Commandments.
2. The Seven Sacraments, the Seven Deeds of Mercy, and the Seven Deadly Sins.

3. A continuation of the subject of Deadly Sins.

4. On Contrition, Confession, and Satisfaction.

After the sermons are "The general Sentence or Commination," and two forms of bidding prayer, called "The Bedes on Sodaye."

Every Priest was obliged by the Canon Law to read the "Modus Fulminandi," or Commination, and to preach at least one sermon every three months, and these were probably compiled for that purpose.

EXISTING COPIES.

1. BRITISH MUSEUM. King's Library (C. 11. c. 5).—Perfect. Follows the Festial. Measurement, $11 \times 7\frac{7}{8}$ inches.

2. OXFORD. Bodleian.—Imperfect, wanting sigs. b ijj and 4. Bound with the Festial which precedes it. Much stained. The last two leaves mended. Measurement, $10 \times 6\frac{3}{4}$ inches.

3. THE SAME.—Another copy. Imperfect, wanting b j and 6. Slightly stained. Bound with 2nd edition of the Festial. Lettered on back, "Caxton on the Pater Noster." Measurement, $10\frac{1}{2} \times 7\frac{3}{8}$ inches.

4. THE SAME. St. John's College.—Perfect, and bound, without the Festial, with Troilus and Canterbury Tales, in one volume, which is lettered on the back "Chaucer by Caxton." In good state. Measurement, $9\frac{1}{2} \times 7\frac{3}{4}$ inches.

5. LAMBETH PALACE.—Perfect. Preceding the Festial. Stained. Measurement, $11\frac{1}{2} \times 7\frac{7}{8}$ inches.

6. VIENNA. Imperial Library.—Perfect, but slightly torn. Without the Festial. Measurement, $10\frac{1}{2} \times 7\frac{1}{4}$ inches.

7. EARL SPENCER.—Perfect. Succeeds the Festial. Slightly stained. Measurement, $11\frac{1}{8} \times 8$ inches.

A copy, edition unknown, but probably with the Festial, is attributed to the library of the Marquis of Stafford. An imperfect copy, deficient 2 leaves, is also in the hands of a country bookseller.

For SALE PRICES the reader is referred to the Festial, considerable research having failed to discover an instance of a copy having been offered to public competition.

For the copy noticed above, in trade hands, the sum of £30 is demanded.

COLLATION.—One 4^a = 8 leaves, of which the last is blank.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—The Type is entirely No. 4. The lines, which are fully spaced out, measure 3½ inches in length; there are 26 to a full page. Without signatures, folios, or catchwords.

The first leaf is wanting in the only copy known. The 2nd recto commences with space for a 2-line initial, with director,

The only EXISTING COPY is in the British Museum (C. 21. c), and, although wanting the 1st leaf, has the final blank. Measurement, 8½ × 5½ inches.

 CCCC lxxxiiij (a typographical error for lxxxiiij).*”

COLLATION.—A 4^a, signed ij, iij, iiij, the 1st and 8th leaves being blank; followed by a 4^a, signed on 2nd leaf only 1 2, the 1st leaf being blank; then b c d e f g h i k l m n o p q r s t u v x y z ⁊ A B, all 4^a; C a 3^a, with the 6th leaf blank. In all 222 leaves, of which 4 are blank.

Dr. Dibdin, as usual with him, takes the last printed folio as the number of leaves in the book, and says, “there are 211 leaves in the whole”—Typ. Ant., vol. i, page 120.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. Type No. 4 is used for sigs. 1 to r; sigs. 1 to C, as well as the introductory matter, are in Type No. 4*; while sigs. p and 3 are partly in one and partly in the other. Where Type No. 4 is used there are 46 lines to a column, and 44 lines of Type No. 4*. On sig. 3 iiij recto the two types appear in the same page, the 1st column being in No. 4, and the 2nd in No. 4*. Without catchwords or folios. Space left for inserting 2 to 6-line initials, with director. The signatures at the beginning of the volume are irregularly printed, and show the want of a settled plan in the Printer's mind. The first 4*, which, as it includes the index, must have been printed last, is properly signed; but on beginning the book it appears as if the compositor thought there could be no use for signatures if every leaf had a printed folio, and accordingly they were omitted except on the 2nd sheet, which is signed in Arabic numerals only. The inconvenience of this being seen the folios were omitted, and the signatures printed in the second 4*, b; while in sig. c both plans are united, and we have signatures and folios too to the end of the book, the latter, however, with continual errors. The introductory 4* is not included in the enumeration of the folios. Note that sig. b 4 is printed 2 4, and that from sig. p to the end the Arabic numerals used in the signatures give place to Roman numerals. The book is in double column throughout. The date in the colophon is printed a thousand CCCC lxxxiiij, a typographical error, which would have led to some confusion had not the regnal year, "the first year of the reign of King Richard the third," been also added, fixing the right date as 1483.

Commencing with a blank leaf the paragraph title and table follow on sig. ij, space being left for a 3-line initial, with director.

MANUSCRIPTS.—Harl. 3490 (sæc. xv), a perfect copy, dedicated to King Richard II. Harl. 3869 (sæc. xv), the Lancastrian edition. Harl. 7184 (late in the 14th Century). Egerton 913, a large fragment only. Royal. 18. C. xxii, a very fine and perfect copy, written about the end of 14th Cent., addressed to King Richard. Addit. 22139 (sæc. xv), a fine copy, but imperfect at the beginning. There are some minor poems at the end. Addit. 12043 (sæc. xv) vellum, very imperfect, both at the beginning and end. Dr. Pauli, who has lately reprinted this work, has founded his text on Harl. 7184 and 3869; but makes no mention of the fine copy, Royal 18. C. xxii, nor Addit. 22139.—See The Confessio Amantis, with Life of John Gower, by Dr. Pauli. 3 vols. 8vo. London, 1857.

REMARKS.—The Life and Poetical writings of the “moral Gower” have received frequent illustrations from modern critics. His chief work, the “Confessio Amantis,” appears to have been begun about 1386 and completed in 1392–3. It was originally dedicated to Richard II, but, on the wane of that Monarch’s power, Gower suited himself to the changing times, and recast his prologue. The copies made after this version are termed Lancastrian. The Latin verses and the marginal index are in some manuscripts, as in Caxton’s printed edition, included in the text. They were, Dr. Pauli believes, the original composition of Gower, abounding like his other poetry in instances of false prosody and even bad grammar. The verses are imitations in the manner of Boethius, but often unintelligible.

9. THE SAME. All Souls College.—Imperfect, and much cropped, but, in good condition. Measurement, $10 \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Autographs of "Tho: Smison" and "Benjamin Buckler."

10. DUKE OF DEVONSHIRE.—Perfect, and free from manuscript notes. Washed. Measurement, $11\frac{1}{2} \times 8\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

11. EARL OF JERSEY.—Perfect, and in beautiful condition. Has all 4 blank leaves. Clean, and free from manuscript. Measurement, $12 \times 8\frac{3}{4}$ inches.

12. EARL OF ASHBURNHAM.—Very imperfect, wanting all the first 4ⁿ; p 7 and 8; q 1; r 8; ø j and ij; t j; u 8; and all after v 7: in all 41 leaves. Very much cropped at the head. Measurement, $11\frac{1}{2} \times 8$ inches.

13. THE SAME. Another copy.—Imperfect, wanting 4 printed leaves at the beginning, and all after sig. p 8. Stained and tattered, with many manuscript notes. Measurement, $11\frac{1}{2} \times 8\frac{3}{4}$ inches. From the Saville library. Autograph, "P^uinet bernardus Mawyd."

14. EARL SPENCER.—Perfect, and clean. Ratcliffe's copy. Has the final blank leaf. Measurement, $11\frac{3}{4} \times 8\frac{1}{8}$ inches.

15. MRS. L. VERNON HARCOURT.—Perfect, and in beautiful condition, with all the blank leaves, being the finest copy known. Measurement, $13\frac{1}{4} \times 9\frac{1}{4}$. In manuscript:—"Mr. Thos. Hearne Architypog. sayes he never sawe so complete a book of this Ed" He has one himself but his wants leaves at the beginning and at y^e end also, and yet he w^d not part with his book for a Guinea. I think this book worth more than Two Guineas. Ita testor J. U. March 8 1714" (J. Urry?) Also "This book was given me by the Rev. Dr. Wm. Stratford, Canon of Christ Church Oct. 1721 Ed. Harley." Also "This book was given me by Mr. Barnard April 18. 1778. John Peachey." From Sir John Peachey, Bart., this book descended (with Westdean House) to Mrs. Harcourt.

There is a fragment of a leaf in the Douce collection, and another in New College, Oxford. The copy ascribed by N. Carlisle to Edward VI Grammar School, Shrewsbury, is not from the Press of Caxton.—The Endowed Grammar Schools in England and Wales. 8vo. 1818. Vol. ii, page 387.

From what has been said it will be seen that the following sentence from Dr. Dibdin's Typ. Ant., vol. i, page 85, is very erroneous:—"There is a perfect copy in the Public Library, Cambridge. His Majesty and Lord Spencer have each a perfect copy. Perhaps the finest yet known is that in the Lambeth library."

No. 51.—THE BOOK WHICH THE KNIGHT OF THE TOWER MADE TO THE “ENSEYGNEMENT” AND TEACHING OF HIS DAUGHTERS. Folio.
“Emprynted at Westmynstre the laste day of Januer the fyrst yere of the regne of Kyng Rychard the thyrd.” (i. e. 1484.)

COLLATION.—A 2^a, signed on 2nd leaf only ij; a b c d e f g h i k l m are 4^m; n a 3^a, with the last 2 leaves blank. In all 106 leaves, of which 2 are blank.

Note—sig. c iiij is wrongly printed d iiij, and the 1st leaf of d is without any signature.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. The Type, as far as sig. f, is No. 4, and 40 lines, each $4\frac{1}{2}$ inches long, make a full page. From sig. f j to the end the Type is No. 4*, with 38 lines, each $4\frac{1}{2}$ inches long, to the page. The lines are fully spaced out. Without folios or catchwords. Space is left for 3, 4, and 6-line initials, with directors.

Commencing a blank the prologue follows on an unsigned leaf, with space for a 3-line initial A,

Alle vertuose doctryne ⁊ techynge had ⁊ lerned of sucche
 a as haue endeuoured them to leue for a remembraunce

This finishes on the verso of the same leaf. On the 3rd recto, signed ij, is the table, which finishes on the 5th verso, MANUSCRIPTS.—Reg. 19 C. viii (15th Century), French prose; an illumination at the beginning represents the Knight seated in a walled garden with his three daughters standing before him. This manuscript has served M. A. Montaignon for his interesting reprint.—Addit. 17,447 (15th Century), the same text as the former, but a careless copy. Purchased for the Museum in 1848. The manuscripts agree with the text of Caxton, nor has he omitted any portion of his original, as stated by Dr. Dibdin.—Harl. 1764 (sæc. xv), an English translation earlier than that by Caxton.—In the Imperial Library, Paris, are French MSS., Nos. 853, 1009, 3189, 7073, 7403, 7568, and 7673¹.

REMARKS.—In the department of "Maine et Loire," between Chollet and Vezins, may still be seen the ruins of an ancient château, called "Latour-Landry." Archæologists ascribe the structure to the 12th Century. The place originally bore the name of "La Tour" only, the old family name of the owners being "Landry;" but eventually the two were combined, and "De la Tour Landry," became the patronymic of a long race of knights. The earliest instance of the double name is found in a document dated 1200. Passing over the history of the family we will confine ourselves to Geoffrey and his book, "pour l'enseignement de ses filles." The date of neither his birth nor death is known. He was at the siege of Aguillon in 1346, when he must be supposed to be at least of the age of 20 years. He tells us he wrote his book in 1371, which would make him, at the youngest, 45 years old, though he was probably older. In all the illuminated copies of his work he is represented as discoursing with his three daughters, for whose instruction in their journey through life it was written, as the Knight himself in a preface informs us. But he had also sons, as we learn that a similar work had previously been undertaken for their instruction, "as hit is reherced in the booke of my two sonnes, and also in an Euangely." (See Caxton's edition, sig. n 4.) Neither of these compositions of the Knight are known now to exist. We also learn that in the compilation of this work he called to his aid two Priests, who read to him the Bible, the "Gesta," and various chronicles of France, England, and other countries. To this may, perhaps, be attributed the predominance of the ecclesiastical element in this book. The knight originally intended to write the whole work in verse, but finding that method necessitated a less concise narration, he soon changed his composition into prose. In the original French, however, a considerable portion of the introduction, though prose to the eye, will be found to have retained its metrical form. Several writers have denounced the work as obscene, and more fitted for the corruption than the instruction of youth, while others, taking into consideration the manners of that age, have arrived at the very opposite conclusion. At any rate it is plain our Caxton thought highly of it: he says in his preface, "I advise every gentleman or woman having children desiring them to be virtuously brought forth to get and have this book, to the end that they may learn to govern them virtuously in this present life." He tells us also the occasion of his translating and printing it, which was "at the request of a noble lady which hath brought forth many noble and fair daughters, which be virtuously nourished."—See an Article in the Retrospective Review: New Series, 1827: vol. i, part ii, page 177.

Also, Le Livre du Chevalier de la Tour Landry, par M. Anatole de Montaiglon. 12mo. Paris, 1854.

We must here notice that, although the anonymous English translation (Harl. 1764) preceded that by Caxton, a comparison of the two versions makes it evident that our Printer owed nothing to his predecessor. M. Montaiglon, indeed, gives a decided preference to the earlier text. The following amusing extracts (suggestive of Shakspeare's "Taming of the Shrew." Act V, Scene II), will enable the Reader to judge for himself of their respective merits.

No. 52.—CATON. Folio. Without Printer's Name, Place, or Date.
"Translated . . . by William Caxton in thabbey of Westmynstre the yere of our lord M CCCC lxxiiij." (1484?)

COLLATION.—The prologues and table a 3°, signed ij and iij on the 2nd and 3rd rectos, the 1st and last leaves being blank: then a b c d e f g h are 4°; i a 5°; a j and i 10 being blank. In all 80 leaves, of which 4 are blank.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. Two sizes of Type are used. No. 2 for the Latin headings, and No. 4° for the Text. The lines, which are fully spaced out, measure 4½ inches, and there are 38 to a full page. Without folios or catchwords. Space is left for the insertion of 3-line initials, sometimes with, and sometimes without directors. Commencing with a blank leaf, Caxton's short prologue and his dedication to the City of London follow on sig. ij.

The Text begins thus:—

The Text ends, on the 9th recto of sig. i, the 10th leaf being blank, thynge men may intptule this lptell booke the myprouit of the re

 iam Caxton in thabbey of westmynstre the yere of oure lord
 M CCC lxxiiij / And the fyrst yere of the regne of kynge
 Rycharde the thyrde the xxiiij day of decembre

In his prologue Caxton says, "To the end that the histories and examples that be contained in this little booke may be lightly found . . . they shall be set and entituled by manner of Rubrics . . . and they shall be signed as that followeth of the number of leaues where they shall be written." Accordingly the numbers given in the table agree with their proper folios, but these folios are not inserted, either in print or manuscript, in the body of the work, rendering the table almost useless.

MANUSCRIPTS of this, whether French or English, do not appear to be either in the British Museum or in the Bib. Imp., Paris. M. Barrois notices the following, in the library of Charles V, of France—No. 1008, "Caton en francois;" No. 1009, "Cathon en Anglois;" the former of which was, possibly, the original of the work under notice.

REMARKS.—Caxton says in his preface that he translated from a French copy, "which rehearsed many a fair learning and notable example;" and some portions of his own introductory matter suggest also a French original. Were a manuscript to be found, its title would probably agree with Caxton's concluding description of the work—"the mirror of the regime, and government of the body and of the soul."

The year 1483 is usually assigned to the printing of this book; but, as the translation was not ended till December 23rd, it seems improbable that it was printed till 1484.

As already noticed (ante Vol. I, page 54), this "Cathon" is a very different work from the composition known as "Catho Magnus," the distichs of which serve here only as a text whereon to hang an extensive gloss. A short notice of "Mayster Benet Burgh" has already been given.

COLLATION.—An unsigned 3ⁿ, with 1st and 6th leaves blank; a b c d e f g h i k l m n o p q r s t u r p 3 7 are 4^m; 9 a 3ⁿ; A B C D E F G H I K L M N O P Q R S T U V W X Y Z are 4^m; F a 3ⁿ; H is a single sheet, followed by a single leaf, the back edge of which is sometimes returned round H, and sometimes sewn separately; aa bb cc dd ee ff are 4^m; gg a 3ⁿ; hh ii 4^m; kk a 3ⁿ, kk 6 being blank. In all 449 leaves, of which 3 are blank.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. There are two sizes of Type, No. 3 being used for head-lines and headings to chapters, while No. 4^o is used for the text. The whole is in double columns, and the lines, which are fully spaced out, measure 3 inches; 55 lines in a column, and 110 to a full page. There are folios throughout, but numbered very irregularly. Space is left for the insertion of 3 to 6-line initials, with directors. There are no catchwords. Wood-cuts are used throughout, apparently from the hand of the same Artist who engraved the cuts for the 2nd edition of the “Chess-Book.”

The 1st edition is principally distinguished by the use of Type No. 3 for head-lines, &c., and also by a variation in the signatures F and H. Both this and the 2nd edition are printed upon very large sheets of paper, larger indeed than Caxton ever used before or after. The edition of 1493 is upon the usual size.

The 1st leaf is blank; on the 2nd recto is a large wood-cut of Saints, 9 × 6½ inches, under which the Text begins thus, making a full page:—

End "Ci fenist la legende doree en francois qui frere iehan de Vignay translata de latin en francois. Ceste legende fut escripte Lan mil ccc. quatre vins et deus" (i. e. 1382).—Egerton 876, French (sæc. xv), Vignay's translation, imperfect at beginning and end.—Harl. 630, English (sæc. xv), an anonymous translation, with the following colophon: "Here endeth the Boke of the life of Seyntes called in latyn legenda aurea compiled and drawn into englyssh bi worthi clerkes and doctoūs of Diuinite suengly astre y^e tenir of y^e latin."—Harl. 4775, English (sæc. xv), the same version as Harl. 630, but imperfect at the end.

In the Imperial Library, Paris, are the following manuscripts :—Jean Belet's translation, Nos. 6845, 6845⁴; J. de Vignay's translation, Nos. 6845⁵, 6888, 6888², 6889, 6889², 6889³, 7020, 7020¹; and many of the original Latin.

REMARKS.—In the latter half of the 13th Century, Jacobus de Voragine, Archbishop of Genoa, compiled a book called "Legenda Aurea," in which the lives and miracles of numerous Saints were narrated. The Latin manuscripts noted above are copies of this work. It was found very useful to the Priests in their sermons, and soon became so popular that it was translated into nearly every European language. The text of "Voragine" has been reprinted from an early manuscript—Legenda aurea, recensuit Dr. Th: Graesse. 8vo. Lipsiæ, 1840. In the early part of the 14th Century, Jean Belet, an Author but little known to modern Bibliographers, though often quoted by the Writers of his age, translated the Latin of Jacobus into French, not, however, without embellishing it with many new additions. Of this translation there does not appear to be a copy in the British Museum, nor was it ever printed. There are, however, two in the Imperial Library, Paris, one of which (No. 6845) thus begins, "Ci commence la legende des sains dorés, et les martires qu'ils souffrirent pour l'amour de nostre Seigneur Jhesus Crist, laquelle a translätée de latin en françois mestre Jehan Belet," &c. Shortly after the production of Belet, Jehan de Vignay, who has been already noticed as translating the Book of Chess, undertook a new version in French of "La legende dorée," which he accomplished before 1380, as he dedicated it to "Jeane, royne de France." (Royal 19. B xvii.) His translation, however, was founded on the previous labours of Belet, which he amplified, adding about 44 new legends. About the middle of the 15th Century, certain "worthy Clerks and Doctors of Divinity" compiled a "Book of the Life of Saints," which they describe as "drawn into English after the tenor of the Latin." (Harl. 630.) These worthy Clerks and Doctors, however, would have given a much more true account of their labours had they stated that, with the exception of some additional fables not traceable in the original Latin, they owed the whole of their compilation to "La Legende dorée," of Jehan de Vignay.

It is probable that in Caxton's time the English version here noticed was well known; indeed we may infer this from the account given by our Printer of the origin of his own text—"Against me here might some persons say, that this Legend hath been translated tofore, and truth it is; but forasmuch as I had by me a Legend in French, another in Latin, and the third in English, which varied in many and diverse places; and also many histories were comprised in the two other books which were not in the English book, therefore I have written one out of the said three books." (See ante Vol. I, page 132.) Caxton, with his Latin, French, and English copies before him, found a prologue ready to his hand in the version by Jehan de Vignay. This, as was his wont, he translated literally, merely changing two or three inapplicable proper names, and adding some personal observations. (See Vol. I, page 132.) The bulk of his text comes also from the same source, being nearly identical with that of the English manuscript already noticed; although to Caxton may be given this praise, that in several places where the "worthy doctours of divinite" had inserted in their English version some stories more incredible or more filthy than usual, he very discreetly considerably modified or altogether omitted them. The reader curious in this matter may compare the tales about Nero in the "Life of St. Peter," as narrated in Harl. 630, with folio 202 in Caxton. How much he took from the Latin is impossible to say; nor have I been able to trace to their origin the curious explanatory derivations of the name of each Saint, which form the first paragraph in every "Life." As in The Festial, many Saints in the Golden Legend have their lives illustrated or interwoven with tales from the "Gesta Romanorum."

This work may be considered the most laborious, as well as the most extensive, of all Caxton's literary and typographical labours. The compilation of the text only must have been a most arduous task, and the very extensive use of wood-cuts must have been extremely expensive and troublesome. Caxton, indeed, confesses that he was "in a manner half desperate to have left it," when the Earl of Arundel, who apparently suggested the undertaking, sent John Stanney to him, promising the Printer a small annuity, and to take a "reasonable quantity" of copies when completed. The annuity was to be a buck in summer and a doe in winter; but it is not improbable that these presents were commuted into a fixed sum of money, as was certainly the practise with the Gifts of Wine, which, in the 14th and 15th Centuries, were so frequently bestowed as rewards for services rendered.

Although, from the numerous copies still extant, it is evident that this edition must have been larger than usual, no perfect copy has yet been discovered. The Legend of St. Thomas of Canterbury has been a special object of destruction, being, in nearly every instance, torn out of the volume.

No. 54.—DEATH-BED PRAYERS. A Folio Broadside. (1484?)

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—Types No. 3 and 4*, are used. The lines, which are spaced to an even length, measure 7 inches. Wood-cut initials.

An exact facsimile of the whole "broadside" is given in Plate XXXVII.

REMARKS.—From the language of these prayers it is evident that they were intended for use by the death-bed. They were probably printed separately, and in a portable form for Priests, and others, to carry about them.

Although short their interest is great, and the Reader may not be displeased to read them in the following more modern dress than that of the facsimile:—

O glorious Jesu! O meekest Jesu! O most sweetest Jesu! I pray thee that I may have true confession, contrition, and satisfaction ere I die; and that I may see and receive thy holy body, God and man, Saviour of all mankind, Christ Jesu without sin. And that thou wilt my Lord God forgive me all my sins, for thy glorious wounds and passion. And that I may end my life in the true faith of all holy church, and in perfect love and charity with my even (fellow) christians as thy creature. And I commend my soul into thy holy hands through the glorious help of thy blessed mother of mercy, our lady Saint Mary, and all the holy company of heaven. Amen. ¶ The holy body of Christ Jesu be my salvation of body and soul. Amen. The glorious blood of Christ Jesu bring my soul and body into the everlasting bliss. Amen. I cry God, mercy ! I cry God, mercy ! I cry God, mercy ! Welcome my Maker ! Welcome my Redeemer ! Welcome my Saviour ! I cry thee mercy with heart contrite of my great unkindness that I have had unto thee.

O thou most sweet spouse of my soul, Christ Jesu, desiring heartily evermore for to be with thee in mind and will, and to let none earthly thing be so nigh my heart as thou, Christ Jesu ; and that I dread not for to die for to go to thee, Christ Jesu ; and that I may evermore say unto thee with a glad cheer, my Lord, my God, my sovereign Saviour Christ Jesu, I beseech thee heartily take me, sinner, unto thy great mercy and grace, for I love thee with all my heart, with all my mind, with all my might, and nothing so much in earth nor above earth as I do thee, my sweet Lord, Christ Jesu. And for that I have not loved thee, and worshipped thee above all things as my Lord, my God, and my Saviour, Christ Jesu, I beseech thee with meekness and heart contrite, of mercy and of forgiveness of my great unkindness, for the great love that thou showedst for me and all mankind, what time thou offeredst thy glorious body, God and man, unto the Cross ; there to be crucified and wounded, and unto thy glorious heart a sharp spear, there running out plenteously blood and water for the redemption and salvation of me and all mankind. And thus having remembrance steadfastly in my heart of thee, my Saviour Christ Jesu, I doubt not but thou wilt be full nigh me, and comfort me both bodily and ghostly with thy glorious presence, and at the last bring me unto thy everlasting bliss, the which shall never have end. Amen.

The only EXISTING COPY known is in the library of Earl Spencer, where it was accidentally recognised by me, bound after the table in a copy of Caxton's "Pilgrimage of the Soul." It is in perfect condition, and measures 11 x 8 inches.

No. 55.—THE FABLES OF ÆSOP ; OF AVIAN ; OF ALFONSE ; AND OF POGE, THE FLORENTINE. Folio. "Emprynted by me William Caxton at Westmynstre . . the xxvj daye of Marche the yere of oure lord M CCCC lxxxiij."

COLLATION.—a b c d e f g h i k l m n o p q r s are 4th, the last two leaves of s being blank. In all 144 leaves, of which 2 are blank.

Note.—The 1st leaf of a is not signed, being printed only on the verso.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page, unless we call the great cut of Æsop by that name. The Type is of two sorts. No. 3 used in three places at the beginning of the work for headings, and No. 4*, in which is the whole text and the head-lines. The lines, which measure $4\frac{1}{2}$ inches, are fully spaced out, and in those few pages where there is no wood-cut there are 37 or 38 lines. There are head-lines and folios throughout, except in sig. n, which has folios only. Wood-cut initials are used throughout, and on the verso of sig. a ij is a large floriated A, afterwards used in the "Order of Chivalry."

The 1st recto of sig. a is blank. Upon the verso is a large wood-cut ($4\frac{1}{2} \times 6\frac{1}{2}$ inches), of Æsop, surrounded by the subjects of his fables (see Plate XXXIV), with the word ESOPVS at the top. On the 2nd recto, which is signed a ij, the book commences with the following title, in large Type, No. 3—

REMARKS.—The wood-cuts by their treatment evidently came from the hands of the Artist who had previously illustrated the "Game of Chess." It is perhaps impossible to decide whether they are of Flemish or English origin.

ÆSOP BEATEN BY HIS MASTER.

Caxton himself tells us at the beginning of the book that it was a translation of his own from the French. It is rather remarkable that although the fables of Æsop, in French, were found in all the great libraries of the 14th and 15th Centuries, and in some (ante Vol. I. pages 277–280) as many as three or four different copies, yet none apparently have descended to our time. No trace of an English translation previous to that of Caxton has been discovered, and he must therefore have the credit of introducing these fables to his Countrymen in the English tongue. They were reprinted in London, with scarcely any alteration, for nearly two centuries. Whether translated from a manuscript, or an early French edition, it is now impossible to say. In the British Museum (Gr. 7806) there is an edition, sine ulla nota, but evidently printed very early, which begins thus, after a large wood-cut, very similar in design to that in Caxton's edition, "Cy cōmence le liure des subtilitez / hystoires / & fables de esope translatez de latin en frāçois / et aussi de auian / et de alfonce / & aucunes ioyeuses de poge florentin / lequel a este translate de latin en frāçois par reuerend docteur en theologie frere iulien des augustins de lyon." In a smaller type follows, "Cy cōmēce la vie de esope toute sa vie fut de fortune cōbie quil fut subtil & sage natif de grece pres des troye la grāt dune ville appellee amoneo. Entre tous les hōmes il estoit difforme /" The reader will see on comparison that this is word for word the original of Caxton's, and is doubtless the text, if not the very edition, from which he translated; for the wood-cuts throughout the volume are similar in design. An edition was also issued by G. Leeu, at Gouda, in 1476 (Gr. 10495).

EXISTING COPIES.

1. HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN, Windsor.—Perfect, being unique in that state. In beautiful condition, and uncut. Measurement, $11\frac{1}{2} \times 8\frac{1}{2}$ inches. In manuscript, on fly leaf. 2. BRITISH MUSEUM. King's Library.—Imperfect, wanting the 1st leaf, with the large wood-cut. Otherwise in beautiful condition, being in the original binding, and having the two blanks of sig. g, as well as 4 superfluous blanks at the beginning, apparently just as issued. The wood-cut admirably supplied in facsimile, by Mr. Tupper. Measurement, 11×8 inches. This copy was purchased, in 1844, to supply the place of that retained by George IV.

3. OXFORD. Bodleian.—Imperfect, wanting the first leaf, o j, portions of b j, and o ij, and all g. Clean, and free from manuscript notes. Measurement, 11×8 inches. Bound in one volume with "Cathon," "Boethius," and "Knyght of the Toure." "Ex dono Mosis Pitt, Bibliopolæ Londoniensis AD 1680"

A fragment was in the Douce collection.

There is no record of any copy having been disposed of by public sale.

No. 56.—THE ORDER OF CHIVALRY. Quarto. Without Printer's Name, Place, or Date. Translated by Caxton and presented to Richard III. (1483–5).

COLLATION.—a h c d e f are 4^{to}, aj being blank; g a 2^o, with the last leaf blank; in all 52 leaves, of which 2 are blank.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. The Type is No. 4^o, but two headings at the beginning of the work are in Type No. 3. The lines, which measure $3\frac{1}{2}$ inches, and of which there are 26 to a full page, are fully spaced out. Without folios or catchwords. Initial letters cut in wood are used.

Commencing with a blank leaf the work opens with a short preface, on sig. a ij, the first 4 lines being in Type No. 3. The Text begins thus:—

¶ Here begynneth the Table this present booke Intytled the Book of the ordre of chpyalry or knyghthode

A short prologue and the table follow, finishing on the verso of the same leaf. On sig. a ij recto, in Type No. 3. (See Plate XXXVI).

¶ Here after foloweth the mater and tenour of this said Booke.
And the fyrst chappter saith hou the good Herempte deupled to the Elquper the Rule ⁊ ordre of chp

Underneath this is the translation, commencing with a large floriated A, 8 lines deep, being the same block that was used in Æsop. On sig. g j recto begins a long epilogue by Caxton, which concludes on the g ij recto, the verso and the 4th leaf being blank.

The Text ends :—

MANUSCRIPTS.—French Royal 14 E. II; large folio; splendidly written and illuminated in Flanders, for Edward IV. This treatise begins at folio 337, "Cy commence le liure de lordre de cheuallerie." Prologue "A la loenge et gloire de la pourueance diuine dieu qui est sire et roy souuerain par dessus toutes choses celestes et terrestres nous commencons ce liure de lordre de chiuallerie." This manuscript agrees exactly with the text of Caxton, except that, of course, the epilogue is wanting. A similar copy, though of inferior workmanship, written in the 15th Century, was sold in 1860 among the Libri MSS. Harl. 6149 (sæc. xv) is an accurate copy, except in orthography, of Caxton's printed edition, including the epilogue.

REMARKS.—The date of printing, which was in the reign of Richard III, must have been between June 26th, 1483, and August 22nd, 1485. The "Order of Chivalry" has no connection with "L'ordene de chevalerie."—Dibdin's Typ. Ant., vol. i, page 366.

No. 57.—CHAUCER'S CANTERBURY TALES. Folio. Second Edition, with Woodcuts. "By Wylliam Caxton." Without Place or Date. (1484?)

COLLATION.—a b c d e f g h i k l m n o p q r s t are 4^{ms}, with a j blank; v a 3ⁿ; aa bb cc dd ee ff gg hh are 4^{ms}; ii a 3ⁿ; ¶ B C D E F G H I K are 4^{ms}; ¶ a 2ⁿ. In all 312 leaves, of which 1 is blank.

The above collation is correct, notwithstanding the following:—"Of this edition I am enabled to speak with confidence, having examined the perfect copy in the Library of St. John's College, Oxon."—"The first set of signatures runs six leaves to the letter"!! Dibdin, Typ. Ant., vol. i, pages 295—297.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. The Type of the Text is No. 4*, the heads being all in No. 2*. The lines in the prose portion are spaced to an even length, and measure $4\frac{1}{2}$ inches. 38 lines to a page. Without catchwords or folios, and almost without punctuation. Space left at the beginning of chapters for the insertion of initials, with directors.

This 2nd edition Caxton tells us was printed six years after the first. Having fixed the year 1477-8 as about the date of the first, that will give about 1484 for this.

Commencing with a blank leaf, the prohemye follows on a ij, with space for a 6-line initial **¶.

The Text begins thus :—

Prohempe

g Aete thankes lawde and honour / ought to be gyuen vnto the clerkes / poetes / and hystoriographes that haue wretoun many noble bokes of wysedom of the lyues / passiois / ⁊ myracles of holp sayntes of hystories / of noble and famous Actes / and faittes / And of the cronycles sith the begynnyng of the creation of the world / vnto thys present tyme / by whyche

The prohempe, which is an excellent and indubitable specimen of Caxton's own composition, and reflects as much credit upon his disposition, as upon his literary abilities, is given entire in Vol. I, page 173, and finishes on the verso of sig. a ij—after thys short and transitorpe lyf we may come to euerlastyng lyf in heuen / Amen

By Wpiliam Caxton

On sig. a ij recto, with room for a 4-line initial,

Whan that Apryll with his shouris tote to The droughte of marche hath perceyd the rote
And bathyd euery beyne in suche lycour
Of whyche vertue engendryd is the flour

Whanne Zepherus eke with his lote breth

The Parson's Tale finishes on sig. A ij verso, and is followed by the Retraction.

The Text ends with 7 lines on sig. A 4 recto, be one of hem at the day of dome that chal be saupd / Qui cum patre et spiritu sancto viuit et regnat deus / Per omnia secula seculorum Amen /

The verso is blank.

myghty god to haue mercy Amen

Emprynted by wylliam Caxton

As this epilogue was accidentally omitted, among the original writings of Caxton, in Vol. I of this work, it is reprinted here, verbatim et literatim.

“J fynde nomore of this werke to fore sayd / For as fer as I can | vnderstode / This noble man Gefferey Chaucer fynysshyd at the | sayd conclusion of the metyng of lesyng and sothsaue / where | as yet they ben chekked and maye not departe / whyche werke as | me semeth is craftyly made / and dygne to be wreton & knowen / | For he towchyth in it ryght grete wysedom & subtyll vnderston- | dyng / And so in alle hys werkys he excellyth in myn oppyny- / on alle other wryters in our Englyssh / For he wrytteth no voy- | de wordes / but alle hys mater is ful of hye and quycke senten | ce / to whom ought to be gyuen laude and preysyng for hys no- | ble makyng and wrytyng / For of hym alle other haue borowed | syth and taken / in alle theyr wel sayeng and wrytyng / And |

I humbly beseche & praye yow / emonge your prayers to remem- | bre hys soule / on

MANUSCRIPTS of this poem are remarkably rare. I have been unable to trace a copy in the British Museum. The received text is founded upon two manuscripts in the Bodleian (No. 638 and Fairfax 16). These, however, are by no means a pure text. In the Public Library, Cambridge, is also a perfect copy.

REMARKS.—As will be seen by the list of Existing Copies, the printed text of Caxton is almost as rare as manuscript; so is the reprint by Pynson in 1526. Manuscripts of this poem were, probably, even in our Printer's time, difficult to obtain. The copy used by him was certainly very imperfect. Many lines are altogether omitted, and in the last page Caxton was evidently in a great strait, for his copy was deficient 66 lines, probably occupying one leaf in the original. We know from his own writings the great reverence in which our Printer held the "noble poete," and we can imagine his consternation when the choice had to be made, either to follow his copy and print nonsense, from the break of idea caused by the deficient verses, or to step into Chaucer's shoes and supply the missing links from his own brain. He chose the latter course, and thus instead of the original 66 lines, we have 2, which enable the reader to reach the end of the poem without a break down. These lines are in the following quotation printed in italics; the entire extract being the first 6 lines of the last page:—

They were a chekked bothe two
And neyther of hym myght out goo
And wyth the noyes of themee	Caxton
J Sodeynly awoke anon the
And remembryd what I had seen
And how hys and ferre I had been

It should be noticed that Caxton has here placed his name in the margin to make known his responsibility to his Readers. The position of his name there has long puzzled Bibliographers.

No. 59.—THE CURIAL. “Translated thus in Englysshe by wylliam Caxton.”
Without Printer's Name, Place, or Date. (1484?)

COLLATION.—A 3ⁿ, signed j, ij, and iij, without any blanks. In all 6 leaves.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. The Type is entirely No. 4*.

The lines, which are spaced to an even length, measure $4\frac{7}{8}$ inches, and there are 38 to a full page. Without catchwords or folios.

The Text begins on sig. j recto,

Here foboweth the coppe of a lettre whypche maistre Alayn Charetier wrote to hys brother/ whypche desired to come dwelle in Court/ in whypche he referleth many mplerpes ⁊ wretchpndesses

The “Curial” finishes on the 6th recto, to god I comande the by thys wrytpng whypche gvue the hys gra ce / Amen

Thus endeth the Curial made by mapstre Alain Charetier
 Translated thus in Englyssh by wylliam Caxton

On the verso Caxton has given us the translation of a ballad, written by Alain Chartier, consisting of 28 lines. It has a burthen:—“Ne chyer but of a man Joyous” and commences thus:—

Ther ne is dangper / but of a vplayn
 Ne pryde / but of a poure man entyched

The Text ends on same page,

Ther is no sperche / but it be curtopys
 Ne prepyng of men / but after theyr lpt
 Ne chyer but of a man Joyous

Caxton

MANUSCRIPTS.—Harl. 1883; dated 1444. The fifth tract in this volume is entitled, "De vita curiali detestanda itaq; miseriis plena" and commences, "Suades sepius et hortaris vir discrete et carissè frater vt tibi ad vitam curialē anhelanti ingressū locūq; pparem." This is the original Latin of Caxton's tract. Lansd. 380, early 16th Century, a book of ballads. On fol. 218 verso is—

"Ballade faicte et composee par le doulx poete maistre Alain charretier

" Il nest dangier que de vilain
" Norgueil que de poure enrichy

Ending,

" Ne puissance au nait enuie
" Ne chiere que domme Joyeux "

There is a French version of the "Curial" in a volume of the author's works in the Bib. Imp., 7274³², beginning thus, "Tu me admonestes et enortes souvent homme eloquent et mon frere tres aime" Les Msc. Franç. vol. vii. page 255; and probably another in 7215³².

REMARKS.—Caxton translated the Curial from the French, "for a noble and virtuous Erle" probably Lord Rivers, who was beheaded at Pomfret, on June 13th, 1483. But the Translator of the ballad printed at the end of his book by Caxton is not known; although the original Author was, as shown by the above quotation, Alain Chartier.

It appears probable that Alain Chartier wrote or translated his own Latin tract into French, copies of which appear very rare. In Harl. MS. 1883, 7th Treatise, is a tract bearing the same name, but altogether different in treatment. It ends thus "Explicit tractatus de miseria curialiū Editus per venerabilem virū dñm Eneam Siluium de picolominibus de Senis poetam laureatū regium secretariū Colēdissimū."

Alain Chartier, born in Normandy about 1386, earned for himself the appellation of "excellent orateur, noble poëte, et très-renommé rhétoricien." He held the office of "Secrétaire de la Maison" to both Charles VI and Charles VII. He died about 1457. The most complete editions of his works are those by Galiot du Pré, 16mo., Paris, 1529; and by Duchesne, 4to., Paris, 1617. In the former, however, is an error which has led to some confusion, as "Livre de l'Esperance" is there entitled "Le Curial," the real Curial being a much shorter piece, and totally different in design. By the "Curial" being addressed to his brother it is supposed to have been written by Alain to Jean Chartier, known as the Author of "Histoire de Charles VII." As an instance of the great repute, in which the writings of Chartier were held in his age, it is reported that Margaret the wife of the Dauphin of France, afterwards Louis XI, finding him one day asleep in his chair kissed his lips to the great astonishment of her attendants. "Je ne baise pas la personne mais la bouche dont estoient sorties tant de beaux discours" she exclaimed.

MANUSCRIPTS of this poem abound. In the British Museum there are Harl. 1239, 2280, 2392, and 3943.

REMARKS.—A good account of the source of this poem, and a comparison between it and Shakspeare's "Troilus and Creside," with which, however, it appears to have little connection, will be found in Bell's edition of Chaucer's Works.

No. 61—THE LIFE OF OUR LADY. Folio. “Enpryntyd by Wylliam Caxton.”
Without Place or Date. (1484?)

COLLATION.—Two unsigned leaves; a b c d e f g h i k l are 4^m; m a 3ⁿ, the last leaf being blank. In all 96 leaves, of which 1 is blank.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. The Type is entirely No. 4^a. A page has 5 stanzas of 7 lines each, the space of 1 line being left between each stanza. The lines in the prose part measure almost 5 inches. Without catchwords or folios. Space left for the insertion of initials 1 to 3 lines deep, with directors.

The Text begins, with space for a 3-line initial, on the recto of the 1st leaf,

The table follows immediately, finishing with 9 lines on the verso of the 2nd leaf.

The poem commences on sig. a j recto, with space for a 2-line initial,

o *Thougful herte plunged in distresse
With slobre of slouth this long wynters nyght*

On the lower half of the 4th verso of sig. m,

Enpryntyd by Wyllyam Caxton

A blank leaf completes the volume.

MANUSCRIPTS.—Harl. 3862, and Cotton App. viii, early 15th Century, agreeing with the text of Caxton, but not divided into chapters. Harl. 629, 1304, 2382, 3952, 4011, 5272, are all 15th Century manuscripts, agreeing, with the exception of slight variations, with Caxton, and divided into 87 chapters. Addit. 19452, and Arundel 168, imperfect copies, 15th Century. Harl. 222, Historia de vitâ B. Marie Virginis; written 1280. A French metrical life, in no way resembling this poem.

REMARKS.—“The Lyf of our ladye” appears to have enjoyed, for a long period, considerable popularity. It was composed, as the manuscripts and printed edition both tell us, by John Lydgate, at the excitation of King Henry V. The envoy commencing, “Goo lytyl booke,” is doubtless a specimen of Caxton's own powers of versification, as perhaps are also the two ballads which follow it. Although the division of the poem into chapters by Caxton does not agree with any of the above manuscripts, yet he probably had a copy so divided, for, as we have seen, the original poem was not chaptered at all, and later Scribes would divide it after their own judgment.

It would have surprised our worthy Printer could he have foreseen the grave charges of carelessness to be brought against him in future ages with reference to this production. Ames gives a very slight account of "The lyf of oure Ladye," but, so far as it goes, it is correct. Herbert enlarged Ames's Article, but unfortunately wrote his description from a copy deficient 8 leaves in the middle of the poem, an imperfection which, notwithstanding the consequent irregularity of signature, he ascribes to carelessness on the part of Caxton; and, worse still, makes Caxton himself confess that he was aware of the blunder he had made before the conclusion of the printing, but thought that to ask the Reader's pardon was sufficient reparation; a conclusion drawn from the deprecatory stanzas quoted above, beginning, "Goo lityl book"—a style of "envoy" very common to all Writers of that age. Then follows Dr. Dibdin, who, as usual, did not make an independent examination, but was content with reprinting his predecessor's remarks. The paragraph reads thus:—"This [the omission of several chapters] must be attributed to carelessness, which Mr. Caxton himself ingenuously acknowledges in one of the concluding stanzas."—Typ. Ant. vol. i, page 340, and Bib. Spenc. vol. iv, page 333.

Both Herbert and Dibdin give the heads of all the chapters in this poem, excepting, of course, those contained in the 8 missing leaves of their copy. These are, therefore, supplied here from the table, which differs slightly from the heads in the body of the work.

No. 62.—THE LIFE OF THE HOLY AND BLESSED VIRGIN SAINT WINIFRED.

Folio. Without Printer's Name, Date or Place. "Reduced in to Englysshe by me William Caxton." (1485?)

COLLATION.—a and b are 4^{ms} = 16 leaves, of which the 1st is blank.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. The Type is entirely No. 4*. There are 38 or 39 lines to a full page, and they are spaced to an even length, measuring $4\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Space is left at the beginnings of chapters for the insertion of 3-line initials. Without folios, or catchwords.

Commencing with a blank leaf, the Text follows on sig. a ij,

¶ Here begynneth the lpf of the holp 7 blessed byrgyn capyt

On the verso commences the Commemoration of St. Winifred, with a Latin hymn, collects, epistle, and gospel :—

¶ Gaude Wenefreda pura / virgo iuuentutis iura dei dans

The Text ends, with 10 lines on the recto of sig. b 8, the verso being blank, celebramus translationem / cunctorum adipisci mereamur pec-catorum remissionem / Per dominum nostrum / et cetera /

MANUSCRIPTS.—Cotton, Claud. A v (circa 1100), Latin. "Incipit uita scē Wenefrede ūginis et martyris." This Life is attributed to St. Elerius, "Britañum Monachum An° 660," but apparently on account only of the statement therein that he was the Confessor of Saint Winifred. It differs, in many important particulars, from Caxton, and is more brief, being, of course, without the account of the translation of her relics, in 1138, to Shrewsbury, and the Latin commemoration instituted in 1380 by Archbishop Arundel.

REMARKS.—The omission of all notice of St. Winifred by the early historians is remarkable, as the date generally assigned to her decollation is the 7th Century. As a Welch Saint she was probably unacceptable to the Normans and Saxons. However, amends were made in the 14th and 15th Centuries, when no pilgrimage to the North was more popular than that to the Holy Well of Saint Winifred, attributable to the wonderful cures effected by the waters of the Chalybeate Spring which gushed out of the earth on the spot where fell the head of the Virgin and Martyr.

There are considerable discrepancies in the history of this Saint, as here narrated, when compared with Jehan de Vignay's account of her in the "Golden Legend." In the "Polychronicon" Higden adds a few particulars not found in either of the above authorities (see Caxton's edition, sig. 7 4 verso): we there read of the awful deaths which overtook all the Children of the Virgin's Persecutor, Prince Cradoche.

Caxton's original was probably the Life of Saint Winifred, compiled by Robert, Prior of Shrewsbury, in 1140, and written in Latin. There were accounts of this Saint in Welch (Llwyd, in his account of Welch manuscripts, mentions two), but Caxton has given us no reason for supposing that he understood that language. It is very unlikely that the Life of a Welch Saint would be found in a French guise, and it therefore seems most probable that this is a genuine translation from the Latin, by Caxton. Unfortunately no manuscript of Robert of Shrewsbury can be found to settle the point.

REMARKS.—There does not appear to be any trace in the collections of the British Museum, or elsewhere, of a manuscript of Sir Thomas Malory's text. Of Sir Thomas himself, all we know is contained in the last sentence of his own book—"This book was ended the ninth year of the reign of King Edward the fourth by Sir Thomas Malory, Knight;" that is about 1470. Caxton tells us in his prologue, that Sir Thomas had "reduced it from certain books in French." These books, judging from the conduct of the story, were the celebrated romances of Merlin, Launcelot, Tristram, the Quest du S. Graal, and Mort Artus, on the origin of which romances very little appears to be known, though much has been written. Manuscript copies of all of them are in the British Museum. Caxton's edition was reprinted several times, the last being the well-known 4to volume edited by Robert Southey, who has prefixed a learned dissertation on the rise and development of the story. A very interesting essay upon the character, epoch, and authors of the various Romances of the Round Table is contained in Les Msc. Franç., par M. Paris, vol. i, page 160. See also the introduction of Thomas Wright to his reprint of the 1634 edition, entitled The History of King Arthur. 3 vols. 8vo. London, 1858. Also Les Romans de la Table ronde et les Contes des anciens Bretons, par M. le Vicomte Hersart de la Villemarqué. 8vo. Paris, 1860.

REMARKS.—Histories and Romances of "Karlemaine," in French and in Latin, in prose and in verse, existed so early as the 12th and 13th Centuries. These became incorporated later in the general histories, such as the "Speculum Historiale," the "Fleur des Histoires," &c. The compilation of the romance under notice is recounted by the anonymous Author himself in his preface and envoye. From these we learn that Henry Bolomyer, Canon of Lausaune, regretting the existence of several "disjoined" accounts of Charles the Great, "excited" our anonymous Author to compile a continuous history of the first Christian King of France. This he did, and the sources of his narration, as well as the contents, cannot be described better than in his own words, thus translated by Caxton (sig m, 7 recto), "it is so that at the requeste of the sayd venerable man to fore named Maister henry bolonnyer channeon of lausaune J haue been Incyted to translate & reduce into Frensshe the mater tofore reduced. As moche as toucheth the fyrst & the thyrde book / J haue taken & drawn oute of a book named myrroure hystorial for the moost parte / & the second book J haue onely reduced it out of an olde romaunce in frensshe.—“The fyrst book spekyth of the begynnyng of fraunce / and c. the fyrst crysten kyng of fraunce / whyche was named Cloys” . . (sig. m 6 verso). “The second book spekyth of the batayle that Olyuer dyd ayenst Fyerabras the meruayllous geaunte.” . . “The iij book speketh how by reuelacyon of saynt James Charles went and conquerd Spayne and galyce . . and fynably of the trayson of Gauellon by the whyche the deth of Rolland was pyetous / the deth of Oliuer dolorouse . . and fynably the deth of Charles thempour.”

On comparing the first and last books of the text under notice with the chapters devoted to Charlemagne, in Verard's edition of the Speculum Historiale, (vol. iv, book 25,) it is evident that the Compiler did not confine himself to the account of Vincent de Beauvais. The Second Book, he tells us, was . . . from an old Romance in French; perhaps the same as is still extant in Royal MS. 4. C. xi. 10, or the manuscript in the Imperial Library, Paris, No. 6795.

It is the French compilation of Henry Bolomyer which Caxton was requested by “some persons of noble estate and degree”—“my good singular lords and special masters” as he calls them—to reduce into English. Among these his good friend Master William Daubeny, Treasurer of the King's Jewels, who is the only one mentioned by name, seems to have most influenced him.

The only EXISTING COPY at present known is in the British Museum, King's Library (C. 10. b. 9).—It is perfect, and in excellent preservation. Measurement, $10\frac{1}{4} \times 7\frac{1}{4}$ inches.

MANUSCRIPTS.—There does not appear to be any manuscript of this romance in the British Museum. In the Imperial Library, Paris, there are the following: 1981, 7554, 7554^a, and 7554²². In the Library of the Arsenal is also one, 236.

REMARKS.—Although frequently copied in manuscript, and often printed in the 15th and 16th Centuries, there are few romances so rare as "Paris and Vienne." Translated into the "langage provençal," from the original composition, which was in "Catalane," it was turned into Latin, French, Italian, Flemish, and English. The French, which was the translation Caxton used, was accomplished about the beginning of the 15th Century, by Pierre de la Sippade, of Marseilles. The first printed edition was in Italian, at Trévise, 1482; the second, Caxton's, 1485. G. Leeu, at Antwerp, 1487, brought out two impressions, one in German and one in French. Wynken de Worde made an early reprint of Caxton's edition. The admiration which Jean de Pins, Bishop of Rieux, one of the most elegant scholars of his age, conceived for this romance, induced him to turn it into Latin, for the instruction of the children of his friend the Chancellor Duprat. It was printed in 1516. The Jesuit Charron, in his Memoirs of Jean de Pins. (Avignon. 8vo. 1748) speaks thus of this romance—"As for children, it would be impossible to find a work more fitted to imbue the mind with correct taste and elegance of style, to influence their characters by the wisdom of its reflections, or to forearm their hearts against those assaults of passion which blindly precipitate the young into the abysses of misery. The work is truly admirable. The situations are so interesting and the dénouement so happy that their conception would reflect honor on the best writers of the most renowned ages." (See Histoire du Chevalier Paris et de la belle Vienne. 8vo. Paris, 1835).

The only EXISTING COPY is in the British Museum, King's Library (C. 10. b. 10.)—It is perfect and in good preservation. Measurement, 10 $\frac{1}{2}$ × 7 $\frac{1}{8}$ inches.

No. 66.—THE GOLDEN LEGEND. Largest Folio. Second Edition. Small Head-lines. (1487?)

COLLATION.—The same exactly as the 1st edition, with the exception of sigs. \mathfrak{F} and \mathfrak{H} , in which appears the following variation:—

FIRST EDITION.		SECOND EDITION.
sig. \mathfrak{F} , 6 leaves	} = 9 leaves.	sig. \mathfrak{F} = 8 leaves,	signed to \mathfrak{F} itij , and followed by sig. aa .
sig. \mathfrak{H} , 2 "

In order to get the matter of the two signatures into one, the 16 pages of Æ in the 2nd edition are all made a line longer than in the first. This arrangement was evidently considered as an improvement, and therefore was later in point of time than the edition in which it does not occur.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—These in the main are identical with the edition already described, the chief peculiarity being that the head-lines of the pages and the head-lines of the various lives, which in the 1st edition are all in Type No. 3, are in the 2nd edition all in Type No. 5. We must also notice that in places (e. g. sig. Æ j recto) the large capital letters, used in Type No. 6, make an accidental appearance in the head-lines, where they were occasionally used instead of quadrats. This evinces a much later period for the impression than the 1st edition. The different appearance of the two editions is shown in Plate XL.

REMARKS.—The absence of any complete copy, or indeed of any copy having prologues or colophon, suggests the idea that certain sheets only may, for some reason, have been reprinted to supply deficiencies; if so, the reprint is so extensive, that, for the sake of accuracy, it is better to look upon it as a separate edition.

No. 40*.—AN INDULGENCE GRANTED IN 1481 BY POPE SIXTUS V. FOR ASSISTANCE AGAINST THE TURKS. On Parchment.

This Indulgence, a description of which was accidentally omitted in its proper sequence, is at present represented by two slips of parchment, which were recognised by me when examining the St. Albans "Boethius." (See ante page 70).

Originally in one, the document was cut in two pieces by Caxton's Binder, who used them for strengthening the back of the book. They were pasted, one at the beginning and one at the end, down the whole length, inside the boards. When the volume was taken to pieces they were, unfortunately, subjected to the usual soaking in water. This has entirely changed their original appearance, as the print has of course participated in the shrinking of the parchment. From several personal examinations while the volume was in its original state, I am enabled to give the following

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—The Type is all No. 4. The lines, which are spaced to an even length, measured 9 inches. The complete document, apparently, contained 13 lines, and the whole of the remaining Text is as follows:—

MANUSCRIPTS.—Cotton, Cleop. A v (sæc xiv), French prose. No Author's name mentioned. At the end is:—"Cest liure compila e parlist vn frere de lordre des preescheors a la requeste du Roy de France Phelippe. En lan del Incarnacion iesu crist. Mil. CC. lxxix." Royal 19 C ii (sæc xiv), the same as the last in text, but has the following colophon, "Explicit le liure de vices & de vertus." Arundel 57, an early translation in the Kentish dialect; it is dated 1340, and was made for the use of "lewede men," by Dan Michelis, Monk of Northgate, Canterbury, who has entitled it, "The Ayenbite of Inwyt," i.e. "The Prick of Conscience." Under the former title it has been printed for the Roxburghe Club. At the beginning of the volume is this note in the margin, "Yis boc is dan michelis of Northgate / ywrite an englis of his ozene hand. Yet hatte .Ayenbite of inwyt. And is of ye bochouse of Saynt Austines of Canterberi mid ye lettres C:C:" The colophon is "Yis boc is ycome to ye ende. Heuene blisse god ous zende. Amen ¶ Nou ich wille yet ye ywyte hou hit is ywent: Yet yis boc is ywrite mid engliss of Kent. Yis boc is ymad uor lewede men / uor uader / and uor moder / and uor oyer ken / ham uor to berze uram alle manyere zen / Yet ine hare inwytte ne bleue no uoul wen. Huo ase god is his name yzed Yet yis boc made god him yeue yet bread / of angles of heuene and yerto his red / and onderuonge his zaule huanne. Yet he is dyad. Amen. Ymende. Yet yis boc is uolued ine ye eue of ye holy apostles symon an Judas / of ane broyer of ye cloystre of sauynst Austin of Canterberi / Ine ye yeare of oure lhordes beringe 1340." Addit. 17013 is another English translation a little later in execution, but without any name or date. It ends "Here endeth ye bok of vices and vertues."

Manuscripts of this work are plentiful in the Imperial Library, Paris. No. 7018^a is entitled "La Somme le Roi." No. 7043^a begins "Cy commencent les chappitres du liure qui est appelle le Mirrouer du Monde, que aucuns appellent Vices et Vertus, les autres l'appellent la somme le Roy." Nos. 7283, 7283², 7283^{1A}, 7284, 7284^a, 7292^{1A}, 7293 are other copies. No. 7289 is a 15th-Century version in metre.

REMARKS.—In Caxton's printed epilogue (ante vol. i, page 187) we thus read:—"Which book is called in French "Le livre Royal," that is to say the Royal book, or a book of a king; for the Holy Scripture calleth every man a king which wisely and perfectly can govern and direct himself after virtue." But "Le livre Royal" was by no means the title by which Caxton's contemporaries knew this work. The most common name is that found in Royal MS. 19 C. ii "Le livre des Vices et des Vertus;" although it was sometimes entitled "La Somme de Roi," or "La Somme des Vices et des Vertus." But by whatever name known it was for centuries a favourite book, as is proved by the numerous copies still extant. Its Author is said to be "Frere Laurent de l'ordre des predicateurs et confesseur de Phillippe le Hardi" (Les Msc. Franç. t. iii, p. 388), but his name does not appear in any of the above-mentioned manuscripts of the work. Very soon after its appearance, it was favourably received in England, where, as already noticed, it was translated for the purpose of being read to the people in their own dialect by a Priest of Kent. Another and purer translation into English (Addit. 17013) was also made about the same time.

Many manuscripts of this work are beautifully illustrated, and it seems very probable, that from the paintings in Caxton's manuscript copy were derived the subjects of the engravings which illustrate his printed edition.

EXISTING COPIES.

1. BEDFORD. The Bedfordshire General Library.—Perfect, but somewhat soiled and with many scribblings. Measurement, $11\frac{1}{4} \times 8\frac{1}{2}$ inches. There are several Autograph notes of "Thomas Archer, Parson of Houghton Conquest, Beds," by whom the volume was presented (temp. Jas. I), to the Church Library of St. John's, Bedford. The library was afterwards moved to St. Paul's, Bedford, and, about 1840, removed to its present position.

2. BRITISH MUSEUM. King's Library (C. 10. b. 22).—Imperfect, the 1st leaf being supplied in facsimile. In good condition. Measurement, $10\frac{3}{4} \times 6\frac{3}{4}$ inches.

MANUSCRIPTS.—Harl. 1310 (sec. xiv), the original French text without note or date of any kind. In the Bib. Imp. Paris are 7040, 7273^a, 7290, 7291, and 7323. The last of these has the following interesting note. “Ce livre fist frere Jaques le Grant de l'ordre des hermites saint Augustin, et le donna à Jehan, fils de roy de France, Duc de Berry," &c. This presentation is dated "le iiij^e iour de mars mil cccc et neuf." Caxton's English translation is found in Harl. 149 (sæc. xv), commencing "Here begynneth the table of the Rubrysshes of a booke yntytyled of goode maners / &c." This, if not Caxton's original Autograph, must be a contemporary transcript from the printed work; and, in either case, one would expect to find the prologue and colophon, both of which are wanting.

REMARKS.—Jacques Legrand was an Augustin Friar, and is stated by several Writers (though upon what authority does not appear) to have been a native of Toledo, in Spain, Confessor to Charles VII, and to have refused a bishopric. He is known to have been the Author of the "Sophologium," originally written in Latin, and translated by himself into French for the Duke d'Orleans, son of Charles V. He also was the Author of "Le livre des bonnes meurs," which he dedicated to the Duke de Berri.

In an interesting prologue appended by Caxton to his English translation of this work (see Vol. I, page 186), we are informed that he undertook the task at the desire of William Praat, a fellow Mercer. The terms in which Caxton speaks of Praat as "an honest man" and "a singular friend of old knowledge," whose death-bed request it was that the book which had pleased and instructed his own mind should have greater currency among the people by means of his friend's new Art of Printing, prove the close amity which must have existed between the two Mercers. Caxton, according to his friend's wish, translated and printed it "for the amendment of manners and the increase of virtuous living."

REMARKS.—In describing this volume, Ames, Herbert, and Dibdin give an account of an interesting wood-engraving, which is inserted at the beginning of the copy in the British Museum, but which does not belong to the book, as is proved by the first signature being complete without it, as well as from the remains of a sentence in type for which the block was pierced. This sentence has been nearly cut out, but the portion left is in type of different character to any attributed to the Press of Caxton. The whole seems of Dutch or Flemish origin, though it has not been identified as belonging to any known edition. The engraving measures $9 \times 5\frac{1}{2}$ inches, and occupies the entire page, being thus described by Herbert—"In the middle part Christ is seen naked, half length, as at a window, with his arms across and his head inclined, showing the wounds on his hands and under the right breast; a spear erect on the right and a sponge on the left; over his head is a tablet with INRI. On a tablet beneath the window, the title appears evidently to have been printed, but from this copy has been indiscreetly cut out. About this middle part are 28 square divisions, each containing some symbol of the passion, forming a kind of border." An engraving similar in design was used for the "Horæ," described at page 202 post.

There was another edition of this work printed in 1489 (see No. 80), but the present edition, from the type being earlier, and from the absence of the almanac at the beginning, appears to have been the first. In both, the Latin is printed with many contractions. In the "Typographical Antiquities," the two editions being treated as one has led to several errors.

The numerous and constantly varying alterations in the daily order of Church Service must have rendered, in all ages, a book of directions very necessary to all officiating Priests. But the introduction of new Feasts and Commemorations would, in course of time, render any such book incorrect. Thus it happened that Clement Maydestone, a Monk of the order of St. Bridget, and a Priest, finding, as he tells us in his prologue, that one of the most important festivals in the year, that of Corpus Christi, with its Octave, was, according to the written directions, celebrated cum regimine chori, while the admitted and general custom of the Salisbury rule was to celebrate that festival sine regimine chori; finding also several necessary things omitted altogether, and a wrong disposition made of others; determined by the consent of his superiors to correct and supply all defects. When Clement Maydestone had thus reformed and renewed the Pica, he gave his work the now recognised title of "Directorium Sacerdotum." This is the text as printed by Caxton.

Clement Maydestone appears to have been the son of Thomas Maydestone (probably of Hounslow, Middlesex), and flourished in the reign of Henry V. An account of the Martyrdom of Archbishop Scroop is also ascribed to him.

In the latter half of the 15th Century, the reformed Pica of Maydestone was again collated with the true "Sarum Ordinale," by one Clarke, a singing man of King's College, Cambridge, by order of the University, which at this period evidently followed the Salisbury use. A notice of Clarke's work may be seen in the prologue appended by Pynson to his "Directorium," of 1497. In the copy of this edition, lately purchased of Mr. Maskell, for the British Museum, are numerous notes in the Autograph of Bishop Wagstaffe, the Nonjuror, which have supplied material for some of the above remarks.

The only EXISTING COPY at present known is that in the King's Library, British Museum (C. 10. b. 16), which is perfect, in fair condition, and measures $10\frac{1}{2} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches. On a fly-leaf is the Autograph "W. Bayntun, Gray's Inn, bought of a man introduced by Doctor Nugent." Also "6 Guineas;" and on sig. a ij is written "Rychard Arnold est possessour" This seems to have been the only Caxton in Bayntun's library, which was sold at his residence in Field Court, Gray's Inn, on the 4th June, 1787, by Mr. Ansell. The "Directorium Sacerdotum" is Lot 467 in the Sale Catalogue, but neither the price at which it sold nor the Purchaser's name is noted in the very rare copy in the Bodleian Library.

NO. 70.—SPECULUM VITÆ CHRISTI. Folio. "Emprynted by wylllyam Caxton." Without Place or Date. (1488?)

COLLATION.—a b c d e f g h i k l m n o p q r s are 4^m, with the 1st leaf of sig. a blank; t a 2^m, with the 4th leaf blank. In all 148 leaves, of which 2 are blank.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. The Type throughout is No. 5. The lines are spaced to an even length, and measure $4\frac{1}{8}$ inches. A page has 33 lines, exclusive of the head-lines, and 1 line space between. Without folios or catchwords. There are side notes throughout the volume, a rare practice with Caxton, who, however, probably followed his copy in this particular, as side notes appear in nearly all the manuscript versions. An initial, cut on wood, begins every chapter.

Commencing with a blank leaf, the Text begins thus on sig. a ij recto:—

A the begynnyng of the prophemy of the booke that is cleped the myrroure of the blessed lpf of Ihesu Cryste the fyrst parte for the monedape / ¶ A deuoute medytacion of the grete counceyll in heuene for the restorpyng of man and hys sauacion. Capitulum primum. ¶ Of the manere

The table of chapters ends thus at the bottom of sig. a iij verso,

¶ Explicunt Capitula

¶ Sequitur Prohemium

On sig. a iiii recto, with a 3-line initial, commences the ¶ Prohemium, with the approbation of the book by Thomas Arundel, Archbishop of Canterbury, who, in a wood-cut, is represented on a throne, receiving the work from the hands of an Ecclesiastic. The proheme, by Bonaventure, to the original work follows on sig. a 6 recto; and, on sig. a 8 recto, with a wood-cut of Adam and Eve, is the beginning of the 1st chapter.

¶ Die lune

¶ Incipit Prima pars

¶ Adeuoute meditacpon of the grete counse pille in heuene for the restorpnge of man and his sauaciou / Capitulum primum Et prima pars /

The "Speculum" ends at foot of sig. g i recto, ¶ Explicit Speculum vite Cristi .

On the verso begins a treatise on the Sacrament of Christ's body,

¶ A thorte treatise of the hyghet and most worthy sacramente of crystes blessed body . and the merueilles therof / which finishes on sig. t 3 recto with the following imprint :—

¶ Emprynted by wylliam carton

Some prayers follow, and on the verso of the same leaf the Text ends,

¶ Ihesu lord thy blessed lpf / helpe and comferte oure wretchid lpf . Amen . soo mote it be

¶ Explicit Speculum vite Cristi complete /

¶ In omi tribulacione / temptacione . necessitate ⁊ angustia.
succurre nobis piissima virgo maria Amen .

The recto of sig. t 4 is blank, and the verso occupied with Caxton's device.

Of the "Speculum vitæ Christi" two distinct editions were issued, but, as both were printed with the same types, page for page, line for line (with few exceptions), and nearly letter for letter, there seems no need to treat them separately; especially as the typographical minutiae do not enable us with facility to determine which edition has the better claim to priority of workmanship. The greatest variations will be found in the head-lines, where, from sig. k to the end of the volume, there is a difference in every page; one edition (A) using the word Ca in the heads, while the other (B) has the full word Capitulum. This, and the amount of change in the text, will be seen in the following extracts, which have, however, been chosen as showing a more than usual variation.

MANUSCRIPTS.—Latin, Royal 17, D xvii (early 15th Century), the original composition of St. Bonaventure, divided into chapters, but not into days of the week. Royal 20, B iv (sæc. xv), has many fine illuminations. Prologue, "A treshault tresfort et tresvittorieux prince. Henry de ce nom par la grace de dieu Roy dangleterre . . . Vostre Humble chapelain Jehan Galopes dit le galoys Doyen de leglise collegial Mons' Saint Louys de la saulsaye ou diocesse deureux, honneur obedience," &c. It ends, "Je cest liure ay translate de v're gmademēt de latin en frācois soubz v're correōn au bñ de to' et a le honeur de dieu Amen:" this is a French translation of Bonaventure. Addit. 19901 (early 15th Century), Caxton's text, including the treatise on the Sacrament of Christ's blessed body; ends, "Jhū lord yi blessed life: helpe and coñfort our wretchede life. Explicit Speculum vite xpī complete." Royal 18, C x (early 15th Century); Arundel 112 and 364; Addit. 21006; all 15th Century English manuscripts agreeing generally with Caxton's text.

The above are connected with the edition by Caxton; the following are not, although bearing the same name:—Harl. 4328 (15th Century), anonymous French prose, not from Bonaventure. Royal 16, G iii (15th Century), divided into books and chapters, each book representing a day of the week. "Escript par David Aubert en la bonne ville de gand Lan de grace Mil CCCC.lxxix." This is an anonymous French translation of Bonaventure. Addit. 16609 (15th Century), an anonymous English translation from the French of "Frere Gwilliam Lemenaud of thordre of the Freres mynōs," who himself translated from the original Latin of "the worshipful fader Ludolphe of the Charterhouse." It is entitled "Meditacions vpon the Lyue of Jesu criste."

REMARKS.—There appear to have been two, if not more, original works on the "Life of Christ," in the libraries of the 15th Century. One by Father Ludolphe, or Rudolphe, (Addit. 16609), was translated, as already noticed, into French, and thence into English; but this is an entirely different work to that printed by Caxton. St. Bonaventure, in 1410, wrote "The Life of Christ" in Latin (Royal 17, D. xvii), which became very popular, and was translated several times into French, with amplifications more or less. In the early part of the 15th Century Jean de Gallopes, already noticed as the Translator of "The Pilgrimage of the Soul" (ante page 131), made a French prose translation of Bonaventure's Latin work (Royal 20, B. iv). This bears a close resemblance to the English text as printed by Caxton, was dedicated by Gallopes to Henry V, and probably had considerable currency among the English, to whom Gallopes, if not an Englishman himself, was well known from his connection with the Duke of Bedford. The Author of Caxton's English text is unknown, but he professes to have borrowed largely from the Latin of Bonaventure.

EXISTING COPIES.

1. BRITISH MUSEUM. King's Library (C. 10. b. 15).—Imperfect, wanting the last leaf, with the device, but has all the text, which is, however, made up from various copies. Patched and mended. Badly washed. Edition B. Measurement, $10\frac{1}{2} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

2. CAMBRIDGE. Public Library (AB. 10. 42).—Perfect, clean and free from manuscript notes. Edition B. Measurement, $10\frac{7}{8} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches. From Bishop Moore's collection.

3. THE SAME. Another copy (AB. 10. 43).—Imperfect, wanting sig. c ij and portions of the last 2 leaves. Stained, and many leaves transposed. Edition B. Measurement $10\frac{5}{8} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches. From Bishop Moore's collection.

4. THE SAME. Another copy (AB. 10. 44).—Imperfect, wanting all before sig. b ij, as well as the last 3 leaves. Slightly stained. Edition A. Measurement, $10\frac{7}{8} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches. From Bishop Moore's collection.

5. GLASGOW. Hunterian Museum (AB. 9. 18).—Imperfect, wanting 20 leaves in various parts. Much stained and in a very dilapidated condition. Measurement, $10 \times 7\frac{3}{4}$ inches.

6. LAMBETH. Archiepiscopal Library.—Imperfect, wanting sigs. c iij, c iiij, c 5, and c 6, which are supplied by the corresponding leaves from W. de Worde's edition, which was reprinted page for page like this. The blank leaf of sig. a is here in good condition. Edition B, with a few leaves from Edition A. Measurement, 11×8 inches.

7. EARL OF ASHBURNHAM.—Perfect, clean, and free from manuscript. Measurement, $10\frac{1}{2} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches. On a fly-leaf is written £25.

8. EARL SPENCER.—Made Perfect, being the Roxburghe copy with 2 leaves added from a duplicate in Lord Spencer's library, which duplicate was afterwards placed in Sir Francis Freeling's library. In good condition. Measurement, $9\frac{3}{4} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches. On a fly-leaf is written £8 8.

9. W. E. WATKYN WYNNE, Esq.—Imperfect, wanting all sig. a, except a iiij and 5, and all after t j. Few manuscript notes. Slightly wormed and stained. Measurement, $10\frac{1}{2} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Book-plate of Watkyn Williams, Esq., of Penbedw. Edition A. There is a curious transposition of pages in the press-work of this volume, proving that even so late as 1489, the practice of printing one page at a time was retained. This is shown by the verso of sig. e iiij being printed on the recto of sig. e 6, and vice versa. In sig. e there are several instances of the side notes having been blocked out in the printing. Pressmen call it “a bite.”

10. REV. T. CORSER.—Imperfect, wanting p 6 and s 7. Edition B. In good state, but much ‘cropt.’ Measurement $8\frac{1}{2} \times 7$ inches. Sir F. Freeling’s copy, obtained from Earl Spencer’s library.

MANUSCRIPTS.—Although there do not appear to be any copies of this work in the British Museum, there are three in the Imperial Library, Paris, which throw some light on the history of its composition. No. 7292^{1A}. (sæc. xv) is entitled "Le Doctrinal aus simples gens, fait et compilé des souverains clers, maistres en théologie à Paris." The prologue begins, "Ce qui est contenue en ce petit livret doit vent les curés enseigner a leurs parroissiens / car pour les simples prestres qui n'entendent mie l'escripture et pour les simples gens est il fait en françois, plainement et par grant conseil et examinacions esprouvés à Paris par le conseil de plusieurs maistres en divinité." At the end, "Explicit le Doctrinal aus simples gens envoié à Paris par le royne Blanche Jehanne d'Evreus. Et donne le pape. IIIJ. xx. jours de pardon a ceulz qui prieront pour elle." No. 7652 informs us that the work "approuvé par plusieurs maistres en divinité a esté escript à Sens en commandement de tres-revend pere en Dieu monsieur Guy de Roye le 2 mars l'an de grace 1387 ;" other copies are 7274 and 7318. (Les Msc. Franç. t. vii, p. 337).

REMARKS.—The "Manipulus Curatorum," compiled in the early part of the 14th, was printed frequently in the 15th Century. Greswell mentions :—"Savilliani anno 1470; Aug. Vindel 1471, Gering at Paris 1478,; and several times later. In these, as in all the early French editions, the authorship is ascribed to Guy, Archbishop of Sens, who died 1409. This has been adopted by the Compilers of the Harleian Catalogue (iii. 1552), and from them by all subsequent Bibliographers. That it is, nevertheless, erroneous, appears from the extracts given above. In no manuscript copy is the authorship attributed to Guy de Roye: in fact, it was well known before his time, for it was "envoïé à Paris," by Blanche, Queen of France, who died in 1370. The Archbishop was, nevertheless, the cause of its being circulated in the French language; for about the year 1388, he employed several Doctors of Divinity to translate it from the original Latin, and promoted its use by the Clergy in all the parishes of his diocese. Further than this he appears to have had no direct connection with it.

It was known in France under the titles of "Livre de Sapience," "Doctrinal de Sapience," and "Doctrinal de la foy catholique," but most commonly as "Le Doctrinal au simples gens."

The following remark of Mr. Douce is written in his copy of the "Doctrinal." "The Sermons of Vitriaco, or some other of his works, much quoted in Scala Cœli, seem to have been used in the Doctrinal."

EXISTING COPIES.

4. THE SAME. Another copy.—Very Imperfect, wanting all sigs. ¶ and ¶. Stained, torn and patched. In manuscript, £10 10/. Book-plate of Francis Douce. Measurement, 9½ × 7 inches.

5. HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN. Windsor Castle.—Perfect, and unique in two particulars, being printed on parchment, and having a chapter on "Negligences happing in the Mass." The parchment upon which this copy is printed is very coarse, discolored, uneven in substance, and often disfigured by holes. Dibdin probably never saw it, or he would have modified his admiration. (Typ. Ant. vol. i, page 268). A slip of paper at the beginning states that "This book was presented to the Royal Library by Mr. Bryant," which probably was the reason why it was retained when that collection became National property.

The unique chapter at the end of this copy occupies 3 leaves, unsigned, and begins thus :

¶ Of the negligences happing in the masse . and of the reince :
byes Capitulo . Iriiij^o

I The as we haue seyd that thys is made especyally for the symple peple . and for the symple prestres . whiche vnderstonde not latin / bycause that he is not so suffysaunt but that somtyme for negligence or other wyse he may faplle

The whole of this chapter is very curious ; and is occupied with what the officiating Priest is to do—if, after the consecration of the wine, he remembers that no water had been mingled with it ; or finds that he has consecrated water only ; or remembers that he has eaten ought since midnight ; or finds a fly, a "loppe," or a venomous beast in the chalice ; whether, if a small piece of meat abide in the teeth, and be swallowed during the celebration, it incapacitates the Priest from singing Mass ; what is to be done when the Priest lets fall any portion of the consecrated elements ; or meets with a similar accident.

On the 3rd verso the chapter ends,

*And yf the body of Ihesu crist vestymentes that ben blessyd . the peece ought not to be cutte of on whych e it is fallen . but it ought right wel to be wasshen

No. 72.—HORÆ, A FRAGMENT OF. Third Edition. Octavo.
Sine ullâ notâ (1490?)

COLLATION.—Twelve leaves of this edition, consisting of sigs. d j, d ij, d iij, d iiij, and the 8 leaves of m, are all that remain.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—The Type is all No. 5. The lines, of which there are 17 to the page, are fully spaced out, and measure $2\frac{1}{4}$ inches in length. Large full-faced capital letters are frequently used, and in sig. d, are printed in red ink; but not so in sig. m. Wood-cut initials, as well as small illustrations, very similar to those found in "Speculum vitæ Christi," are used. One design is similar in treatment to the large wood-cut which has been added as a frontispiece to the "Directorium Sacerdotum" in the British Museum, and already described at page 193 ante.

As a specimen of the work the page of sig. d j recto is represented at Plate XLVIII.

REMARKS.—This is the third edition of the "Horæ" we have had to notice, although unfortunately we cannot point to a perfect copy anywhere. The present fragments, unlike those of the previous editions, which are evidently of early workmanship, show very plain signs, from their general appearance, and especially from the fact of the red ink being printed in separately, that they were among the latest productions of Caxton's Press. They came out probably after Caxton had resigned all the management of the practical part to his successor, Wynken de Worde.

These unique leaves were presented by Mr. Maskell, in 1858, to the British Museum (C. 35. a). Measurement, $5\frac{1}{2} \times 4$ inches.

NO. 73.—SERVITIUM DE TRANSFIGURATIONE JHESU CHRISTI. Quarto.
Caxton me fieri fecit. Without Place or Date. (1491 ?)

COLLATION.—Sig. a consists of a sheet folded in quarto, having a half-sheet inside, the 1st recto of the sheet is unsigned, but upon the 1st recto of the half-sheet, which is the 3rd recto in the book, is the sig. a ij. Sig. b is a whole sheet, signed only on the 1st recto, b j. There are altogether 10 leaves and no blanks.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. The Type is No. 5 only. The lines are spaced to an even length, and measure $3\frac{1}{2}$ inches. 24 lines to a full page. Without folios or catchwords. One small wood-cut of the transfiguration on the 1st recto. The initial letter in wood, with many rubrics, are printed in red, not as noticed in "Quatre derennieres choses," by the same pull of the press, but by a separate operation.

¶ Octavo Id^o Augusti fiat seruir' / de tñsfigu

The Text ends on sig. b 4 verso,

¶ Per oia sc'i'a seculorū amen

¶ Caxton me fieri fecit /

A facsimile of this, and of the entire 1st page, is given in Plate XLIX.

REMARKS.—This little tract has considerable interest for the Bibliographer, for although Caxton had already printed several Service Books before this was undertaken, such as the two (if not three) editions of the "Horæ" (pages 42 and 104 ante), the Psalter with Service for the Dead (page 105 ante) and the "Servitium de Visitatione" (page 139 ante), not to mention the Service Books for the Priests, such as "The Festial" and the three editions of "Directorium," yet this can certainly claim a unique distinction in two particulars, for it is the only perfect Service Book in the types of Caxton, and it is the only one known to have his imprint.

The observations concerning the printing of the "Horæ," last noticed, might be repeated here. This also has every appearance of being a very late issue. No other book from the same press was signed in a similar way. The first sheet was evidently, like sig. b, printed 4 pages at once, in which case it would be only necessary to sign the first page, so as to show the binder how to fold it. As in the first sheet the red ink title and the wood-cut would answer that purpose we find no signature at all; but the first page of the half-sheet, which is the third leaf in the tract, is signed a ij. This is very systematic, and according to the same plan the second sheet is signed b j on the first recto only; but it is an advance in the Art, beyond the usual practice of Caxton.

This service is one of the numerous additions made to the "Church Calendar" in the 15th Century, and, being newly ordained by the Church, would not be found in the old manuscript "Service Books." To supply this deficiency it was, therefore, printed separately.

The only EXISTING COPY was purchased many years ago in a volume of Theological Tracts, by Joshua Wilson, Esq., of Tunbridge Wells. When in 1831 Mr. Wilson presented a large portion of his collection to the Congregational Library, Blomfield Street, London, this volume was among the number. Here it was first noticed, in 1860, as containing a Caxton, by Mr. Cowper, who sent an account of the volume to Notes and Queries. It was determined shortly after to dispose of it, and in July, 1862, it came under the hammer of Mr. Puttick, when it fetched the high price of £200, and added another curiosity to the Caxtonian treasures of the British Museum. The volume is in its original binding, somewhat dilapidated, of oak boards covered with stamped leather, and contains, besides the tract by Caxton, the following:—

"Festum dulcissimi nominis iesu fiat septimo idus Augusti." "Per me Ricardum Pinson." 4to. Sine anno.

"Augustinus de virtute Psalmorum." 4to. Sine anno.

"Albertus magnus de virtutibus anime." 4to. G. Leeu, 1479.

"Johann. Nider de morali lepra." 4to. Per Joh. de Westfalia. Sine anno.

Of these the Pynson only has any interest, being unique. The service is for the day following that printed by Caxton, although of course quite unconnected with it. Pynson's first dated book is the "Dives et Pauper," printed July 5th, 1493; and, according to Ames, this was also the year in which Letters of Naturalisation were granted him, before which he could not become a Trader.

On a parchment fly-leaf at the beginning of the volume is the Autograph, "Geo. Oldham ex Dono Sam Grice, A^o. 1721." Measurement $8\frac{1}{2} \times 5\frac{1}{4}$ inches.

NO. 74.—THE FAYTS OF ARMS AND OF CHIVALRY. Folio. "Per Caxton."
Without Place. Printed the 14th day of July, the fourth year of the reign of Edward IV, or 1489.

COLLATION.—Two unsigned leaves of table; A B C D E F G H I K L M N O P Q R S all 4^{na}; T a 3^a, with the last leaf blank. In all 144 leaves, of which 1 is blank.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. The whole book is in one Type only, No. 6. The lines, which are fully spaced out, measure 4½ inches, and there are 31 to a full page. Without folios or catchwords. Wood-cut initial letters.

The Text begins, with a 3-line initial,

The whole of this epilogue is printed in Vol. I, page 186.

MANUSCRIPTS.—Royal 15 E. vi; the original French Text of Christine de Pisan, beginning "Cy commence la table des Rubriques du liure des fais darmes et de cheualerie." It agrees very accurately with Caxton's English version, and has the introductory chapter, in which Christine excuses herself, and explains her reasons for writing a work on chivalry. This manuscript is also interesting, from having been written for the celebrated John Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury, who died in 1453, and by whom it was presented to Queen Margaret. A still greater degree of interest would invest the volume if we suppose it to be the identical manuscript from which Caxton made his translation. This is certainly not improbable, as the original from the Royal Library was entrusted to our Printer, for the purpose of translation and printing, by King Henry VII, of England, as we learn from the prologue:—"which book, being in French, was delivered to me, William Caxton, by the most christian king, my natural sovereign lord, King Henry VII, in his Palace of Westminster, and desired me to translate this said book, and to put it in print." Royal 19 B. xviii (sec. xv), is another copy of the same version, but unfinished. M. Paris describes three copies in the Imperial Library, Paris, 7076, 7087, 7425.

REMARKS.—Many French Bibliographers (Les Msc. Franç. t. v, page 94), ascribe the composition of "Faits d'Armes et de Chevalerie," to Jean le Meun, so well known from his connection with "Le Roman de le Rose." The sole reason for this appears to have been the fact that Jean le Meun, translated into French the celebrated work of Vegetius "De re militari," written in 1284, a work often quoted in the "Faits d'Armes;" but since the writings of Christine have become better known, no one has ventured to claim for the 13th, a work containing references and facts applicable only to the 15th Century. That a book on the "Rules of War" should in any age have been written by a woman, is sufficiently improbable to require a critical examination, and, therefore, as the claims of Christine to the authorship of "Les Faits d'Armes," are still denied by some writers, it may not be inappropriate to state both sides of the argument.

Among the manuscripts in the British Museum, is one entitled "The Boke of Noblesse" (Royal 18, B. xxii). This, for the first time, was printed in 1860, for the members of the Roxburghe Club. The Author is entirely unknown, and the only reason for mentioning this at all is, that the name of Christine frequently appears in its pages, as an authority upon military matters, but is always referred to as "Dame Cristyn in hir booke of Tree of Batailles," or some military phrase. But "L'Arbre des Batailles" is the well-known compilation of Honore Bonet; of which copies may be seen in Royal 20 C. viii, and Addit. 22768. Now, what is the natural conclusion from this erroneous ascription? Evidently that the unknown Writer of the "Book of Noblesse," quoting probably from a copy of "L'Arbre des Batailles," which had neither prologue nor epilogue; and having in his mind the great fame of Christine as the Writer of a book on a similar subject, made the not unpardonable mistake of misquoting the Author's name, and attributing to Christine, the Compiler of "Les Faits d'Armes," all the quotations drawn from Bonet's "L'Arbre de Batailles." Not so, argues Mr. John Gough Nichols, in his interesting preface to the Roxburghe impression. "Christina de Pisan," he urges, "was a Poetess; and it is not likely that she had more to do with the "Faits d'Armes" than the "dame Christine" of "The Book of Noblesse," had with the "Arbre des Batailles." In support of this opinion, is quoted, a marginal note in "The Boke of Noblesse," in an old hand-writing, but more modern than the original manuscript, to the following effect:—

"L'Arbre des Batailles compose par Honore Bonet Prieur de Salomon en Prouence."

"Note yt in some Authors this Booke is termed Dame Christine of y^e tree of Battayles, not that she made yt; But because she was a notable Benefactour to Learned men and perchance to y^e autor of this Booke And therefore diverse of them sette furthe their Bookes under her name."

The Author of this note was evidently unacquainted with the particulars of the life, or the character of the writings, of Christine—the "virilis fœmina" of her eminent contemporary, Gerson—and "La grant sagesse" of her Editor, Jean Marot. The assertion that Authors set forth their books under her name, is unsupported by a single known instance; while her early tuition, political life, and numerous writings, would both enable and incline her to compose such a work.

Christine was no common Poetess whose strength was in the prettiness of her amatory verses. The short account of her, already given (see ante page 47), will show the energetic and comprehensive character of her mind. Educated by her father in the whole course of literature at that time in vogue, she had, while yet young, made herself mistress of the Latin language, and stored her mind by the perusal of the most celebrated writings, as well Pagan as Christian. Living in the midst of wars, and preparations for war, many of her acknowledged writings teem with warlike allusions. In politics her opinion had great weight; she was consulted by the highest nobles of France; and many years of her life were spent in the endeavour to raise the political and moral tone of the country. The celebrated Jean le Meun found in her no weak opponent, and the equally celebrated Chancellor Gerson, a most potent ally.

Should any doubt remain as to the capability of Christine to compile such a work as "Faits d'Armes," the Reader is requested to peruse the preface, which although suppressed in the printed edition of Verard, 1488, is found in numerous manuscripts written during the life of Christine herself. In this, as translated by Caxton (see Vol. I, page 186), we read; that because men of Arms are not Clerks, nor instructed in the science of language, she had assembled and gathered together divers books to produce her work "Faits d'Armes;" "And," as she says, "because this is a thing not accustomed, and out of usage for women, who commonly spin and occupy themselves in household matters, therefore I supplicate all in the high and noble office of chivalry, in memory of their lady Minerva, who, although a Goddess, was inventress of iron and steel harness, that they will not take it for evil if I, a woman, treat of a like matter." Then follows an appeal to Minerva, who, being born in "Puyllé," was "somewhat consonant in the nation; for," adds Christine, "I am, as thou wert, a woman Italian."

If this be not the writing of Christine herself, it must be one of the most remarkable forgeries on record.

No. 75.—STATUTES OF HENRY VII. Folio. Sine ullâ notâ. (1489?)

COLLATION.—a b c d are 4th, with the 1st leaf of a blank; e a 5th, with the last blank. Total 42 leaves, of which 2 are blank.

Note.—The signature is omitted on a ij. The 3rd and 5th leaves of e are erroneously signed d ij and d b.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. The Type is all No. 6. The lines, which are spaced to an even length, measure $4\frac{1}{2}$ inches, and there are 31 to a full page. Without folios or catchwords. Only one 2-line wood-cut initial is used. For a facsimile portion of a page, see Plate L.

After a blank leaf, the work commences on the 2nd recto of sig. a.

The Text begins thus :

¶ The kyng our souereyn lorde henty the seuenth after the conquest by the grace of god kyng of England ⁊ of Fraunce and lorde of Irelande at his parlyamēt holden at westmynstre the seuenth dape of Nouembre in the first yere of his reigne / To thounour of god ⁊ holp chyrche / and for the comen profyte of the royaume / bi thassent of the lordes spirituall ⁊ temporell / and the comens in the sayd parlyamēt assembled / and by auctorite of the sayd parlyamente hath do to be made cerrein statutes ⁊ ordenaunces in maner ⁊ fourme folowynge /

after the maner vñe and fourme . that synes haue ben leuied afore the makynge of this acte . be of like force effecte ⁊ auctorite / as synes soo leuied be or were afore the makynge / of this acte . this act or ony other acte . in this said parliament made or to be made . notwithstanding . EXISTING COPIES.

1. BRITISH MUSEUM. Grenville Library (6002).—Perfect, with a beautiful blank at the beginning. Very clean and free from notes. Purchased by Mr. Grenville, in 1843, from a Bookseller for £30, who discovered it in a volume of old Law Tracts, among which, also, was an unique Machlinia. Measurement, $10\frac{3}{4} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

2. PARIS. Imperial Library.—Perfect.

3. INNER TEMPLE LIBRARY, London.—Perfect, and with both blanks in good preservation. Bound up with a Rouen edition of Littleton's "Tenores." Measurement, $11 \times 7\frac{3}{4}$ inches.

4. EARL SPENCER.—Perfect, slightly stained. Two leaves mended and several transposed. Measurement, $10\frac{1}{2} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches. His Lordship obtained this copy from Mr. Triphook in a volume of old Tracts for £3 3s, but on verifying this as a Caxton made him a present of 50 guineas.

5. A. B. MIDDLETON, Esq.—Imperfect, wanting all after sig. e j. Slightly worm-eaten, and much cropped. Measurement, $8 \times 6\frac{1}{2}$ inches. A few years ago a well-known country Bookseller purchased a library from an old country mansion. Finding among the books a few worthless leaves, as he supposed, of an old legal MS., he put the price of 2s 6d upon them; for this sum they came into the possession of their present owner.

Besides the above there must be somewhere the few leaves from which Dibdin gave his account of the book, no perfect copy having been at that time discovered.

No copy appears to have come under the Auctioneer's hammer.

No. 76.—THE GOUVERNAL OF HEALTH.—THE MEDICINA STOMACHI.
Quarto. Sine ullâ notâ. (1489?)

COLLATION.—The "Gouvernall," A and B 4^m; the "Medicina Stomachi," two unsigned leaves.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—Without title-page. Only one Type, No. 6, is used throughout. The lines, which are of an even length, and measure $2\frac{1}{2}$ inches, excepting B 7 verso, which has 24, have all 23 lines to a page. Wood-cut initials to chapters. Without folios or catchwords.

The Text begins on sig. A j recto,

Explicit medicina stomachi :

MANUSCRIPTS.—Latin : Sloane 3149, 14th Century, agrees with Caxton generally, and ends "Explicit tractat⁹ Barthoēi i suo breuiario de regie sanitat⁹," without the "Medicina." Sloane 1986, written after 1442, as appears from folio 199, agrees generally with Caxton. Sloane 3566, 15th Century, a small volume, 3½ × 2½ inches, same text as before. English : Sloane 989, 15th Century, Caxton's text, but with the following colophon, "This lytel booke compiled a worthi clerke called John de Burdeux for a frende that he had." Sloane 3215, 15th Century, beautifully written, Caxton's text. Harl. 2390, 15th Century ; the text varies considerably from Caxton's, though in no way improved, but the sense is the same. To none of these is the "Medicina Stomachi" attached, manuscript copies of which, however, are very plentiful ; vide Lansdowne 699 ; Harl. 116, headed "The diatory made by the monk of Byry ;" Harl. 4011 ; and Harl. 2251.

REMARKS.—The "Gouernal" was originally written in Latin, and soon after translated into English ; but no trace of the Translator's name is left. The date of the original composition is unknown ; we can only gather from the non-existence of manuscripts of a later date than the latter half of the 14th Century, that it was composed about that period.

The name of the Author or Compiler is doubtful. From Sloane 989 one would say that John de Burdeux wrote it for the good of a "frende," but Sloane 3149 attributes it to another Writer, "Explicit tractatus Bartholomei." John de Burdeux was the Author of several tracts on medicine, and flourished in the latter half of the 14th Century. Bartholomeus was rather a prolific Writer of the 14th and 15th Centuries, but the "Gouvernall" is not found among the works generally attributed to him. Whoever may have been the Author, the work possesses small claims to originality, being a compilation from the medical works of the Arabian and Greek Physicians, and quoting largely from the "Regimen Sanitatis Salernitanum." The "Medicina Stomachi" is contained in most collections of Lydgate's poetry, and in Harl. 116, is directly attributed to him.

Both tracts were reprinted by W. de Worde, sine anno, who repeats all the blunders of the 1st edition. These editions are equally rare, the only copy of the 2nd being in the Public Library, Cambridge. An annotated reprint of Caxton's text was issued privately by the Editor of this work, in 1858. On no other occasion does this interesting treatise, which was the earliest medical book printed in the English language, appear to have passed through the press.

The only EXISTING Copy is in the old library of the Earls of Dysart, at Ham House, Surrey. It is quite clean and free from manuscript disfigurements, except the first page, which is slightly stained. A book-plate, apparently with the initials J.M., intertwined, is inside the cover. Measurement, $8 \times 5\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

NO. 77.—THE HISTORY OF REYNARD THE FOX. Second Edition. Folio.
Sine ullâ notâ. (1489 ?)

COLLATION.—An unsigned sheet of introductory matter; sigs. a b c d e f g h are 4^{aa}; i is a 3^a. No blank leaves. In all 70 leaves.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. The Type throughout is No. 6. The lines, which are fully spaced out, measure $5\frac{1}{2}$ inches, and there are 31 (sometimes 32) to a page. Wood-cut initials are used. On the 1st recto is Caxton's device, underneath which is the following line only:—

¶ This is the table of the hystorie of Reynard the fore /

On the verso commences the table, which ends 7 lines down the 2nd recto, underneath which is,

The preface finishes the page. The 2nd verso is blank. On sig. a, j,

¶ How the kyng of alle bestys sent oute hys maūde mentys that alle bestys sholde come to hys feest and court /

¶ Capitulo

Primo

The conclusion of the text cannot be given, no perfect copy being at present known. For an account of the 1st edition of this celebrated allegory see ante page 87.

The only EXISTING COPY is in the Pepysian Library, Cambridge. It unfortunately wants the last 2 leaves, containing the epilogue of Caxton, and ends on sig. i 4 verso, with these words,

And her wpyth wil I leue fforw hat haue I to wrpte of thys mpydewis I haue pnowh to doo

It is in good condition, but cropped, measuring $9 \times 6\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Pepys's arms on the binding, and his book-plate inside. The wanting leaves are supplied in manuscript of 17th Century (see Vol. I, page 158), of the genuineness of which the Reader can judge for himself. Autograph on 1st page, "John Awdley." Although greatly differing in appearance from the 1st edition, this copy has remained entirely unnoticed as a 2nd edition, until now.

No. 78.—THE HISTORY OF BLANCHARDIN AND EGLANTINE. Folio,
Sine ullâ notâ. (1489 ?)

COLLATION.—Imperfectly known. The introductory matter makes a 3ⁿ, signed i, ii, iij, the 6th leaf being blank. A B C D E F G H I K L M are 4ⁿ, and there were probably several other additional signatures.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—Without title. The Type is all No. 6. The lines, which are all of one length, measure $4\frac{1}{2}$ inches, and there are 31 to a full page. Wood-cut initials. Without folios or catchwords.

The Text begins on sig. j recto, with a prologue by Caxton :—

redoubted lady my lady margarete duchesse of Bo-merete/moder vnto our naturel 7 souerayn lord and most

This prologue, which is printed verbatim in Vol. I, page 187, finishes on the verso of the same leaf,

¶ Jopes desirs in thys present lpyf : ¶ And after this short and transporye lpyf . cuerlastyng lpyf in heuen Amen /

The table follows on sig. ij, with a 2-line initial,

¶ He begynneth the table of the victorpus pryncce
Blanchardyn / lone of the noble kyng of frysle

and finishes on the 5th recto, which, however, in the only copy known, is unfortunately, in manuscript. This appears to have been copied from the very rare reprint by Wynken de Worde, the last 4 lines being:—

“How Blanchardin wedded his love the proude | pucelle in amours: And of the grete
ioye that | was made there. and of the Kynge of Fryse deth capl^e liij^e”

The 6th leaf is blank. On sig. A j recto the 1st chapter commences as follows:—

¶ The first chapitre of this present boke conteyneth how Blanchardyn departed out of the court of his fader kynge of fryse / Capitulo primo.

All the text after sig. BB iiij is wanting in the only known copy.

MANUSCRIPTS.—The collections in the British Museum have been searched in vain for a manuscript of this interesting romance. M. Paris describes but one in the Imperial Library, though he states that there are three others. This is No. 6987, and entitled “Blancardine.” Being in verse it was certainly not the original of Caxton’s translation, although the subject is the same.

REMARKS.—The prologue to Caxton’s translation of this romance is fortunately preserved, from which we learn that Margaret, Duchess of Somerset, brought to Caxton the French version of this romance (which she had “long before” purchased of him), with her commands that he should translate it into English. Having made the translation, he presented it to Her Grace, probably as a manuscript, as he says nothing of any command to print it. It was, however, soon after put to press, perhaps at Caxton’s own risk, as a trade speculation. As to the date there are only the typographical particulars to guide us, which, however, all point to about the year 1489.

The only known EXISTING COPY is in the library of Earl Spencer. It is, unfortunately, imperfect, wanting the 5th leaf of the preliminary matter, A 5, B ij, and all after BB iiij. It is in a fair state, and measures $8\frac{1}{2} \times 6\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

One leaf (sig. A iiij) has also been preserved among the Bagford collections in the British Museum (Harl. MS., 5919, fol. 3b), and from this our specimen at Plate LIV has been obtained.

For a facsimile of this see Plate LIV.

MANUSCRIPTS.—Royal 16 G. II (sæc. xv), is a copy of the French text, beautifully written and illuminated. After 7 leaves of poetical introduction the story begins: "Or dist le Conte que du temps du Roy Alexaundre ne fut ouye vne histoire pareille de ceste qui cy apres sensuit Comme Il aduint des quatre filz Aymon." All the 15th-Century libraries of which we have knowledge, contained copies, and in the Imperial Library, Paris, are Nos. 7183 (sæc. xiii), 7186^{1,2} (sæc. xiv), and 7182 (sæc. xv); all in verse, the last containing no fewer than 28,000 lines.

REMARKS.—Manuscripts of this favourite romance, concerning the original of which little appears to be known, mount up to the 13th Century, and references to it are found in manuscripts of a still earlier date; but all these are rythmical romances, and Caxton's translation (if we may give him the credit of it) was evidently made from a French prose text, perhaps that printed at Lyons, about 1480, under the title "Les quatre filz Aymon."

Before the discovery of the volume under review, the earliest printed English text of "The four sons of Aymon" was the 1554 edition of R. Copland, to which was appended the following colophon:—

"¶ Here finishith the hystory of the | noble & valiaunt knyght Reynawde | of Mountawben, and his three bre- |
thern ¶ Imprinted at London, by | Wynken de Worde, the .viij. days of | Maye, and 3^e yere of our lorde .M. C |

CCCC iiii. at the request and com- | mandement of the noble and puis- | saunt erle, the Erle of Oxenforde, | And now Emprinted in the yere of | our Lord. M. CCCCC. | iiii. the | vi daye of Maye, By wylliam Cop- | land, for Thomas Petet."

From Copland's colophon we learn that an edition was issued in 1504 by Wynken de Worde, although, unfortunately, not a single copy is now known to exist. He, of course, reprinted from the text under review; and indeed the first portion of the colophon above quoted, so far as it concerns Wynken de Worde, is quite in Caxton's style, and recalls the numerous instances already noticed, in which Wynken de Worde, by altering the Printer's name and the date, has falsified both typographical and historical truth. That in this case he used Caxton's colophon, with alterations is rendered almost certain when the prologue to Copland's edition is perused. Here we have all the peculiarities of our first Printer's style, and his very diction. So evident is this, that its non-appearance among the writings of Caxton, in the first volume of this work, is to be regretted. That the Reader may judge for himself, the entire prologue from Copland's edition is here given. The quotation is verbatim but not literatim, as Copland's orthography excites no interest.

"As the philosopher in the first book of his metaphysic saith, every man naturally desireth so to connesse things. And therefore have the Clerks and people of great understanding desired and conseile to learned sciences and to know vertues of things. Some by Philosophy, other by Poetry, and other by Histories and Chronicles of things passed. And upon these three they have greatly laboured in such, that thanked be God, by their good diligence and labours they have had great knowledge by innumerable volumes of books which have been made and compiled by great study and pain unto this day. And because that above all things the princes and lordes of high estate and entendement desire to see the histories of the right noble and high virtues of the predecessors, which be digne and worthy of remembrance of perpetual recommendation. Therefore late at the request and commandment of the right noble and virtuous Earl, John Earl of Oxford, my good singular and especial lord, I reduced and translated out of French into our maternal and English tongue the life of one of his predecessors, named Robert Earl of Oxford tofore said with divers and many great miracles, which God showed for him, as well in his life as after his death, as it is showed all along in his said book. And also that my said lord desireth to have other histories of old time passed, of virtuous chivalry, reduced in likewise into our English tongue, he late sent to me a book in French containing the Acts and Faits of War done and made against the great Emperor and King of France, Charlemagne, by the Four Sons of Aymon, which book according to his request I have endeavoured me to accomplish, and to reduce into our English, to my great cost and charges, as in the translating as in emprinting of the same, hoping and not doubting but that his good grace shall reward me in such wise that I shall have cause to pray for his good and prosperous welfare, and beseeching his said noble good grace to pardon me of the rude and this simple work. For according to the copy which he sent to me I have followed as nigh as I can. And whereas any default shall be found, I submit me to the correction of them that understand the chronicle and history, beseeching them to correct it, and amend there as they shall find fault. And I shall pray Almighty God for them that so do to reward them in such wise that, after this short and transitory life, we all may come to everlasting life in heaven. Amen."

John, 13th Earl of Oxford, is described as "a brave, wise, magnanimous, learned, and religious man," and probably extended his patronage to Caxton's successor, W. de Worde.

No manuscript or printed copy of Caxton's Life of Robert, Earl of Oxford, is known.

The only known EXISTING COPY of Caxton's edition is in the library of Earl Spencer. It is imperfect, wanting all before sig. B iij; D 8; and A 8; but is complete at the end. Measurement, 10 × 7½ inches.

REMARKS.—From the fact of the Printer beginning his table for finding the Golden and Dominical Letters at the year 1489, we may safely assume that year to be the date of printing, as to print back years would be useless. The combination of red and black figures, the black form being first printed, and the red form secondly and separately, shows a great advance in workmanship over other books by Caxton.

A Directorium was printed at Antwerp, by Gerard Leeu, in 1488, which may have been the pattern for this. It is in much smaller type, but the arrangement agrees very nearly, and the copy in the Bodleian is covered with notes in English.

Like the 1st edition there is only one EXISTING COPY known of this, which is in the Bodleian Library. It is, with "The Art and Craft to know well to die" by the same Printer, still in the original parchment wrapper, as issued from Caxton's workshop. It is perfect, and in good condition, measuring $10 \times 7\frac{1}{4}$ inches.

A copy was in the Public Library, Cambridge, in Dr. Middleton's time.

No. 81.—ENEYDOS. Folio. Without Printer's Name, Place, or Date.
"Translated by me wylliam Caxton," June 22, 1490.

COLLATION.—Sig. A a 3^a, with the 1st leaf blank; B C D E F G H I K L are 4th, with L 8 blank. In all 86 leaves, of which 2 are blank.

Dr. Dibdin erroneously ascribes only 4 leaves to sig. A.

Note.—Sig. a is very irregular: the 1st leaf, which is blank, is not reckoned in the signatures, the 2nd and 3rd leaves being signed respectively A j and A ij. The 4th leaf, which, to agree with the others, should have been signed A iij, has no signature at all; while the omitted signature, A iij, appears on the 6th or last leaf of the 3^a.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. The Type is all No. 6. The lines are spaced to an even length, and measure $4\frac{1}{2}$ inches. There are 31 lines to a full page. Wood-cut initials of 2, 3, and 6 lines in depth.

After a blank leaf the prologue begins on the 2nd recto, signed A j,

On sig. A 6 recto (the 5th printed leaf, and erroneously signed A iij), the table ends; and, on B j recto, with a 5-line initial in wood, MANUSCRIPTS.—No copy of this work, either in the original French, or in the English translation, can be traced in the chief manuscript collections of England; nor does there appear to be any in the Imperial Library, Paris. In the library of Maurice Johnson, Esq., of Spalding, there was a manuscript entitled "Ci comence listoire de Eneas," which possibly may have been connected with Caxton's translation.

REMARKS.—The account given by Caxton of his undertaking an impression of this romance is very interesting, and is fully described in the prologue, already printed in Vol. I, page 188.

The "lytyl booke in frenshe, named Eneydos," which happened to come under our Printer's notice while sitting in his study surrounded with many divers pamphlets, is a free paraphrase of portions of "The Æneid," by Virgil. Had Gawin Douglas, who, in 1553, issued a Scotch metrical version of "The Æneid," read Caxton's preface, he would have seen that Caxton does not pretend to give a translation of the Latin poem, and might have spared himself the trouble of some hundreds of lines in abuse thereof. The "Eneydos" was issued only as a romance compiled from Virgil's "Æneid" and Boccaccio's "Fall of Princes;" and, with little merit, it seems to have gained little favour, even with the lovers of such compilations, for it never reached a 2nd edition. It would appear, however, that a good sale was expected, and an impression more numerous than usual struck off, as few of Caxton's books are so common as "Eneydos."

No. 82.—THE FIFTEEN OES, AND OTHER PRAYERS. Quarto. Printed by commandment of the Princess Elizabeth, Queen of England, and the Princess Margaret, Mother unto our sovereign lord the King, by their most humble subject and servant William Caxton. Without Place or Date. (1490 ?)

COLLATION.—a b are 4th; c is a 3^d = 22 leaves.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title. The Type is all No. 6. The lines, which are spaced to an even length, measure 3½ inches, and there are 21 to a full page. Without folios or head-lines. Wood-cut initials. A wood-cut border, in four separate pieces, is placed round each page. This border was used later, for an undated but very early edition of “Horæ,” by Wynken de Worde. The wood-engraving of the Crucifixion, which appears upon the verso of the 1st leaf, is represented in Plate XLIX, and has considerable artistic merit. It appears to have been a favourite, having been used at a later period, both by Wynken de Worde and by Pynson, in several publications.

The recto of the first leaf is blank, but the verso is occupied with the wood-cut of the Crucifixion, already noticed.

Upon the 2nd recto (not signed, unless the signature has been cut away in binding) the Text begins with a 5-line initial in wood,

O Ihesu endles swetnes of louping soules / O Ihesu gostly ioye passing ⁊ excedyng all gladnes and desires. O Ihesu helthe ⁊ tendre loue of al repentant sinners that likeli to dwelle as thou saydest thy selfe with the children of men / For that was the cause why thou were incarnate / and made man in the ende of the worlde. Ha-

Fifteen prayers, each of which commences with the letter O, follow, the 15th ending nearly at the bottom of the 8th recto of sig. a. Several devout prayers succeed, partly in Latin and partly in English. On the verso of c iiii, the page ends thus:—

¶ Sequitur oratio de beato rege Henrico

*Alex henricus sis amicus / nob' in augustia
Cuius pce nos a nece / saluemur ppetua lāpas mor' / spes egrot' / ferēs medicaia*

Some prayers follow, and on the verso of c 6 the Text ends thus :

¶ Thiese prayres tofore wretton ben en-prited bi the cōmaūdementes of the mos-te hie ⁊ vertuous pryncesse our liege la-di Elizabeth by the grace of god Quene right hie ⁊ most noble pryncesse Margrete Wyder vnto our souerayn lorde the kyng / ⁊c

¶ By their most humble subget and seruaūt William Caxton

REMARKS.—The fifteen prayers, named from the fact of their all commencing with the letter O, “the fifteen Oes,” are commonly found in the manuscript Horæ of the 15th Century, in their original Latin. They were frequently printed both in that language and in English, Caxton’s version of the latter being possibly the earliest. All these prayers breathe a spirit of earnest devotion, and as an example the following is laid before the Reader.

" O Jhesu heuenly leche haue mynde of thy langour and blewnes of thy woïdes & sorowe that thou suffrest in the heyght of the crosse / when thou were lifte vp fro the erthe / that thou were all to torne in all thy limmes / soo that there was noo limme abydyng in his right ioynte / soo that noo sorowe was like to thynē fro the sole of thy fote to the toppe of thy hede there was no hole place / And yet forgetyng in maner all those greuous paynes / thou preydest deuoutly & charitably to thy fader for thine enmyes sayeng thus / Fader foryeue it theim / for they wyte not what they done / For this blessed charytable mercy that thou shewedest to thyne enmyes. and for mynde of thyse bytter paynes / graunte me / that the mynde of this bytter passion be to me plenar remission & foryeuenes of my sinnis Amen / ¶ Pater noster Aue maria "

Another prayer commences thus :—

" O blessid Jhesu swetnes of hertes and gostli hony of soules. I beseche the for the bytternes of the aysel and galle that thou tasted " &c.

The " Rex Henricus " of the Prayer on ε iiij verso, was Saint Henry, surnamed the Pious and the Lame. He was son of Henry Duke of Bavaria, and was born in the year 972 ; crowned King of Germany, at Mentz, in 1002 ; died 14th July 1024 ; and was canonized by Pope Eugenius III in 1152.

The only EXISTING COPY known is in the British Museum (C. 25. c), and is bound with several tracts printed by Wynken de Worde. It is perfect and in good preservation, although a good deal cropped in the binding. Measurement, $6\frac{1}{8} \times 5$ inches. Purchased in 1851.

A fragment (4 leaves) is in the " Mirroure of the World " at the Baptist College, Bristol.

NO. 83.—THE DICTES AND SAYINGS OF THE PHILOSOPHERS. Third Edition. Folio. Westminster. The year 1477 erroneously reprinted, the real date being about 1490.

COLLATION.—The device and prologue occupy 2 unsigned leaves ; then, A B C D E F G are 4^{ms} ; H and I 3^{ms}, the 6th leaf of I being blank. In all 70 leaves, of which the last is blank. Dr. Dibdin erroneously states " It contains only 66 leaves."

There is no title-page. The only Type used is No. 6. The lines which are fully spaced out measure $4\frac{1}{8}$ inches. There are 30 and 32 lines to a page, but mostly 31. Without folios or catchwords. 2 and 3-line wood-cut initials.

Caxton's device is in the centre of the 1st recto, the prologue commencing on the verso with a 2-line wood initial,

WA Here it is so that euery creature by the suffraunce of our lord god is born and ordeped to be subgette and thral to the stormes of fortune. And so in diuerse and

This finishes halfway down the verso of the 2nd folio,

The verso and final leaf are blank.

REMARKS.—This is another instance of the original date and imprint of a book being reproduced in subsequent editions. All the typographical particulars prove it to have been about 1490 ; and the presence of signatures, printed initials, and evenly spaced lines, give direct testimony against the date 1477, at which time none of these had been adopted at Westminster.

For literary particulars, see the 1st edition, page 82, ante.

Dr. Dibdin erroneously states that this edition “has 84 leaves or signatures eighteen,” and that it is printed in the same types as the 1st edition, having, however, “what Printers call a fatter look.”—Typ. Ant. vol. i, page 108.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. The Type is all No. 6. The lines, which are spaced to an even length, measure $4\frac{1}{8}$ inches, and a full page contains 31. Without folios or catchwords. 2 and 3-line initials in wood.

On the 8th verso is the device, the recto being blank.

REMARKS.—Although this book bears the same dates as the 1st edition, it is very evident from the type, from the device, from the use of a wood-cut to head Chapter II, which had been used shortly before in the "Royal Book," and from many other more minute evidences, that it really was not printed till about 1490.

It would seem that the proper cut for Chapter II, viz. a figure of a Philosopher with the Globe in his hand (Plate XV) having been injured or lost, that the workman chose the first which offered itself, and thus, in this edition, we have the very inappropriate illustration of Christ's transfiguration, as head to the chapter "Why God made and created the World." (See Plate LV).

No. 85.—A BOOK OF DIVERS GHOSTLY MATTERS, CONTAINING:—THE SEVEN POINTS OF TRUE WISDOM, OR OROLOGIUM SAPIENTIÆ; THE SEVEN PROFITS OF TRIBULATION;—THE RULE OF ST. BENET. Quarto. William Caxton, "Emprynted at westmynstre." Without Date. (1490?)

COLLATION.—The "Seven points of True Wisdom" has A B C D E F G H I K A ab all 4^m, or 96 leaves.

The "Seven Profits of Tribulation" has A B C D all 4^m, or 32 leaves.

The "Rule of St. Benet" has a b 4^m and c a 2ⁿ, or 20 leaves.

Total of the 3 tracts, 148 leaves, all printed.

Note.—The signatures to the 3rd tract are unusual, viz., a is signed aa, a ij, aa iij, a iiij; b is signed bb, b ij, b iij, b iiij; c is signed cc, c ij.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—Without title-page. The type throughout is No. 6. The lines, which are spaced to an even length, measure $3\frac{5}{8}$ inches, and 24 make a full page. Without folios or catchwords.

The Text of "The Seven points of True Wisdom" begins on sig. A j :—

MANUSCRIPTS.—Orologium Sapientie. Harl. 4386. 15th Century. "Cy commence le liure qui est dit orloge de sapience . lequel fist frere Jehan de soushaue de l'ordre des freres prescheurs." The text begins, "Salamon en son liure de Sapience ou premier chapitre dit." This treatise is of considerable extent, having 162 leaves. On the last is a metrical piece, headed "Ces vers cy aprez escrips trouuerez les noms de ceulx qui ont fait et fait faire ce liure." These verses, beginning "Ceste doctrine couronee," will be found entire in Les Msc. Franç. vol. iv., page 157, and disclose the date of the original composition, "M. CCC. iiij. xx. et neuf" and the place, "En la ville de Chasteneuf par un frere religieux de la nacion de Lorraine" In Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge, is an English manuscript beginning "The seven poyntes of trew loue and everlasting wysedom drawyn oute of the boke that ys writtyn in Latyn and called Orologium Sapientie."

Of the second tract there are two manuscripts, Royal 17 C. xviii, 15th Century, and Harl. 1706, 15th Century ; they both agree with Caxton's text, but afford no information as to the Author. They both make "six" masters assembled together, and not "seven" as in Caxton.

The third tract of the Rule of St. Benet cannot be found in manuscript. Lansd. 378 is unlike and much longer.

REMARKS.—The quotations above give all that is known of Jehan de Soushavie, or Souaube, as the French copy has it. Bibliographers generally call him Henry de Suso, probably after the example of Echard, in his "Script. ordin. Prædicat." The English version printed by Caxton is correctly described, not as a translation, but as "drawen oute of" a book named Orologium Sapientie. The printed text is not equal in extent to one-half of the original. Was it this induced Caxton to end the tract with "Qui legit emendat, pressorem nor reprehendat ?"—a parody of the phrase often seen in manuscripts "Qui legit emendat scriptorem non reprehendat." Caxton says of the "Rule of St. Benet," which is a translation from the Latin, that he was employed to print it "by desire of certain worshipful persons."

The signatures given by the Printer to these three tracts suggest the probability that they were intended to be issued separately : but as in all the known copies they appear bound together, and as they have hitherto been described under the general head of "Divers Ghostly matters" it has been deemed advisable to retain that arrangement.

NO. 86.—THE ART AND CRAFT TO KNOW WELL TO DIE. Folio. Translated by Caxton in 1490. Without Printer's Name, Place, or Date. (1491?)

COLLATION.—A a 4ⁿ; B a 2ⁿ; then a single leaf improperly signed B iij, which was, probably, followed by a blank. Total 13 printed leaves.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. The only Type used is No. 6. The lines, which measure $4\frac{1}{2}$ inches, are spaced to an even length, and there are 31 to a page. Without catchwords or folios. Several 2 and 3-line initials in wood.

M iij C lxxx x.

MANUSCRIPTS.—Royal 8 B. xvi (sæc xv), in Latin. Royal 17 D vi, and 17 D xviii; Harl. 1706 and 4011; also Bib. Imp., Paris, 7303; these are in English, all bearing the same title, but are very much longer than the work printed by Caxton, and vary considerably in the treatment of the subject.

REMARKS.—The above are manuscripts of the work usually known as "The Art and Craft to live well and die well." This was often printed. A Latin edition was issued by Guy Marchand, at Paris, in 1483, and French editions by Verard, at Paris, and Colard Mansion, at Bruges. From the latter it seems very probable that our Caxton, as he says in the colophon, "abridged" his text.

An English version of the full work was made early in the 16th Century by Andrew Chertsey, and printed by Wynken de Worde in 1506.

No. 87.—THE BOOK OF COURTESY. Quarto. Second Edition. "Emprynted atte westmoster." Without Name or Date. (1491 ?)

COLLATION.—This little piece probably consisted, like Caxton's early editions, of a 4ⁿ and a 3ⁿ, making 14 leaves, all printed—a conclusion gathered from the only fragment known.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—The fragment, from which alone we know that such an edition was printed, consists of two quarto pages only, printed upon one side of a half-sheet, the other side being blank. One of the pages is signed bb, which, as already seen in "The Rule of St. Benet," was used for h j. Here then we have the 1st recto of the outermost sheet of the 2nd signature, and, by folding the half-sheet with the unprinted part inside, we see directly that the opposing page must be the last of that signature, and, in all probability, the last of the tract.

The Type is all No 6, but the appearance of the small device, which was probably never used in Caxton's lifetime, points out a late date for its execution.

The Text on sig. bb recto consists of 3 stanzas in "Balad Royal," with a blank line between each.

The 1st stanza begins,

Redeth his werkys full of plesaunce

The 2nd stanza begins,

Redeth my chyldre redeth his bookes alle

The 3rd stanza begins,

Behold Ocklpe in his translarpon

The next page, bb verso, is blank, as is its fellow page b 6 recto (b being a 3rd). Sig. b 6 verso, the fellow page to bb recto, the last of the signature, and also doubtless the last of the tract, is occupied with some phrases, already described at page 57 ante, where Caxton used them with a precisely similar object, viz., to fill up a blank page. The last lines, underneath which are the imprint and the small device, are as follows:—

a Thraue of thershers a Upeng of ydoners a Lastye of carterys a Hastynges of cookes

¶ Here endeth a lptyll treatyse called the booke of curtelpe or lptyll John.
Enprynted atte welstmoſter.

*The small
"W.C." Device
up-side-down.*

As this edition, like the 1st and 2nd, has 3 verses to the page, it would, although in a somewhat smaller type, take up the same number of leaves. The early editions had a blank leaf at the end, which here we find filled up with the curious epithets noticed above.

The fragment is in the Douce collection at the Bodleian, having apparently been rescued from the cover of a book. Measurement, $6\frac{1}{2} \times 5\frac{1}{4}$ inches. The reversal of the device, and the blank side of the paper, suggest the idea that this fragment was a first proof; although, from the numerous blunders in most of Caxton's pages, it is difficult to believe that corrections were ever made after the matter was once set up.

No. 88.—THE FESTIAL (LIBER FESTIVALIS). Folio. Second Edition.
"Caxton me fieri fecit." Without Place or Date. (1491 ?)

COLLATION.—a b c d e f g h i k l m n o p are 4^{na}, with the 1st leaf of a blank; q has but 1 printed sheet, or 2 leaves; ſ a 4^{na}; ſ a 3^{na}, with device on ſ 6. In all 136 leaves, of which 1 is blank.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. The Type consists of two sizes, Nos. 6 and 7, the latter being that in which Wynken de Worde printed many of his early books. The lines are in double column, and measure only 2½ inches. They are spaced to an even length, and there are 33 to a column. Without folios or catchwords. Plain initials, cut in wood, of the depth of 2, 3, or 5 lines, are used. There is a small rude wood-cut on sig. f 6 verso.

Commencing with a blank leaf, the prologue follows, in double column, on sig. a ij, the Text beginning—

¶ The helpe and grace of al-myghty god thurgh the beſeechynge of his bleſſed moder ſaynt mari be wyth vs at our begynnynge this dape is called the rather by the helpe of his bleſſid moder mary ⁊ his holp ſpou-

 tes. Amen

The Text ends on the 5th verso of sig. ſ, three-fourths of the way down the 2nd column,

Caxton me fieri fecit

The next recto is a blank page, the verso having the large device.

REMARKS.—From the use of No. 7 Type, which was Wynken de Worde's, it is very probable that this book was printed by him immediately after his master's death. This edition too is not an exact reprint of Caxton's, issued in 1483. Every Festival has the prefix "Gode men and wymmen," or "Good frendis," and every tale is preceded by the word "Narracio." Several stories not in the 1st edition have been added, while the Pardon of Corpus Christi, in Latin and English, which follows Trinity Sunday in 1st edition, is here entirely omitted. From this it may be inferred that this edition was printed from manuscript. For comparison an extract from each is appended.

MANUSCRIPTS.—The only manuscript which appears to be in the British Museum is Harl. 6615, 14th Century. It begins "Here ben . . the chapitelys of yis boke folowyng which is clepyd ye chastisyngys of goddys childrē." On the 3rd folio is the text, "Jn drede of almyzty god Relygous syster" &c. It agrees on the whole with Caxton, in design, but is very different in phrase. In wants also the conclusion which appears in the printed edition.

REMARKS.—The use of a title-page, a practice unknown to Caxton—the appearance of Type No. 7—and the adoption of signatures having 3 sheets only—all point to Wynken de Worde, rather than to Caxton, as the Printer of this book, which was probably executed about 1491. The original Writer of the work is unknown, and there seems but little reason for attributing its composition to Caxton: nor has it, as stated by Dr. Dibdin, any connection with "A Treatise of Love."—Typ. Ant., vol. i, pages 356–7.

Underneath this is the small device. The reverse is blank.

REMARKS.—This is evidently an issue from the press of W. de Worde, whose earliest type is seen in the first page, and who was accustomed to make up his books in 3^m instead of 4^m, as was the plan during Caxton's life. The tract does not appear to have been translated till 1493, and may have gone to press the succeeding year: now Caxton died in 1491. The non-occurrence of the small device in any other book attributed to Caxton is another reason for supposing it to be in reality the workmanship of Wynken de Worde, who frequently used this shaped device in his early publications. At a later period he added his own name to the design.

Although not the work of Caxton, "A Treatise of Love" has been included in this chapter, because "A List of Books printed in Type No. 6" would be imperfect without it.

COLLATION.—a is a 4ⁿ; b c d e f g h i k l m n o p are 3^{ms}; q is a 2ⁿ. Total 96 leaves, all printed TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—There is no title-page. The Type for some of the headings is No. 7, the same as that already noticed in "Chastising" and "Festial;" but the Type for the body of the work is a partial re-casting of No. 4*, with many new additions, and on a rather smaller body, being evidently a different fount from any known to have been used by Caxton. For a more full account of these see the chapter on Type No. 4. The pages are in double-column, and have 43 and 44 lines to a page. Full lines measure 2½ inches. Without folios or catchwords.

REMARKS.—This book, like some already mentioned, was in all probability the workmanship of Wynken de Worde, shortly after Caxton's death. This opinion is borne out by the types used, by the signatures being in 3^m instead of 4^m; by very long pages, and by wood-initials, identical with those used in the early books of Wynken de Worde.

St. Katherine of Sienna was canonized in 1461: her life does not appear in the "Golden Legend."

St. Elizabeth of Hungary was canonized in 1235, and her life, with somewhat of additions, is included in the "Golden Legend," but this is a very different text. The Translator from the original, which was in Latin, is unknown.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—Without title-page. The Types are No. 7, and the re-casting of Type No. 4*, noticed in the preceding work, which fount is only known to have been used for these two books. The work is in double column, and the lines, of which there are 44 to a column, measure 2 $\frac{7}{8}$ inches. Without folios or catchwords. Many woodcuts and woodcut initials.

The text begins on the recto of an unsigned leaf, with the large cut of Saints, over which is the following heading, in Type No. 7 :—

REMARKS.—The date, 1493, in the colophon is without doubt correct, although the “C By me William Caxton” would seem to place the printing at latest in 1491. This is only another instance of the utter disregard of accuracy by Wynken de Worde, who has here reprinted Caxton's colophon, with the date only altered, and thus caused what might have been a puzzling anomaly. For a description of Caxton's editions of the “Golden Legend” see ante pages 151 and 182.

No. 94.—THE SIEGE OF RHODES. Folio. Sine ullâ notâ.

COLLATION.—Four unsigned 3rd, or 24 leaves all printed.

TYPOGRAPHICAL PARTICULARS.—Without title of any sort. The type is very rude and uneven, being a different fount to that used for the "St. Katherine" and "Golden Legend" just noticed. Some of the letters are the same as Caxton's No. 4* but many rude additions have been made. There is a space between each line, probably made by the use of "reglets," the unevenness of which is very apparent. The lines are spaced to an even length, and there are 26 to a page, except the 1st and 2nd which have, respectively, 30 and 31. They measure in length $4\frac{1}{2}$ inches, the depth of 26 lines varying from 7 to $7\frac{1}{8}$ inches. Without signatures, folios, catchwords, or printed initials.

On the 1st recto is a prologue, beginning, with space for a 5-line initial, without director,

APOCRYPHAL WORKS.

BARTHOLOMEUS DE PROPRIETATIBUS RERUM.

This work is supposed to have been printed by Caxton, at Cologne, on the strength of a statement by Wynken de Worde. As, however, this Printer has perpetrated the most curious contradictions and mis-statements in many of his prologues and colophons, it seems more than probable that he blundered here also, as no connection whatever can be traced between the typographical customs of Caxton and those of the Cologne school; nor does any copy of "Bartholomeus" exist which can, with any show of reason, be attributed to Caxton's Press.

For further remarks on this subject see Vol. I, page 102.

THE METAMORPHOSES OF OVID.

In the Pepysian library, Cambridge (2124) is an English manuscript of the 15th Century, not improbably Caxton's Autograph, and consisting of the Tenth, Eleventh, Twelfth, Thirteenth, Fourteenth, and Fifteenth Books of Ovid's Metamorphoses. Each book in the manuscript begins with a red-ink title, the first being :—

"Here followeth the | xth booke of Ouyde · | wherof the first fa | ble is of the mari | age of Orpheus | and Erudice his lo | ue. Cap° pm°."

For an imitation of this paragraph see Dibdin's Typ. Ant., vol. i, page 14. At the end of the volume is the following colophon :—

"Translated and fynysshed by me William Caxton at Westmestre the xxij day of Apryll / the yere of our lord m . iiij° iiijth And the xx yere of the Regne of kyng Edward the fourth. "

Now Caxton, from what we know of his disposition, would never have begun a translation in the middle of a book. He therefore, no doubt, translated the former nine books also. But all Caxton's translations, and especially in the busy time of 1480, were made for the Press. There seems, therefore, good reason to believe that the Metamorphoses were printed also by Caxton, although unfortunately no fragment of such a work is at present known.

It would be an interesting task to examine this English translation of Caxton's, with the view of determining whether our Printer here, as in the case of "Eneydos," used a French version of the original Latin of Ovid. Such an undertaking, unless by a Fellow of Magdalene College, is, however, impossible, as the restrictive arrangements of the Pepysian library render access to its manifold treasures difficult, and examination almost impossible.

THE LIFE AND MIRACLES OF ROBERT EARL OF OXFORD.

In the preface to "The four Sons of Aymon" Caxton says, "Therefore late at the request and commandment of the right noble and virtuous Earl, John, Earl of Oxford, my good singular and especial lord I reduced and translated out of French into our maternal and English tongue the life of one of his predecessors named Robert Earl of Oxford tofore said, with divers and many great miracles which god showed for him as well in his life as after his death as is showed all along in his said book."

Having translated this Life, it is not improbable that Caxton also printed it.

A BALLAD.

The "small fragment of an unknown work," preserved among some old ballads in the British Museum (643. m.) and described by Sir Henry Ellis, and Dr. Dibdin in Typ. Ant., vol. i, page 359, is a portion of the "Cook's Tale," from Caxton's 1st edition of Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales."

Several works, such as "STATUTA," (probably Machlinia's) "LYNDEWODE'S CONSTITUTIONES," "THE LUCIDARY," "AN ACCIDENCE," and others, have been by various Writers included among the books issued by Caxton, but in all cases erroneously.

10. THE HAGUE. Museum Meermano-Westreenianum.—Perfect, but much doctored, with a few leaves at the beginning mounted. Measurement, $10\frac{3}{4} \times 7\frac{3}{4}$ inches.

No. 27.—FRATRIS LAURENTII GULIELMI DE SAONA, ETC.

In "EXISTING COPIES," page 76, read as follows :—

2. SWEDEN. UPSALA. University Library.—Perfect, and in excellent condition. Measurement, $11\frac{1}{2} \times 8$ inches. The paper, like that in Corpus Christi College, is very stout and firm. There are folios and signatures throughout in manuscript of the 15th Century. On the bottom of the 1st leaf is written, "Collegij Bruns. S.J." The volume was originally chained to a desk in the Jesuit College of Braunsberg, but the chain as well as the clasps have long disappeared. On the capture of Braunsberg by Gustavus the Great, in 1626, the Collegiate library was transported by the Swedish King to Upsala, and presented to the University.

19. PARIS. Mazarine Library.—An imperfect copy, measuring $14\frac{1}{2} \times 10\frac{5}{8}$ inches. The following curious communication to Mr. Beedham concerning this copy is from the pen of M. Philarète Chasles, the Conservator of the library:—

"Il y a dix ans, faisant balayer une vieille armoire de la Bibliothèque Mazarine, dont je suis conservateur, j'y découvris par terre sous des débris de vieux linge et du rubbish, un gros volume sans couverture, et sans aucun titre, que l'on avait mis là pour allumer le feu des bibliothécaires. Telle était, avant la révolution, la négligence avec laquelle les administrations littéraires étaient tenues, que ce Volume-Pariah, ainsi mis aux Invalides depuis 60 ans, et qui avait sans doute fait partie des premières acquisitions de Mazarin, était un fort beau Caxton."

20. ABERDEEN. King's College.—Imperfect.
21. LINCOLN. Cathedral Library.—Very imperfect, wanting all before sig. h 6, several leaves in the middle, and three at the end. Measurement, $12\frac{3}{4} \times 8\frac{3}{4}$ inches.

Measurement, $12\frac{3}{4} \times 8\frac{3}{4}$ inches.

NO. 56.—THE ORDER OF CHIVALRY.

Add to "REMARKS," page 161.

The following contribution is from the pen of a well-known Bibliographer.

"This volume was described by Lewis in 1737; by Oldys in 1738; by Ames in 1749; by Herbert in 1785; and by Dibdin in 1810. The description given by Dibdin extends to twenty pages. It teems with error.

"What is more remarkable than the Gothic Chivalry! Such is the exclamation of a learned Prelate, and we have a genuine picture of chivalry in this volume—which also contains one of the most animated specimens of the composition of Caxton.

"On the date of the original work we have no information, nor on its authorship. An ancient French manuscript of it is preserved in the British Museum, and there seems to be one at Toulouse. The editions are soon numbered. It was printed as the work of Symphorien Champier, at Lyon, in 1510; and an ancient Scottish version of it, by Sir Gilbert Hay, was printed for the Abbotsford Club, under the able editorship of Beriah Botfield, esquire, in 1847. The edition of 1510 was re-printed at Lyon, as the work of Champier, in 1859. Now, when Caxton printed his translation of it, Champier was a mere child!

"I return to Dibdin. He describes the Book of the Order of Chivalry as a translation of the Ordene de Chevalerie. It is a distinct work. He describes the Ordene de Chevalerie as the production of Hue de Tabarie. The ascription is destitute of authority. It was an assumption on the part of Barbazan. Marin avoided it."—BOLTON CORNEY.

It is very interesting to find that a copy of Caxton's book had penetrated to the Zetland Isles so early as 1506, as appears from the following extract from the Testament of Sir David Synclar, of Swynbrocht, Knight:—"Item. I lelie to Sir Magnus Harrode twa nobillis, and the Buk of Gud Maneris." The will is dated from Tyngwall, anciently the chief place in the Zetland Islands. 4. REV. T. CORSER.—Imperfect, wanting the last 3 leaves. From Heber's sale. Measurement, 10×7 inches.

A LIST OF "CAXTONS"

SOMETIME

IN LIBRARIES NOW DISPERSED.

NOTICE.—The Author will be much obliged by any Corrections or Additions to the following Lists, which, notwithstanding a research through hundreds of Sale-Catalogues, he feels must to a great extent be still imperfect. Address—Mr. Blades, 11, Abchurch Lane, London.

*The letter (i.) placed after a book means that it is described in the Sale-Catalogue as "imperfect."
(i. 10 l.)=imperfect to the extent of 10 leaves.

N.B.—It does not follow that the omission of an "i" means "perfect," as imperfections are often unnoticed in Sale-Catalogues.

GOODMAN OLLIT, of Downham, sold the following books in the 16th century, (see ante p. 93).

Tully of Old Age	3 d.
Monkish Chronicles	vj d.

1577.

ROBERT HEDDRINGTON owned a large Library, many of his books being still recognisable from having his name stamped with types upon some part of them, thus:—"Robert Heddrington, his Bookes, 1577." His Library contained

Caton,	Speculum Vite Christi,
Knight of the Tower,	Eneydos,
Golden Legend, 1483,	The Life of St. Catherine.
(2 copies),

SIR WILLIAM KNIGHT PADDY, Physician to James I, bequeathed the following four books to St John's College, Oxford:—

Chaucer, 2nd edition,	Four Sermons,
Troilus, and Cresside,	1st edition.

THOMAS FAIRFAX, Baron of Cameron. Born 1611, died 1671. A great Antiquary. His Autograph is in the "Tully" at St. John's, Cambridge, and "The Recuyell" at Wilton.

1681.

MICHAEL HONTWOOD, Dean of Lincoln, flourished through the greater part of the 17th Century. His Collection of Books, which was very valuable, he presented to the Cathedral Library, Lincoln, having employed Sir Christopher Wren, at a great cost, to build a room to contain it. Of "Caxtons" there were Caton, Chess 2nd edition, Chronicles 2nd edition, Description of

MICHAEL HORTWOOD—continued.

Britain, Dictes 1477, Jason, and Reynard the Fox. Early in this Century, Dr. Dibdin paid a visit to the Library, and induced the Dean and Chapter to part with their "Caxtons" to him, in consideration of a very handsome return of new books. Cheese, Jason, and Reynard went directly into the Library of Earl Spencer, while the remainder formed the gems of a bibliographical advertisement, issued by Dibdin, in 1811, and entitled "The Lincoln Nosegay." James Edwards is said to have obtained, in a similar manner, some old books for new.

1682.

RICHARD SMYTH. Born 1590, died 1675. Secondary to the Poultry Compter. His extensive Library was sold by Rich. Chiswell in 1682, by Public Auction, at the "Swan" in Bartholomew Close. He wrote a Treatise on the Invention of Printing (Sloane MS. 772).

This being one of the earliest instances of the Public Sale of Books, the following title to the Catalogue is quoted as a curious sample:—

"BIBLIOTHECA SMITHIANA sive Catalogus librorum in quavis Facultate Jnigniorum Quos Jn Usum suum et Bibliotheca ornamentum multo Aere Sibi comparavit Vir clarissimus Doctissimq; D. Richardvs Smith, Londinensis. Horum AUCTIO habebitur Londini in Area vulgo dicta Strat St Bartholomews Close, in Angulum eiusdem Septentrionalem Muli die 16. 1682. 1697.

FRANCIS BERNARD, M.D., Chief Physician to James II. Born 1628, died 1697. He owned a very extensive Library, which was sold on his death by Public Auction and realised £1600. (See Birch MSS. 4221.)

GEORGE, EARL OF BERKELEY. Born 1627, died 1698. Presented many books to the Library of Sion College, including—
Chastising of God's Children, | Pilgrimage of the Soul,
Fayts of Arms, | Tully of Old Age.

JOHN MOORE, Bishop of Norwich, and afterwards of ELY. Died 1714. The Library of this Prelate, very rich in black-letter books, contained 30,000 volumes, and upon his death was offered to Lord Oxford for £8000, but being refused was purchased by Geo. I. for £6000, and by him presented to the Public Library of Cambridge, in 1715. It is somewhat remarkable that, with the exception of a Golden Legend, the whole of the Caxtons in that Library are from "Bishop Moore's Closet."

1716.

JOHN BAGFORD, the Antiquary, was born 1675, and died 1716. He wrote a life of Caxton, in which he drew upon his imagination for his facts. His character, by Lewis, is truly painted. "He was a weak, injudicious, inaccurate man, and his papers are good for little, but to mislead people." He collected old books on commission for the Earl Oxford and Bishop Moore. He died, and was buried, in the Charterhouse. The immense collection of 67 large Folio Volumes, now in the British Museum, containing a very great number of Title Pages, Colophons, &c., ought to consign his memory to lasting execration as the mutilator, instead of the preserver, of our Typographical curiosities. He does not seem to have had any Caxtons in his own possession, although fragments of the following books appear in the Bagford Collect., Harl. MS., No. 5919: The Recuyell, Polycricon, Book of Fame, St. Winifred, Pilgrimage, Blanchardin, and Directorium, 2nd edition.

1735-6.

THOMAS HEARNE, the celebrated Antiquary.

Born 1695, died 1735. His Library was sold by Osborne in February 1735-6, but the only Caxton it contained was Dictes, (Lot 1001). He had possessed others, as his autograph attests, and among them was Godfrey, now at Bristol, and Golden Legend, in the Bodleian.

SIR PETER THOMPSON is stated, in 1739, by Ames to have owned Dictes, Eneydos, and Tully. In the Catalogue of his Library, however, as sold on the death of his grandson, by Evans, in 1815, there does not appear to be a single Caxton.

1740.

REV. THOMAS BAKER, A.M., Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. Born 1656, died 1740. Was dispossessed of his Fellowship in 1717, after which he always added to his signature, "Socius ejectus." He owned—

Polycricon (2 copies),		Dictes, 2nd,
Tully of Old Age,		Golden Legend, 1483.

1740.

NATHANIEL CRYNES. Fellow of St. John's College, Oxford, presented to his College—

Chronicles, 2nd,		Purvus et Magnus Catho,
Curia Sapientie,		Pilgrimage,
Description,		Polycricon.

1743.

ROBERT HARLEY, afterwards Earl of Oxford and Earl Mortimer, Lord High Treasurer to Queen Anne, was born in Bow-street, Covent Garden, in December 1661, and died in 1724. He began the celebrated collection of Books and Manuscripts so well known as the "Harleian." His son Robert, Earl of Oxford, devoted nearly his whole life to its increase. On his death the Library descended to his daughter Margaret, Duchess of Portland, and by her and her mother was offered for sale. The Manuscripts were purchased for the Nation for £10,000, but the printed Books were sold to T. Osborne, Bookseller, for £13,000, being £5000 less than the bindings had cost. Osborne employed Dr. Johnson and Oldys to superintend his "Catalogue Bibliothecæ Harleianæ;" and in the course of a few years this magnificent collection became scattered over all the Countries of Europe. The following list includes 56 volumes, being the largest number of Caxtons ever contained in one library.

For many years these appeared scattered through the Catalogues issued by Osborne at the general price of £1 1s for the Folios, and 15s for the Quartos.

In OSBORNE'S Catalogue 1751 was the following item, "Lot 6347. Catalogue of the late Earl of Oxford's Library as it was purchased (being the original), in 16 vols. 4to, with prices prefixed to each book—£10 10s." What has become of this curious lot?

1746.

REV. JOHN LEWIS, of Margate, the first Biographer of our Printer, does not appear to have possessed a single Caxton, if we may infer this from their absence in the Catalogue of his Library, sold by Payne in 1746.

1752.

SIR H. SLOAN, the eminent Physician. Born 1660, died 1752. His Collection was the foundation of the British Museum. Is stated by Ames to have possessed Knight, Paris and Vienne, Royal Book, and Pilgrimage.

RICHARD MEAD, M.D. A distinguished Physician. Born 1673. Vice President of Royal Society 1717. Died 1755. His Library was sold by Mr. Baker in the above year, and partly in 1764. He appears to have owned but two Caxtons.

HON. BRYAN FAIRFAX. One of the Commissioners of His Majesty's Customs. Died 1756, and his Library was advertised for sale by public auction. It was purchased entire, at a valuation, by Mr. Child, the Banker, for £2000, whence it passed by marriage into the Family of the Earls of Jersey, and is now at Osterley. The Catalogue, with the Press-marks and a valuation price to each article, is in the British Museum. (See Add. MSS., No. 11827, and Bib. Dec. Vol. III. 807.)

GEORGE III, King of England, took the greatest interest in the collection and arrangement of his noble Library. In 1821 he died, and eight years afterwards George IV made over the whole collection to the British Museum; a large wing being built for its reception. A very few books were reserved by the King, among which were Le Recueil, Æsop, and the unique parchment copy of Doctrinal. These are now in Her Majesty's Library at Windsor. When at St. James's Palace the Library contained the following 39 Cantons, mostly purchased at the sale of the Libraries of James West and John Ratcliffe:—

Art and Craft,
Æsop,
Boethius (i.)
Canterbury Tales, 1st,
Caton,
Charles,

A LIST OF "CAXTONS"

CONTAINED

IN EXISTING LIBRARIES.

The letter (i.) is placed after those books which are deficient in any of the printed leaves.

(v. i.) is placed after books wanting more than one-fourth of the volume.

The figures after each book show the page in this volume where it is described more particularly.

LIST OF "CAXTONS" CONTAINED IN THE LIBRARIES OF EUROPE AND AMERICA,

The different collections making the Total of the British Museum may be thus divided:—The General Library has 14 perfect and 9 imperfect; the King's Library 21 perfect and 17 imperfect; the Cracherode Library 3 imperfect; the Greuville Library 8 perfect and 5 imperfect.

The greatest number of copies ever brought together is 77, being the number now in the British Museum; but of these 24 are duplicates, leaving the number of works only 53. The Caxtons in Earl Spencer's Library, although numerically less than those of the National Library, make nevertheless a more complete collection, and embrace 56 separate works, or 3 more than the number in the British Museum. Other Libraries come far behind these two. The Public Library, Cambridge, has 38 separate works, a total considerably augmented by the numerous unique pieces of poetry in quarto. The Bodleian has 28 separate works, and the Duke of Devonshire 25.

The Reader who examines this list may well be astonished at the number here given of unique Caxtons. Out of 94 works above enumerated, no less than 33 are known to us by single copies, or by fragments only. The fact is almost incredible even to those most conversant with the rarities of the Westminster Press; and the question naturally arises—If more than one-third of Caxton's issue has been nearly destroyed, how numerous may have been the editions of which we shall never learn the existence? A glance at the titles of the uniques will show that the books most liable to destruction, probably owing in part to their being much used, and in part to the destructiveness of religious sectarianism, are those, directly or indirectly, of an ecclesiastical character—such as “Horæ,” “Psalters,” “Meditacions,” &c. On the other hand there seems no especial reason for the almost total destruction of such works as the romances of “King Arthur,” “The Four Sons of Aymon,” “Blanchardin,” “Charles the Great,” the 2nd edition of “Reynard,” or the various short poems in quarto.
